The Shore Establishment: Consists of commands dealing with the various systems (air, electronic, facilities engineering, ordnance, ship, supply) as well as naval communications; naval intelligence; naval air training; oceanographic; security; naval reserve training and 13 naval district headquarters; Marine Corps Reserve and supporting establishment. Also includes other designated shore activities which are under command or supervision of many of the organizations depicted.

Among major shore activities are 10 shipyards, 39 air stations and facilities, 2 amphibious bases, 2 submarine bases and naval stations and facilities. Under an agreement dated 2 Sept. 1940, the British Government granted leases for naval and air bases in Newfoundland, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, St Lucia, Trinidad, Antigua and British Guiana; but these are not all now active.

Naval appropriations in recent years have been as follows: 1971, $20,907m.; 1972, $24,100m.; 1973, $25,637m.; 1974, $26,900m. (estimate).

The active personnel on duty on 31 June 1973 was 564,534 Navy officers, enlisted men and officer candidates, plus 196,098 Marine Corp officers and men.

The following is a tabulated statement of US vessels existing on 31 Dec.:

AIR FORCE

Secretary of the Air Force: John L. McLucas.

The Department of the Air Force was activated within the Department of Defense on 18 Sept. 1947, coequal with the Army and the Navy under the terms of the National Security Act of 1947. It is headed by a Secretary of the Air Force, assisted by an Under Secretary and 4 Assistant Secretaries (Research and Development, Installation and Logistics, Financial Management, Manpower and Reserve Affairs).

The US Air Force, under the administration of the Department of the Air Force, is commanded by a Chief of Staff, who is a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He is assisted by a Vice Chief of Staff, Assistant Vice Chief of Staff, 5 Deputy Chiefs of Staff and a Comptroller.

The USAF consists of the Regular Air Force, the Air Force Reserve and the Air National Guard. For operational purposes the service is organized into 15 major commands and 9 separate operating agencies. The Aerospace Defense Command is responsible for the air defence of the USA. It is in turn responsible to the North American Air Defense Command (NORAD), a combined command which employs US and Canadian Air Force, and US Army and Navy air defence units for air defence of North America. The Strategic Air Command, equipped with long-range bombers based both in the USA and overseas, and with inter-continental ballistic missiles, is maintained primarily for strategic air operations anywhere on the globe. The Tactical Air Command operates fighters, fighter-bombers, tactical bombers and aircraft for photo-reconnaissance, assault airlift, special operations such as psychological warfare, and search and rescue. The Military Airlift Command provides worldwide airlift for men and supplies, aeromedical, evacuation, audio-visual products, weather services, and search and rescue activities.

The other functional commands, all supporting organizations, are the Air Force Logistics Command, the Air Force Systems Command, the Air Training Command, the Air University, the US Air Force Academy, the Air Force Accounting and Finance Center, the Aeronautical Chart and Information Center, the Air Force Communications Service, the USAF Security Service, Air Force Reserves, Air Force Data Automation Agency, Air Reserve Personnel Center, Headquarters Command, Air Force Audit Agency, Air Force Inspection and Safety Center, US Air Force Military Personnel Center, and Office of Special Investigations. The overseas commands are the Pacific Air Forces, the US Air Forces in Europe, the Alaskan Air Command and the USAF Southern Command. These overseas commands are operationally responsible to joint theatre commands normally headed by an officer of a service with primary interests.

Of the fighter-bomber and interceptor aircraft in service, the F-102 Delta Dagger, F-105 Thunderchief, F-106 Delta Dart, F-111 and F-4 Phantom II fly faster than sound in level flight and can carry a variety of armament, including nuclear weapons. The subsonic A-7 Corsair II is an attack aircraft for non-nuclear warfare. Strategic bombers are the B-52 Stratofortress heavy bomber and the FB-111A 'swing-wing' supersonic bomber. The Strategic Air Command also operates SR-71 long-range supersonic reconnaissance aircraft. Current transport types include the KC-135 Stratotanker jet tanker-transport, C-141 Starlifter, the very large C-5 Galaxy jet transports and the turboprop-powered C-130 Hercules. Intercontinental ballistic missiles in USAF service are Titan II and Minuteman I, II and III.

In mid-1972, the Air Force had more than 1m. military and civilian personnel. Total aircraft strength about 13,480.

The total budget appropriated for the Air Force for the 1973 fiscal year is approximately $23,549m.

AGRICULTURE

Agriculture in the USA is characterized by its ability to adapt to widely varying conditions, and still produce an abundance and variety of agricultural products. From colonial times to about 1920 the major increases in farm production were brought about by adding to the number of farms and the amount of land under cultivation. During this period nearly 320m. acres of virgin forest were converted to crop land or pasture, and extensive areas of grass lands were ploughed. Improvident use of soil and water resources was evident in many areas.

During the next 20 years the number of farms reached a plateau of about 6.5m., and the acreage planted to crops held relatively stable around 330m. acres. The major source of increase in farm output arose from the substitution of power-driven machines for horses and mules. Greater emphasis was placed on development and improvement of land, and the need for conservation of basic agricultural resources was recognized. A successful conservation programme, highly co-ordinated and on a national scale—to prevent further erosion, to restore the native fertility of damaged land and to adjust land uses to production capabilities and needs—has been in operation since early in the 1930s.

Following the Second World War the uptrend in farm output has been greatly accelerated by increased production per acre and per farm animal. These increases are associated with a higher degree of mechanization; greater use of lime and fertilizer; improved varieties, including hybrid maize and grain sorghums; more effective control of insects and disease; improved strains of livestock and poultry; and wider use of good husbandry practices, such as nutritionally balanced feeds, use of superior sites and better housing. During this period land included in farms decreased slowly, crop land harvested declined somewhat more rapidly, but the number of farms declined sharply.

Some significant changes during these transitions are:

All land in farms totalled less than 500m. acres in 1870, rose to a peak of over 1,200m. acres in the 1950s and declined to 1,089m. acres in 1973, even with the addition of the new States of Alaska and Hawaii in 1960.

The number of farms declined from 6.35m. in 1940 to 2,831,000 in 1973, as the acreage size of farm doubled. The average size of farms in 1973 was 385 acres, but ranged from 3 to many thousand acres. In 1969, 162,111 farms (244,328 in 1959) were smaller than 10 acres; 473,465 (813,216), 10-49 acres; 459,942 (657,990), 50-99 acres; 706,973 (998,084), 100-219 acres; 561,154 (660,446), 200-499 acres; and 366,605 (336,439), 500 acres or larger. Nearly 60,000 farms contained at least 2,000 acres in 1969.

Farms operated by owners or part-owners, 1969, were 2,377,237 (87% of all farms), by all tenants, 352,923 (13%). The proportion of farms operated by tenants is declining, and currently is three-tenths of the peak recorded in 1930. The average size of farms in 1969 was 220 acres for full-owners, 820 acres for part-owners and 391 acres for tenants. Farms with white operators numbered 2,642,857, and non-white operators 87,393. A higher proportion of non-white operators were tenants and operated a significantly smaller acreage than white operators.

Farms also vary widely in degree of specialization and output. About 60% of all farms received over half their farm income from a single enterprise, such as dairying, or from a single crop, such as cotton, wheat, tobacco or fruit. In 1970 (with 1960 figures in parentheses) large-scale, highly mechanized farms with sales of agricultural products totalling over $20,000 per farm made up 20% (9%) of all farms and accounted for 74% (51%) of the value of farm products sold. Farms selling between $2,500 and $20,000 worth of products per farm were 39% (45%) of all farms and sold 23% (43%) of all sales. The remaining 41% (46%) of farms sold less than $2,500 worth of products per farm in 1970, 2% (6%) of total sales. Many farms in this lowest sales class are called part-time or part-retirement farms. Operators in every sales category received off-farm income, but operators selling less than $2,500 per year received 51% of the estimated $17,917m. income received by farm families from non-farm sources.

A century ago three-quarters of the total US population was rural, and practically all rural people lived on farms. In April 1971 less than 30% of the population is rural, and the 9.4m. farm residents comprised less than 5% of the total population.

Hired farm workers in 1971 averaged about 1.2m., and farm family workers, including operators, about 3.3m. In 1950 there were nearly 10m. farm workers. At that time each farm worker supplied farm products for 15 people; today, over 48 people.

Cash receipts from farm marketings and government payments (in $1m.):

	Corps	Livestock and livestock products	Government payments	Total
1932	1,996	2,752	—	4,748
1945	9,655	12,008	742	22,405
1950	12,356	16,105	283	28,744
1960	15,208	18,946	702	34,856

1971	22,609	30,454	3,145	56,208

Realized gross farm income (including government payments), in $1m., was 60,057 in 1971, compared with 57,925 in 1970; net income of farm operators, 16,051 (16,834). Farm-mortgage debt, on 1 Jan. 1972, was estimated at $31,353m.; increase in 1971 was about 6%.

US agricultural exports, fiscal year, totalled: 1964-65, $6,097m.; 1965-66, $6,676m.; 1966-67 $6,771m.; 1967-68, $6,311m.; 1968-69, $5,741m.; 1969-70, $6,721m.; 1970-71, $7,758m.; 1971-72, $8,050m.

Total area of farm land under irrigation in 1969 was 39,121,693 acres (257,147 farms); in 1959: 33,162,978 acres and 307,783 farms.

Federal income taxes paid by farm people was $15m. in 1941, $1,365m. in 1948, $1,182m. in 1967 and about $2,250m. in 1971. Total taxes levied on farm real estate in 1971 was $2,682m. ($1,315m. in 1961).

According to census returns and estimates of the Economic Research Service, the acreage and specified values of farms has been as follows (area in 1,000 acres; value in $1,000):

	Farm area ¹	Crop land available for crops	Value, land, bldgs, machinery, livestock	Value of products sold in preceding year

FORESTS AND FORESTRY

In 1970 the US forest lands, including Alaska and Hawaii, capable of producing timber for commercial use, covered 499,697,200 acres (more than one-fifth of the land area), classified as follows: Saw-timber stands, 215,867,400 acres; pole timber stands, 126,693,400 acres; seedling and sapling stands, 131,368,000 acres; non-stocked and other areas, 20,721,600 acres. Ownership of commercial forest land is distributed as follows: Federal government, 107,108,800 acres; state, county and municipal, 29,011,700 acres; privately owned, 363,576,700 acres, including 131,134,900 acres on farms. Of the live saw-timber stand (2,420-77m. bd ft) Douglas fir constitutes 22%; Southern yellow pine, 10%; Western yellow (ponderosa and jeffrey) pine, 8%; other softwoods, 39%; hardwoods, 21%. In 1970 timber cut amounted to 14m. cu. ft compared to net annual growth of about 18-57m. cu. ft. Saw-timber cut amounted to 67-77m. bd ft against an annual growth of 59-92m. bd ft. The net area of the 155 national forests and other areas in USA and Puerto Rico administered by the US Forest Service, including commercial and non-commercial forest land, was on 30 June 1972, 187,101,120 acres.

Fire takes a heavy annual toll in the forest: total area burned over in 1972 was 2,641,166 acres, of which 34% was commercial forest; 1-28m. acres of land are now under organized fire-protection service. The area planted in the year ending 30 June 1972 was 1,680,175 acres, a decrease of 12,764 acres over the previous year.

The two world wars and record levels of industrial production have hastened the depletion of once abundant supplies of metal and US is increasingly an importer. US is wholly or almost wholly dependent upon imports for industrial diamonds, tin, chromite, nickel, strategic-grade mica and long-fibre asbestos; it imports the bulk of its tantalum, platinum, manganese, mercury, cadmium, tungsten, cobalt and flake graphite, and substantial quantities of antimony, bauxite, arsenic, lead, fluorspar, zinc, gypsum, bismuth and copper.

In 1972 precious metals were mined mainly in Idaho, Arizona, Utah, Colorado, Montana and Nevada (in order of combined output of gold and silver). US output of gold (troy oz.). 1930-39, 314,53,370; 1940-49, 24,171,646; 1950-59, 18,817,241; total 1792-1970, 316,620,436. MANUFACTURES

The following table presents general statistics of manufactures as reported at various censuses from 1909 to 1967 and from the Annual Survey of Manufactures for years in which no census was taken. The figures for 1958 to 1969 include data for some establishments previously classified as non-manufacturing. The figures for 1939, but not for earlier years, have been revised to exclude data for establishments classified as non-manufacturing in 1954. The figures for 1909-33 were previously revised by the deduction of data for industries excluded from manufacturing during that period.

The statistics for 1958, 1963 and 1967 relate to all establishments employing 1 or more persons any time during the year: for 1950, 1956-57, 1959-62, 1964-66 and 1968-69 on a representative sample of manufacturing establishments of 1 or more employees; for 1929 through 1939, those reporting products valued at $5,000 or more; and for 1909 and 1919, those reporting products valued at $500 or more. These differences in the minimum size of establishments included in the census affect only very slightly the year-to-year comparability of the figures.

The annual Surveys of Manufactures carry forward the key measures of manufacturing activity which are covered in detail by the Census of Manufactures. The estimate for 1950 is based on reports for approximately 45,000 plants out of a total of more than 260,000 operating manufacturing establishments; those for 1956-57 on about 50,000, and those for 1959-62, 1964-66 and 1968-69 on about 60,000 out of about 300,000. Included are all large plants and representative sample of the much more numerous small plants. The large plants in the surveys account for approximately two-thirds of the total employment in operating manufacturing establishments in the US.

For comparison of broad types of manufacturing, the industries covered by the Census of Manufactures have been divided into 21 general groups according to the Standard Industrial Classification. This was revised in 1967; 1958 figures are not therefore strictly comparable.

Wholesale price index of iron and steel (1967 = 100) was: 1950, 64.6; 1960, 97.2; 1969, 107.2; 1970, 115.2; 1971, 121.8; 1972, 128.4.

Leading producers of pig-iron (including ferro-alloys) in 1972 were: Pennsylvania, 20.84m. net tons; Ohio, 17.14m.; Indiana, 15.33m.; Illinois, 7.2m.

Consumption of ore, 1972, was 134,287,000 net tons, of which blast-furnaces took 102,524,000 tons; steel producing furnaces, 1,964,000 tons, and agglomerating plants, 29,799,000 tons.

The iron and steel industry in 1972 employed 364,074 wage-earners (compared with 499,888 in 1960), who worked an average of 37.3 hours per week (46.6 in peak year 1944) and earned an average of $5.877 per hour (compared with the average of $1.17 during 1942 to 1945): total wages were $4,172m. and total salaries for 114,294 employees was $1,677m.

Apparent per capita US consumption of finished steel products, 1968, was 1,070 lb. (941 lb. in 1967).

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

Established by Act of Congress, 1933, the TVA is a multiple-purpose federal agency which carries out its duties in an area embracing some 41,000 sq. miles, in 125 counties (aggregate population, about 4m.) in the 7 Tennessee River Valley states: Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Alabama, North Carolina, Georgia and Virginia. In addition, 76 counties outside the Valley are served by TVA power distributors. Its 3 directors are appointed by the President, with the consent of the Senate; headquarters are in Knoxville, Tenn. There were 23,446 employees at 30 June 1973.

Under the Act its chief duties are flood control; the maintenance of navigation; generation, transmission and sale of electric power; the development and production of fertilizers and munitions; assistance in forestry development; and related activities in a single unified approach to resource development. There are now 33 major dams and reservoirs (23 built by TVA) controlling the flow of the river. A navigable channel 650 miles long, connecting with the American system of inland waterways, in 1972 carried 28.5m. tons of traffic in iron and steel products, grains, coal, petroleum, chemicals and other products. Flood damages averted by river control exceed $1,056m.

TVA supplies electric power to 160 local distribution systems serving 2m. customers in an area of 80,000 sq. miles. The TVA power system originated with the water-power development of the Tennessee River, but has become predominantly a thermal system as power requirements have outgrown the region's hydro-electric potential. In fiscal year 1973 the TVA system generated 109,000m. kwh.; the same region used 1,500m. kwh. in 1933 before TVA operations began. Installed capacity, 1973, was nearly 23m. kw., with another 16m. kw. under construction or authorized in nuclear, coal-fired, gas-turbine and pumped-storage installations. Residential consumers served by TVA power distributors used an average of 15,080 kwh. in fiscal year 1973 at an average rate of about 1.3 cents per kwh.; US averages were 7,882 kwh. and 2.3 cents.

Another activity is experimentation in the development and manufacture of mineral fertilizers accompanied by programmes designed to encourage proper fertilizer use in all parts of the country. The TVA works closely with other federal agencies, and with state and local authorities in combating soil erosion, improving forest resources, improving agriculture and to the development of local industries based on natural resources. In the depression year, 1933, the average per capita income in the Valley region was $168 compared with the national average of $375; in 1970 the region's per capita income had multiplied 17 times to $2,923 while the national average had increased 10 times to $3,687.

Other TVA activities include participation in the first US large-scale fast breeder reactor demonstration project, demonstration of effective ways of reclaiming strip-mined areas, and development of new and improved methods of controlling air and water pollution. TVA and Commonwealth Edison Company of Chicago, Illinois, in co-operation with the American utility industry and the US Atomic Energy Commission, have agreed to build and operate the first large prototype liquid metal fast breeder reactor in the USA. The demonstration plant will be built on the TVA power system and will provide about 400,000 kw. of capacity at a cost of $700m.

Power operations are financially self-supporting from revenues. In fiscal year 1973 power revenues were $749m. and net income $106m. Power facilities are financed from revenues and the sale of revenue bonds and notes, and TVA is repaying appropriations previously invested in power facilities. In fiscal 1973 TVA paid the US Treasury $20m. as a capital repayment and nearly $54m. in dividends on the remaining appropriation investment, making a total of $1,058m. to date paid to the Treasury from power revenues. Other TVA resource development programmes continue to be financed primarily from appropriations, which amounted to $64.6m. in fiscal year 1973.

NATIONAL INCOME AND PRODUCT

The Bureau of Economic Analysis of the Department of Commerce prepares detailed estimates on the national income and product of the United States. The principal estimates are published monthly in Survey of Current Business; the complete set of national income and production tables are published in the Survey regularly each July, showing data for recent years. The National Income and Product Accounts of the United States, 1925-1965 (1966) contains a complete set of tables from 1929 through 1965. The conceptual framework and statistical methods, underlying the US accounts were described in National Income, 1954. Subsequent limited changes were described in US Income and Output (1958), and in Survey of Current Business (Aug. 1965).

CONSUMER PRICE INDEX

The Department of Labor compiles an index of retail prices of consumer goods and services bought by wage-earners and clerical workers in 56 cities and urban areas ranging in population from 2,500 upward.

Indexes shown below are published on the 1967 = 100 base. The index for 'housing' has several sub-groups; in the table below only that for rent is given.

LABOUR

The American trade unions comprise about 177 national and international unions plus a large number of small independent local or single-firm unions. In 1972 total membership was approximately 20.8m., including 1.5m. Canadian workers affiliated with American unions and 120,000 others outside the USA. The American Federation of Labor (founded 1881 and taking its name in 1886) and the Congress of Industrial Organizations merged into one organization, named the AFL-CIO, in Dec. 1955, representing 16.4m. workers in 1972.

Two railroad unions (1 affiliated with the AFL-CIO and 1 unaffiliated) covering operating staffs embracing engine-drivers, firemen, conductors, switchmen and trainmen, had nearly 286,000 in 1972. Unaffiliated or independent unions, interstate in scope, including those organizing coalminers, teamsters and government employees and railroad workers, had an estimated total membership of about 4.4m. In addition, unaffiliated, professional and state employee associations represent approximately 2.2m. members for collective bargaining purposes.

The Labor-Management Relations (Taft-Hartley) Act, 1947, applicable to industries affecting inter-state commerce, prohibits the closed shop, but permits union shop arrangements except where forbidden by state laws. Statutes regulating, restricting or prohibiting closed shop or other types of union security agreements are in effect in 19 states which ban all types of union security agreements (Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Kansas, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia and Wyoming); a 20th state, Louisiana, has such an act applicable only to agricultural labourers and workers engaged in processing certain agricultural products. Colorado and Wisconsin ban all-union agreements unless a certain percentage of employees have voted for them; in Hawaii an all-union agreement may be entered into unless a majority of employees votes against it. Thirteen states have acts to prevent industrial disputes between public utilities and their employees by means of compulsory arbitration or seizure; however, a number of these laws have been declared unconstitutional in so far as industries in inter-state commerce are concerned. Laws to restrict or regulate picketing or other strike activities have been enacted in over half the states. About one-half of the states also prohibit certain types of strikes, as 'sit down', jurisdictional or sympathy strikes.

Minimum wage laws governing private employers are in operation in 43 jurisdictions: 39 states, the District of Columbia, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands have minimum wage laws and minimum wage rates in effect. Two additional states have wage board laws on their statute books, but no minimum wage rates are in effect; and in a third state, also without rates, the law covers only minors under 18 years of age. As of 1 Jan. 1974, the laws of 36 states and of the 4 jurisdictions cover men, women and, usually, minors, although in 2 of these states minimum wage rates for men have not yet been promulgated; in the remaining 3 states the laws cover only women and minors. The minimum wage rate under federal law is $1.60 per hour for non-farm employees who are engaged in commerce, in the production of goods for commerce or in certain enterprises which are engaged in commerce. For hired farm workers on large farms the minimum wage is $1.30 per hour.

A total of 5,138 strikes and lockouts occurred in 1971, involving 3.28m. workers and 47.59m. idle man-days; the number of idle man-days was 0.26% of the year's total working time of all workers.

There are 3 federal agencies which provide formal machinery for the adjustment of labour disputes: (1) The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, now an independent agency, whose mediation services are available 'in any labor dispute in any industry affecting commerce'. Its aim is to prevent and minimize work stoppages. (2) The National Mediation Board (1934) provides much the same facilities for the railroad and air-transport industries pursuant to the Railway Labor Act. (3) The National Railroad Adjustment Board (1934) acts as a board of final appeal for grievances arising over the interpretation of existing collective agreements under the Railway Labor Act; its decisions are binding upon both sides and enforceable by the courts.

The National Labor Relations Act, as amended by the Labor-Management Relations (Taft-Hartley) Act, 1947 (see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1955, p. 617), was again amended by the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act, 1959. This requires extensive reporting and disclosure of certain financial and administrative practices of labour organizations, employers and labour relations consultants. In addition, certain powers are vested in the Secretary of Labor to prevent abuses in the administration of trusteeships by labour organizations, to provide minimum standards and procedures for the election of union officers and to establish rules prescribing minimum standards for determining the adequacy of union procedures for the removal of officers. Other provisions impose a fiduciary responsibility upon union officers and provide for the exclusion of those convicted of certain named felonies from office for specified periods; more stringently regulate secondary boycotts and banning of 'hot' cargo agreements; put limitations upon organizational and recognition picketing and permit States to assert jurisdiction over labour disputes where the National Labor Relations Board declines to act. The Act also contains a 'Bill of Rights' for union members (enforceable directly by them) dealing with such things as equal rights in the nomination and election of union officers, freedom of speech and assembly subject to reasonable union rules, and safeguards against improper disciplinary action.

The Census of Population (1 April 1970) showed that the total labour force was 82,048,781 (58.2% of those 16 years and over); the armed forces accounted for 1,997,735 and the civilian labour force for 80,051,046, of whom 76,553,599 were employed and 3,497,447—or 4.4%—were unemployed. The following table shows employment by industry group and sex and percentage distribution of the total:

The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimated the average total labour force (including armed forces) during 1972 at 88,991,000, of the civilian labour force (86,542,000), 4.84m. persons (5.9%) were unemployed; 3,472,000 were working in agriculture and 78.23m. in non-agricultural industries. The Bureau estimated that an average of 18.93m. persons were employed in manufacturing, 15,683,000 in trade and 13.29m. in civilian government services.

COMMUNICATIONS

SHIPPING

On 31 Dec. 1972 the US merchant marine included 1,150 sea-going vessels of 1,000 gross tons or over, with aggregate dead-weight tonnage of 17.9m. This included 280 tankers of 8.2m. dead-weight tons.

On 31 Dec. 1972 US merchant ocean-going vessels were employed as follows: Active, 622 of 12.9m. dead-weight tons, of which 276 of 5.1m. tons were in foreign trade, 224 of 5.4m. tons in domestic trade and 122 of 2.2m. tons in other US agency operations. Inactive vessels totalled 528 of 5m. dead-weight tons, of which 25 of 428,000 tons were temporarily inactive; 33 of 547,000 dead-weight tons privately owned were laid up and 470 of 3.9m. tons were in the National Defense reserve fleet. Of the total vessels in the US fleet, 651 of 13.6m. dead-weight tons were privately owned. US exports and imports carried on dry cargo and tanker vessels in the year 1972 totalled 446.7m. long tons, of which 24.6m. long tons or 5.5% were carried in US flag vessels.

ROADS

On 31 Dec. 1971 the total US highway mileage, including rural and urban roads, amounted to 3,758,942 miles, of which, 2,983,072 miles were surfaced roads. The total mileage cited includes 712,785 miles of rural roads under control of the states, 2,256,271 miles of local roads, 196,839 miles of federal park and forest roads, and 593,047 miles of municipal roads and streets. Expenditures for construction and maintenance amounted to $17,432m. in 1971.

By the end of 1971, toll roads, financed by private capital through bond issues and administered by state toll authorities, totalled 4,650 miles (including some under construction) compared with 344 miles in 1940. Additional toll-road programmes contemplated at present will add approximately 1,060 miles to the toll-road network.

Motor vehicles registered in the calendar year 1971 were (Federal Highways Administration) 112,999,125, including 92,799,052 automobiles, 397,583 buses and 19,802,490 trucks.

Road haulage of goods by motor lorries and trucks in 1971 used 19,802,490 vehicles (250,048 in 1916). The industry (1971) employed 8.89m. workers, or 1 out of every 6 employed in the USA.

Inter-city trucks (private and for hire) averaged 430,000m. revenue net ton-miles in 1971. Of the 397,583 buses in service in 1971, 307,285 were school buses (including some church, industrial, etc., buses). The 23,300 buses in inter-city service operated a total of 1,209m. bus-miles and earned a total of $954.1m. in 1971.

There were 54,100 deaths in road accidents in 1971.

RAILWAYS

Railway history in the USA commences in 1828, but the first railway to convey both freight and passengers in regular service (between Baltimore and Ellicott's Mills, Md., 13 miles) dates from 24 May 1830. Mileage rose to 52,922 miles in 1870; to 167,191 miles in 1890, and to a peak of 266,381 miles in 1916, falling thereafter to 261,871 in 1925; 246,739 in 1940 and 222,164 in 1969 (these include some duplication under trackage rights and some mileage operated in Canada by US companies). The ordinary gauge is 4 ft 8½ in. (about 99.6% of total mileage). The USA has about 29% of the world's railway mileage.

The following table, based on the figures of the Interstate Commerce Commission, shows some railway statistics for 4 calendar years:

AVIATION

In civil aviation there were, on 31 Dec. 1972, 750,869 certified pilots (321,413 private) and on 31 Dec. 1971 there were 166,785 registered civil aircraft (133,870 active).

Airports on 31 Dec. 1972: Air carrier, 772; general aviation, 11,633. Of these airports, 10,846 were conventional land-based, while 461 were seaplane bases and 1,098 were heliports.

Statistics from the Civil Aeronautics Board indicate that in 1971 on US flag carriers in scheduled international service there were 17·57m. enplanements with 319·27m. aircraft miles for a total of 29,357·9m. revenue passenger-miles. The non-scheduled airlines had a total of 9,645·91m. revenue passenger-miles internationally. Domestically US scheduled airlines in 1971 had 156·1m. enplanements with a total of 1,917·89m. miles for 106,293·88m. revenue passenger-miles. Non-scheduled airlines in the US recorded 919·73m. revenue passenger-miles in 1971. (A revenue passenger-mile is one paying passenger carried per mile.)

POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS

The telephone business is largely in the hands of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its telephone operating subsidiaries, which together are known as the Bell Telephone System. There are, however, many hundreds of smaller telephone companies having no common ownership affiliation with the Bell companies, but which connect with them for universal service, countrywide and worldwide. The message telegraph and telex services are in the hands of The Western Union Telegraph Company, but it competes with the telephone industry in providing private leased lines.

The number of telephones in service in the USA has increased in the period since the close of the Second World War much more proportionately than has the population. Among principal reasons there may be cited the facts that an increasingly high percentage of families have telephones installed in their homes, and extension phones associated with the main home telephones have become increasingly common. In marked contrast, the number of public telegrams has decreased by more than 80%. Telegrams have lost favour due to shifts in user preference to the air-mail and to the telephone. The telex services of the telegraph company have also found broad acceptance in place of telegrams for business purposes. The following table contains key data items on a comparative basis for the domestic telephone and message telegram services:

International communication services, providing overseas connexions with all parts of the world, are furnished principally by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and three telegraph companies. The old-type telegraph-only-transmission-capability ocean cables have all been abandoned in favour of using telegraph circuits derived from voice channels in the newer telephone ocean cables which have also made inroads on the use of high-frequency radio. More recently, satellite communications facilities have been utilized not only for telephone and telegraph services but for television transmission as well.

International overseas telegrams, inbound to and outbound from the continental US, numbered 15.4m. in 1972 (16.4m. in 1971). This service has tended to decline in volume in recent years. It has lost ground to the air-mail and, in addition, in more recent years to the telex and telephone services. For the US and its possessions the volume of international overseas telephone calls has grown enormously with the availability of the excellent voice-transmission qualities provided in the telephone ocean cables and in the satellite radio relays. Whereas, international telephone calls were 990,000 in 1955, the last year in which there was no cable service available, there were 24.5m. such calls in 1972.

Postal business for the years ended 30 June included the following items:

	1970	1971	1972	1973

² Operating revenue excludes government appropriations, operating reimbursements and other income.

³ Operating expenses are stated net of operating reimbursements and exclude certain costs financed by revenue.

BANKING

On 30 June 1973 there were 14,529 domestic banks doing a general deposit business with the public and having aggregate deposits of $726,200m. Of these, 4,629 with deposits of $364,129m. were national banks operating under charters granted by the federal government; the remaining banks, including trust companies and savings banks, were organized under the laws of the various states. Of the total number, 5,705 were members of the Federal Reserve System, namely, all the 4,629 national banks and 1,076 state banks admitted to membership.

The Federal Reserve System, established under an Act of 1913, comprises the Board of 7 Governors, the 12 regional Federal Reserve Banks with their 24 branches, the Federal Open Market Committee and the Federal Advisory Council. The 7 members of the Board of Governors are appointed by the President by and with the consent of the Senate. Each Governor holds office for 14 years, one Governor's term expiring every 2 years. No two may come from the same Federal Reserve District. The Board supervises the Reserve Banks and the issue and retirement of Federal Reserve notes; it appoints 3 of the 9 directors of each Reserve Bank; it passes on the admission of state banks to the System and has power to correct unsound conditions in State member banks or violations of banking law by them, including, if necessary, disciplinary action to remove officers and directors for unsafe or unsound banking practices or for continuous violations of banking laws; it also authorizes bank branches and approves bank mergers and consolidations; and it has power to control the expansion of bank holding companies and to require divestment of their non-banking interests. The 12 members of the Federal Open Market Committee include the 7 members of the Board of Governors and 5 of the 12 Federal Reserve Bank presidents. The latter serve 1-year terms on the Committee in rotation except for the President of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, who is a permanent member. The Federal Open Market Committee influences credit market conditions, money, and bank credit, by buying or selling US Government securities; and it also supervises System operations in foreign currencies for the purpose of helping to safeguard the value of the dollar in international exchange markets and facilitating co-operation and efficiency in the international monetary system. The Board also influences credit conditions through powers to set member-bank reserve requirements, to approve discount rates at Federal Reserve Banks, and to fix margin requirements on stock-market credit.

The 12 Reserve Banks (one for each district) implement Federal Reserve policies, chiefly through their dealings with member banks, which, although outnumbered by non-member banks, hold about 78% of the country's total commercial banking resources. The Reserve Banks hold bank reserves, advance funds to member banks, issue Federal Reserve notes, which are the principal form of currency in the US, act as fiscal agent for the Government and afford nation-wide cheque-clearing and fund transfer arrangements. They may issue notes, fully secured; discount paper for member banks; increase or reduce the country's supply of reserve funds by buying or selling Government securities and other obligations at the direction of the Federal Open Market Committee. Their capital stock is held by the member banks, but it carries no voting rights except in the election of directors.

Every member bank is required to subscribe to stock in the Reserve Bank of its district in an amount equal to 6% of its paid-up capital and surplus. Only one-half of the par value of the stock is paid in, the other half remaining subject to call by the Board of Governors. However, no call has been made for the second half of the subscription. The reserve balances which member banks must carry with Reserve Banks are based on the volume of their net demand and time deposits. The Board of Governors has the power to alter these requirements within limits. The Board of Governors also has authority to limit the rate of interest payable by member banks on time and savings deposits. Under provisions of the Defense Production Act of 1950 the Board of Governors prescribes regulations under which the Federal Reserve Banks act as fiscal agents of certain Government departments and agencies in guaranteeing loans made by banks and other private financing institutions to finance contracts for the procurement of materials or services which the guaranteeing agencies consider necessary for the national defence.

Under the President's programme to reduce the deficit in the nation's balance of payments, the Board of Governors administers a foreign credit restraint programme for the nation's privately owned financial institutions.

Under the Credit Control Act of 1969 the President is empowered to authorize the Board of Governors to institute selective credit controls when necessary to curb inflation.

Under the provisions of the Truth in Lending Act of 1968 the Board of Governors is required to prescribe regulations to assure a meaningful disclosure by lenders of credit terms so that consumers will be able to compare more readily the various credit terms available and avoid the uninformed use of credit.

The Federal Advisory Council consists of 12 members (one from each district); it meets in Washington four times a year (or oftener) to advise the Board of Governors on general business and financial conditions.

Banks which participate in the federal deposit insurance fund have their deposits insured against loss up to $20,000 for each depositor. The fund is administered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation established in 1933; it obtains resources through annual assessments on participating banks.

All members of the Federal Reserve System are required to insure their deposits through the Corporation, and non-member banks may apply and qualify for insurance. On 30 June 1973, 13,842 commercial banks with deposits of $625,315,709,000 were members of the insurance fund. This insurance also covered 323 mutual savings banks with deposits of $84,167.65m. There were 364 uninsured banks comprising 204 commercial banks and trust companies and 160 mutual savings banks with deposits of $16,716,809,000.

There are also banks which operate solely in the field of agricultural credits under the Farm Credit Administration; Federal Home Loan Banks makes advances to financial associations and institutions upon the security of home mortgages.

CURRENCY

Prior to the banking crisis that occurred early in 1933, the monetary system had been on the gold standard for more than 50 years. An Act of 14 March 1900 required the Secretary of the Treasury to maintain at a parity with gold all forms of money issued by the USA. For a description of these, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1934, p. 491.

The old gold dollar had a par value of 49.32d., or \$4.8666 to the £ sterling; it contained 25.8 grains (or 1.6718 grammes) of gold 0.900 fine. Under existing statutes the Government is still under obligation to maintain parity between gold and all forms of currency. By the Act of 12 May 1933 the President of the USA was given authority to reduce the gold content of the dollar by not more than 50% and by the Gold Reserve Act of 30 Jan. 1934 the minimum reduction which he could make was fixed at 40%; on 31 Jan. 1934 he fixed its value at 59.06%, or $15\frac{5}{8}$ grains of gold 0.900 fine. This was equal to a price for gold of \$35 a fine oz. (old price, \$20.67183). The President's power to alter the gold content of the dollar to 50% of its value, which was extended by Congress in 1937, 1939 and 1941, was not again extended in 1943.

In the Par Value Modification Act 1972, Congress authorized and directed the Secretary of the Treasury to take the steps necessary to establish a new par value of \$1 equals $\frac{1}{38}$ of a fine troy ounce of gold. Pursuant to the statutory directive, the Secretary of the Treasury notified the International Monetary Fund that, effective 8 May 1972, the par value of the dollar would be changed from $\frac{1}{35}$ to $\frac{1}{38}$ of a fine troy ounce of gold. Expressed in terms of gold, the new par value of the dollar is 0.818513 gramme of gold per dollar, or \$38 per fine troy ounce of gold.

Expressed in percentage, the change in the par value of the dollar amounted to a reduction of 7.89% in the former gold content of the dollar. This is the equivalent to an 8.57% increase in the former dollar price of gold.

At the time of the banking crisis in March 1933 gold payments by banks and the Treasury were suspended by the Government, and an embargo was placed on gold exports. Steps were taken to withdraw from circulation all gold coin and gold certificates.

Currency in the USA for many years has comprised several varieties. Prior to May 1933 the legal tender qualities of the classes varied, but in that month all types of currency were made equally legal tender.

Only two of the eight kinds of notes outstanding are now significant: Federal Reserve notes in denominations of $1, $5, $10, $20, $50 and $100; and US notes in denominations of $100. The issue of (a) $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000 Federal Reserve notes; of (b) silver certificates, and of (c) $5 and $2 US notes was discontinued recently, although they are still in general circulation. The following issues were stopped many years ago and are in process of retirement: (1) Federal Reserve Bank notes; (2) National Bank notes; (3) Treasury notes of 1890; (4) fractional currency.

Federal Reserve notes are obligations of the USA and a first lien on the assets of the Federal Reserve Banks through which they are issued. Each of the 12 banks issues them against the security of an equal volume of collateral.

Gold coins (of the old weight and fineness) were $20, $10, $5 and $2½ pieces called double eagles, eagles, half-eagles and quarter-eagles. The old eagle weighed 258 grains or 16.7181 grammes 0.900 fine, and therefore contained 232.2 grains or 15.0463 grammes of fine gold. Except for collector's holdings, these are no longer in circulation. The stock of gold bullion held by the Treasury on 30 June 1972 was 276m. fine oz., valued at $10,490m.; stock of silver bullion was 47.4m. fine oz. (excluding 165m. fine oz. held for defence stockpile). Estimated stock of domestic coin was $7,451m., of which $482m. were standard silver dollars and the remainder silver and other subsidiary coin.

The silver dollar weighs 412.5 grains or 26.7296 grammes 0.900 fine, and contains 371.25 grains or 24.0566 grammes of fine silver. Subsidiary, 0.900 fine, silver coins contain 347.22 grains of fine silver per dollar. These are the half-dollar, quarter-dollar and dime (one-tenth). Minor coins currently issued are the cupro-nickel 5-cent piece and the bronze 1-cent piece. Pursuant to the Coinage Act of 1965, Congress authorized the minting and issuance of new silver clad half-dollars containing 40% silver and cupro-nickel quarter-dollars and dimes containing no silver. In an amendment to the Coinage Act enacted on 31 Dec. 1970, Congress provided that all coins minted thereafter, including dollar and half-dollar coins, be made of cupro-nickel composition. However, a provision in the 1970 law permitted the coining of 150m. dollar coins containing 40% silver. These dollar coins, which bear the likeness of the late President Eisenhower, are sold at premium price to coin collectors.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES

British weights and measures are usually employed, but the old Winchester bushel and wine gallon are used instead of the new or imperial standards: Wine gallon = 0.83268 Imperial gallon; Bushel = 0.9690 Imperial bushel. Instead of the British cwt of 112 lb., one of 100 lb. is used; the short or net ton contains 2,000 lb.; the long or gross ton, 2,240 lb.

BOOKS OF REFERENCE

I. STATISTICAL INFORMATION

Within the federal government of the USA, responsibilities for the collection, compilation, analysis and publication of statistics are decentralized among a number of agencies, with specified responsibilities for general-purpose statistics in particular areas. In addition, most agencies of the Government collect statistical data as a by-product of their administrative or operating responsibilities in specific fields. Responsibility for co-ordinating the decentralized statistical activities rests in the Office of Statistical Standards, Bureau of the Budget, Washington 25, D.C., as a part of the Executive Office of the President. This Office reviews all proposed collections of statistical data to avoid duplication or overlapping; promotes the use of improved statistical techniques; develops standard definitions and classifications so that the data collected by different agencies are comparable; serves as liaison between federal agencies and international organizations and as an information centre on government statistical programmes. The Division does not itself collect or publish statistics.

The major general-purpose statistical agencies and their principal areas of responsibility are:

(1) Bureau of the Census in the Department of Commerce (A. Ross Eckler, Director). Decennial censuses of population and housing and quinquennial censuses of agriculture, manufactures and business; current statistics on population and the labour force, manufacturing activity and commodity production, retail and wholesale trade and services, foreign trade, and state and local government finances and operations.

(2) Bureau of Labor Statistics in the Department of Labor (Geoffrey H. Moore, Commissioner). Current statistics on employment, earnings, man-hours, labour turnover, industrial accidents, work stoppages, wage rates; collective bargaining agreements; construction; industrial productivity; wholesale prices, retail prices and urban consumers' price indexes; income and expenditures of urban families.

(3) Statistical Reporting Service and Economic Research Service in the Department of Agriculture. Statistics on crop and livestock production and inventories; crop forecasts; food processing and food consumption; farm population, labour and wages; farm management; farm ownership values, transfers; taxation and finance; prices farmers pay and receive; farm income; accidents; studies of land and water uses.

(4) National Center for Health Statistics in the Public Health Service, Department of Health, Education and Welfare (Theodore D. Woolsey, Chief). Current statistics on births, deaths, marriages and divorce.

(5) Bureau of Mines in the Department of the Interior (John F. O'Leary, Director). Statistics on production, consumption and stocks of metals and minerals, and on injuries in mineral industries.

Other agencies in which statistics are an important by-product of regulatory or other administrative functions include: Social Security Administration in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare; Internal Revenue Service in the Treasury Department; Federal Power Commission; Federal Trade Commission; Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Among the more important statistical publications of a fairly general nature are:

Statistical Abstract of the United States, published by the Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce. Annual. Important summary statistics on the industrial, social, political and economic organization of the USA, with a representative selection from most of the important statistical publications. Survey of Current Business, published by the Office of Business Economics, Department of Commerce. Monthly. Interpretative text and charts reviewing business trends, etc.; official estimates of national income. Economic Indicators, prepared by the Council of Economic Advisers and published by the Congressional Joint Committee on the Economic Report. Monthly. Tables and charts presenting current data on the total output of the economy; prices; employment and wages; production and business activity; purchasing power; money, banking and federal finance. Monthly Labor Review, published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, Department of Labor. Federal Reserve Bulletin, published by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. Monthly. Current data on money and banking and selected other economic series. Federal Reserve indexes of industrial production, etc.; international financial statistics. Treasury Bulletin, published by the Office of the Secretary, Department of the Treasury. Monthly. Current coverage of federal fiscal statistics; international capital movements. Minerals Yearbook, published by the Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior. Annual. Agricultural Statistics, published by the Department of Agriculture. Annual. Crops and Markets, published by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in the Department of Agriculture. Monthly. Crop report and market statistics. Foreign Agriculture, published by the Office of Foreign Agriculture Service, Department of Agriculture. Monthly. Monthly and Annual. Natality and mortality data tabulated by place of occurrence, with supplemental tables for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands; and tabulated by place of residence.

An annotated bibliography of about 100 periodical statistical publications is included in Statistical Services of the United States Government, a pamphlet issued by the Division of Statistical Standards, Bureau of the Budget, describing the general organization of the statistical system of the USA and the principal types of economic statistics.

STATES AND TERRITORIES

For information as to State and Local Government, see under UNITED STATES, p. 537 and p. 538.

Against the names of the Governors and the Secretaries of State, (D.) stands for Democrat and (R.) for Republican.

Figures for the revenues and expenditures of the various states are those of the Federal Bureau of the Census unless otherwise stated, which takes the original state figures and arranges them on a common pattern so that those of one state can be compared with those of any other.

Official publications of the various states and insular possessions are listed in the Monthly Check-List of State Publications, issued by the Library of Congress since 1910. Their character and contents are discussed in J. K. Wilcox's Manual on the Use of State Publications (1940). Of great importance bibliographically are the publications of the Historical Records Survey and the American Imprints Inventory, which record local archives, official publications and state imprints. These publications supplement those of state historical societies which usually publish journals and monographs on state and local history. An outstanding source of statistical data is the material issued by the various state planning boards and commissions, to which should be added the annual Governmental Finances issued by the US Bureau of the Census.

The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for 4 years.

The state is represented in Congress by 2 senators and 7 representatives. Applicants for registration must take an 'anti-communist oath' and fill out a questionnaire to the satisfaction of the registrars. In 10 of the 67 counties Negroes constitute 50% or more of the population. In the 1972 presidential election Nixon polled 728,701 votes, McGovern 256,923 and Schmitz 11,918.

ALASKA

GOVERNMENT. Discovered in 1741 by Vitus Bering, its first settlement, on Kodiak Island, was in 1784. The area known as Russian America with its capital (1806) at Sitka was ruled by a Russo-American fur company and vaguely claimed as a Russian colony. Alaska was purchased by the United States from Russia under the treaty of 30 March 1867 for $7.2m. It was not organized until 1884, when it became a 'district' governed by the code of the state of Oregon. By Act of Congress approved 24 Aug. 1912 Alaska became an incorporated Territory; its first legislature in 1913 granted votes to women, 7 years in advance of the Constitutional Amendment.

Alaska officially became the 49th state of the Union on 3 Jan. 1959. It has the largest area of any state, being more than twice the size of Texas.

An important provision of the Enabling Act is that the state has the right to select 103.55m. acres of vacant and unappropriated public lands in order to establish 'a tax basis'; it can open these lands to prospectors for minerals, and the state is to derive the principal advantage in all gains resulting from the discovery of minerals. In addition, certain federally administered lands reserved for conservation of fisheries and wild life have been transferred to the state. Special provision is made for federal control of land for defence in areas of high strategic importance.

The constitution of Alaska was adopted by public vote, 24 April 1956. The state legislature consists of a Senate of 20 members (elected for 4 years) and a House of Representatives of 40 members (elected for 2 years). The state sends 2 senators and 1 representative to Congress. The franchise may be exercised by all citizens over 18 years of age.

The capital since 1906 has been at Juneau.

In the 1972 presidential election Nixon polled 55,349 votes, McGovern 32,967 and Schmitz 6,903. There were 98,581 votes cast in the general election.

Governor: William A. Egan (D.), 1970-74 ($40,000).

Lieut.-Governor: H. A. Boucher (D.) ($36,000).

AREA AND POPULATION. The gross area (land and water) is 586,400 sq. miles: the land area is 571,065 sq. miles, of which 98.8% was in federal ownership in 1961. Census population, 1 April 1970, was 302,173, including military personnel, an increase of 33.6% over 1960. Estimate (1973) 330,365. Births, 1970, were 7,406 (24.5 per 1,000 population); deaths, 1,443 (4.8); infant deaths, 164 (22.1 per 1,000 live births); marriages, 3,370 (11.2); divorces, 1,516 (5.2).

Census population: 1880, 33,426; 1900, 63,592; 1910, 64,356; 1940, 72,526; 1950, 128,643; 1960, 226,167; 1970, 302,173.

The white population in 1970 numbered 236,767 (163,258 males and 137,124 females); Indians, Aleuts, Eskimos and others, 54,704; Negroes, 8,911.

The largest town is Anchorage, which had a 1970 census population of 48,029; other towns are Fairbanks, 14,771; Ketchikan, 6,994; Juneau, capital, 6,050. Metropolitan area populations (1970), Anchorage, 124,542; Fairbanks, 45,864; Ketchikan, 6,994. There are 11 major incorporated boroughs. The total assessed valuation of incorporated and non-incorporated areas was $2,321.2m. in 1972. There were 12 home-rule cities, 9 first-class cities and about 80 second-class cities in Jan. 1973.

RELIGION. In Alaska are many religious missions representing the Russian Orthodox, Roman Catholic, Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Methodist and other denominations.

EDUCATION. During 1972-73 there were 123 rural schools (7,385 pupils), 29 incorporated district schools (64,555), 6 military-base schools (9,341), 21 private and denominational schools (1,494). The Bureau of Indian Affairs schools had 5,721 pupils attending schools in the state. The University of Alaska (founded in 1922) had 3,158 students on the main campus and 7,606 in community colleges. Alaska Methodist University had 845 students and Sheldon Jackson Junior College 254 students.

WELFARE. Old-age assistance was established under the Federal Social Security Act; in 1972 aid to dependent children funds covered a monthly average of 11,128 persons; dependent children received an average of $91 per month; adult public assistance (including old age assistance, aid to the blind and to the disabled) was given to a monthly average of 3,387 persons receiving on average $144 per month.

In 1972 there were 38 hospitals, with 1,644 beds, recognized by the American Hospital Association; there were 2 mental hospitals with 344 beds. There were 2 mental clinics.

Alaska is the only state where women, by legislative Act, are guaranteed equal pay for equal work.

There is no death penalty in Alaska.

FINANCE. General revenue for the year ended 30 June 1973 (Alaska Department of Revenue figures) was $385.9m. ($109.9m. from taxation, $148.3m. from federal sources). General expenditure was $490m. (including $153.4m. for education, $40m. for transport and $71.5m. for health and social services).

Net bonded debt on 30 June 1973 was $274m.

Per capita income (1972) was $5,141.

AGRICULTURE. In some parts of the state the climate during the brief spring and summer (about 100 days in major areas and 152 days in the south-eastern coastal area) is suitable for agricultural operations, thanks to the long hours of sunlight, but Alaska is a food-importing area. In 1964, 1,959,440 acres were classified as agriculture land, 90% of this was unimproved pasture primarily government leases for grazing of sheep and beef cattle in south-west Alaska. In 1967, 17,425 acres, less than 1% of total was actual land from which crops were harvested. Deeded or privately owned lands were estimated at 62,000 acres. In 1969 there were 310 farms (382 in 1964) with a total cultivated acreage of 16,895. Total value of land and buildings in 1960 was $15,826,500. In 1960 there were 750 horses. In 1969 there were 3,000 milch cows, 1,100 hogs and 27,000 sheep and lambs; tractors (1960) numbered 607. Farm production in 1972 (value to farmers): Milk, $2.04m.; eggs, $526,000; silage, $367,000; potatoes, $693,000; hay, $1.16m; beef, $398,000. Total, $5.7m.

There were about 31,000 reindeer in western Alaska in 1969, owned by individual Eskimo herders except for 750 at Nome owned by the government.

FORESTRY. In south-eastern Alaska timber fringes the shore of the mainland and all the islands extending inland to a depth of 5 miles. The state's enormous forests could produce an estimated annual sustained yield of 1,500m. bd ft of lumber, nearly three times Alaska's record 1969 cut. Alaska has 2 national forests: the Tongass of 16.8m. acres and the Chugach of 4.81m. acres. A total of 625.5m. bd ft was cut from national forests in 1972. The value of timber products (1972) amounted to $112.3m. Alaska has 2 large pulp-mills at Ketchikan and Sitka. A third mill is planned for the Juneau area which will have a capacity of 550 tons daily.

FISHERIES. The catch for 1971 was 471m. lb. of fish and shellfish having a wholesale market value of $198.6m. This compares with 384.4m. lb. in 1969 with a value of $144.2m. Salmon remains the highest per unit value species, with a catch in 1971 of 251.7m. lb. valued at $132.5m.

MINING. Commercial production of crude petroleum began in 1959 and by 1961 had become the most important mineral by value. Production: 1961, 6,327,000 bbls (of 42 gallons); 1965, 11m. bbls; 1972, 73.5m. bbls, value $237.3m. Oil comes from the Swanson River field and several Cook Inlet fields. Other minerals (1972): Natural gas, 125.5m. cu. ft, value $18.5m.; sand and gravel, 14.2m. short tons, value $15.2m.; gold, 8,639 troy oz., value $506,000. Total value of mineral production, 1972, $286m. Alaska receives 90% of all royalties (12.5%) from oil, gas and coal production on federal lands and the full 12.5% royalty for oil and gas production in state lands (coal royalties are being negotiated). Direct revenue to the state from the petroleum industry was $47.5m. in 1971. In 1969, the state conducted a major competitive lease sale for the Arctic coastal region where reserves are estimated to be as large as 50,000m. bbls.

LABOUR. Total civilian labour force (1972) averaged 131,252. Total unemployment, 13,620 (10.4%). Total civilians employed for wage and salary outside agriculture, 104,423.

SHIPPING. Regular shipping services to and from the US are furnished by 2 steamship lines and several barge lines operating out of Seattle and other Pacific coast ports. Two Canadian companies also furnish a regular service from Vancouver, B.C.

A 490-mile ferry system for motor cars and passengers (the 'Marine Highway') operates from Seattle, Washington and Prince Rupert (British Columbia) to Juneau, Haines (for access to the Alaska Highway) and Skagway. A second system extends throughout the south-central region of Alaska linking the Cook Inlet area with Kodiak Island and Prince William Sound.

RAILWAYS. There is a railway of 111 miles from Skagway to the town of Whitehorse, in the Canadian Yukon region. The government-owned Alaska Railroad runs from Seward to Fairbanks, a distance of 471 miles.

ROADS. Alaska's highway and road system, 1971, totalled 7,751 miles, of which 1,716 miles were primary roads connecting the major cities; secondary roads totalled 1,956 miles. Registered motor vehicles, 1972, 199,252.

The Alaska Highway extends 1,523 miles from Dawson Creek, British Columbia, to Fairbanks, Alaska. It was built by the US Army in 1942, at a cost of $138m. The greater portion of it, because it lies in Canada, is maintained by the Canadian Government.

AVIATION. In 1973 the state had about 1,100 airports and other landing areas, of which about 600 were publicly owned. Passengers by air to and from Alaska's international airports Anchorage and Fairbanks (1973) numbered 1·94m.

CONNECTICUT

GOVERNMENT. Connecticut was first settled in 1635 and has been an organized commonwealth since 1637. In 1639 a written constitution was adopted which, it is claimed, was the first in the history of the world formed under the concept of a social compact. This constitution was confirmed by a charter from Charles II in 1662, and replaced in 1818 by a state constitution, framed that year by a constitutional convention.

The 1818 Constitution was revised in June 1953 effective 1 Jan. 1955. On 30 Dec. 1965 a new constitution went into effect, having been framed by a constitutional convention in the summer of 1965 and approved by the voters in Dec. 1965.

The 1965 Constitution provides for 30 to 50 members of the Senate (instead of 24 to 36) and for 125 to 225 members of the House of Representatives, to be elected from assembly districts, rather than 2 or 1 from each town, as in the former constitution. The convention has added a new provision for a 3-day session following each regular or special session, solely to reconsider bills vetoed by the Governor.

The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 36 members and a House of Representatives of 177 members. Members of each House are elected for the term of 2 years (annual salary $6,500 first year, $4,500 second year; expenses $1,000 and travel expenses). Legislative sessions are annual. The Governor and Lieutenant-Governor are elected for 4 years. All citizens (with necessary exceptions and the usual residential requirements) have the right of suffrage.

Connecticut is one of the original 13 states of the Union. The state is represented in Congress by 2 senators and 6 representatives.

In the 1972 presidential election Nixon polled 810,763 votes, McGovern 555,498 and Schmitz 17,239.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

GOVERNMENT. The District of Columbia, organized in 1790, is the seat of the Government of the US, for which the land was ceded by the state of Maryland to the US as a site for the national capital. It was established under Acts of Congress in 1790 and 1791. Congress first met in it in 1800 and federal authority over it became vested in 1801.

Local government, from 1 July 1878 until Aug. 1967, was that of a municipal corporation administered by a board of 3 commissioners, of whom 2 were appointed from civil life by the President, and confirmed by the Senate, for a term of 3 years each. The other commissioner was detailed by the President from the Engineer Corps of the Army. Reorganization Plan No. 3 of 1967 submitted by the President to Congress on 1 June 1967 abolished the Commission form of government and instituted a new Mayor Council form of government. The mayor, with the title of Commissioner, was appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. Appointments were for 4 years. The 9-member city council was also appointed by the President. On 24 Dec. 1973 the appointed officers were replaced by elected officers. Congress alone enacts legislation and appropriates money for the municipal expenses.

The 23rd amendment to the federal constitution (1961) conferred the right to vote in national elections; in the 1972 presidential election Nixon polled 35,214 votes, McGovern 127,628 and Schmitz 815.

HAWAII

GOVERNMENT. The Hawaiian Islands, formerly known as the Sandwich Islands, were discovered by Capt. James Cook in Aug. 1778. The islands formed during the greater part of the 19th century an independent kingdom, but in 1893 the reigning Queen, Liliuokalani (died 11 Nov. 1917), was deposed and a provisional government formed; in 1894 a Republic was proclaimed, and in accordance with the request of the people of Hawaii expressed through the Legislature of the Republic, and a resolution of the US Congress of 6 July 1898 (signed 7 July by President McKinley), the islands were on 12 Aug. 1898 formally annexed to the US. On 14 June 1900 the islands were constituted as a Territory of Hawaii.

Statehood was granted to Hawaii on 11 and 12 March 1959. The constitution took effect on 21 Aug. 1959.

The Legislature consists of a Senate of 25 members elected for 4 years, and a House of Representatives of 51 members elected for 2 years. The constitution provides for annual meetings of the legislature with 60-day regular sessions. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for 4 years. The registered voters, 1970, numbered 291,681.

The state sends to Congress 2 senators and 2 representatives.

In the 1972 presidential election Nixon polled 168,865 votes, McGovern 101,409.

Governor: John A. Burns (D.), 1971-74 ($42,000).

Lieut.-Governor: George P. Ariyoshi (D.), 1971-74 ($35,700).

There are more than 20 islands in the group, of which 7 are inhabited. The land and inland water area of the state is 6,450 sq. miles, with census population, 1 April 1970, of 769,913, an increase of 137,141 or 21.7% since 1960; density was 119.8 per sq. mile.

MAINE

GOVERNMENT. After a first attempt in 1607, Maine was settled in 1623. From 1652 to 1820 it was part of Massachusetts and was admitted into the Union on 15 March 1820. The constitution of 1820 is still in force, but it has been amended 115 times. In 1951 and 1965 the Legislature approved recodifications of the constitution as arranged by the Chief Justice under special authority.

The Legislature consists of the Senate with 32 members and the House of Representatives with 151 members, both Houses being elected simultaneously for 2 years. Apart from these legislators and the Governor (elected for 4 years), no other state officers are elected. An Executive Council of 7, which meets at the call of the Governor, has effective powers of approval or veto in many matters. The Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court give their opinion upon important questions of law and upon solemn occasions when required by the Governor, Council, Senate or House of Representatives. The suffrage is possessed by all citizens, 20 years of age; persons under guardianship for reasons of mental illness have no vote. Indians residing on tribal reservations and otherwise qualified have the vote in all county, state and national elections, but retain the right to elect their own tribal representative to the legislature.

The state sends to Congress 2 senators and 2 representatives.

The capital is Augusta. The state is divided into 16 counties.

MARYLAND

GOVERNMENT. Maryland, first settled in 1634, was one of the 13 original states. The present constitution dates from 1867; it has had 125 amendments. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 43, and a House of Delegates of 142 members, both elected for 4 years. Voters are citizens who have the usual residential qualifications.

Washington, D.C., metropolitan area total more than 1m.; Annapolis (capital), 29,592.

EDUCATION. Education is compulsory from 6 to 16 years of age. In Sept. 1972 the public elementary schools (including kindergartens and secondary schools) had 920,896 pupils. Teachers and principals in the elementary schools numbered 23,277; secondary schools had 23,267 teachers. Average salary of principals and teachers in elementary and secondary schools (1971-72) was $10,881. Current expenditure by local school boards on education, 1971-72, was $930.8m., of which the state's contribution was $311.8m.

In 1972 there were 32 degree-granting 4-year institutions and 20 2-year colleges. The largest two were the University of Maryland system, with 55,351 students (Oct. 1972) and Towson State College with 11,391 students (Oct. 1972).

The Maryland State Department of Health, organized in 1874, was in 1969 made part of the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene which performs its functions through its central office, 23 county health departments and the Baltimore City Health Department. For the financial year 1973 the department's budget was $335,733,174, of which $294,807,371 were general funds and $18,487,530 special funds appropriated by the General Assembly. The balance of the budget, $22,438,273, derives from federal funds.

The programme, which covers inpatient and outpatient hospital services, laboratory services, skilled nursing home care, physician services, pharmacy services, dental services and home health services, cost approximately $130m.

Prisons on 30 June 1973 had 5,693 men and 176 women; the total equalled 138 per 100,000 population, a high rate, which may be explained by the fact that Maryland incarcerates domestic relations law violators in state prisons; state prisons also receive a considerable number of persons committed for misdemeanours by magistrates' courts of the counties as well as from Baltimore's court system.

Since 1930 there have been 68 executions (by lethal gas since 1957; earlier by hanging)—7 whites and 37 Negroes for murder, and 6 whites and 18 Negroes for rape. Last execution was June 1961.

Maryland's prison system has conducted a work-release programme for selected prisoners since 1963. All institutions have academic and vocational training programmes.

In accordance with the 1950 Supreme Court decisions declaring segregation unconstitutional, the University of Maryland and other public and private colleges admitted Negro students in Sept. 1956. Elementary and secondary schools accept the ruling, and gradual integration is under way in all counties under different methods.

The legislative body, styled the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, meets annually, and consists of the Senate with 40 members, elected biennially, and the House of Representatives of 240 members, elected for 2 years in 175 districts, each of which returns 1, 2 or 3 representatives according to the number of legal voters. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for 4 years. The state sends 2 senators and 12 representatives to Congress.

At the 1972 presidential election Nixon polled 1,112,078 votes, McGovern 1,332,540 and Schmitz 2,877.

Electors are all citizens 18 years of age or older, with a 6-months' residence in the Commonwealth.

GOVERNMENT. Mississippi, settled in 1716, was organized as a Territory in 1798 and admitted into the Union on 10 Dec. 1817. In 1804 and in 1812 its boundaries were extended, but in March 1817 a part was taken to form the new Territory of Alabama, leaving the boundaries substantially as at present. The present constitution was adopted in 1890 without ratification by the electorate; it has since had 48 amendments.

NEBRASKA

GOVERNMENT. The Nebraska region was first reached by white men from Mexico under the Spanish general Coronado in 1541. It was ceded by France to Spain in 1763, retroceded to France in 1801, and sold by Napoleon to the US as part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803. Its first settlement was in 1847, and on 30 May 1854 it became a Territory and on 1 March 1867 a state. In 1882 it annexed a small part of Dakota Territory, and in 1908 it received another small tract from South Dakota.

The present constitution was adopted in 1875; it has been amended 164 times. By an amendment adopted in Nov. 1934 Nebraska has a single-chambered legislature (elected for 4 years) of 49 members—the only state in the Union to have one. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for 4 years. Amendments adopted in 1912 and 1920 provide for legislation through the initiative and referendum and permit cities of more than 5,000 inhabitants to frame their own charters. A 'right-to-work' amendment adopted 5 Nov. 1946 makes illegal the 'closed shop' demands of trade unions. Nebraska is represented in Congress by 2 senators and 3 representatives.

GOVERNMENT. New Jersey, first settled in the early 1600s, is one of the 13 original states in the Union. The present constitution, ratified by the voters on 4 Nov. 1947, has been amended 17 times. In 1966 the Constitutional Convention proposed, and the people adopted, a new plan providing for a 40-member Senate and an 80-member General Assembly. This plan, as certified by the Apportionment Commission and modified by the courts, provides for 40 legislative districts, with 1 senator and 2 assemblymen elected for each. Assemblymen serve 2 years, senators 4 years, except those elected at the election following each census, who serve for 2 years. The Governor is elected for 4 years.

NEW MEXICO

GOVERNMENT. The first settlement was established in 1598. Until 1771 New Mexico was the Spanish kings 'Kingdom of New Mexico'. In 1771 it was annexed to the northern provinces of New Spain. When New Spain won its independence in 1821, it took the name of Republic of Mexico and established New Mexico as its northernmost department. When the war between the US and Mexico was concluded on 2 Feb. 1848 New Mexico was recognized as belonging to the US, and on 9 Sept. 1850 it was made a Territory. Part of the Territory was assigned to Texas; later Utah was formed into a separate Territory; in 1861 another part was transferred to Colorado, and in 1863 Arizona was disjoined, leaving to New Mexico its present area. New Mexico became a state in Jan. 1912. The constitution of 1912 is still in force with 73 amendments. The state Legislature, which meets annually, consists of 42 members of the Senate, elected for 4 years, and 70 members of the House of Representatives, elected for 2 years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for 4 years. The state sends to Congress 2 senators and 2 representatives.

NEW YORK STATE

GOVERNMENT. From 1609 to 1664 the region now called New York was claimed by the Dutch; then it came under the rule of the English, who governed the country till the outbreak of the War of Independence. On 20 April 1777 New York adopted a constitution which transformed the colony into an independent state; on 26 July 1788 it ratified the constitution of the US, becoming one of the 13 original states. New York dropped its claim to Vermont after the latter was admitted to the Union in 1791. With the annexation of a small area from Massachusetts in 1853, New York assumed its present boundaries.

The present constitution dates from 1894; a later constitutional convention, 1938, is now legally considered merely to have amended the 1894 constitution, which has now had 93 amendments. The Constitutional Convention of 1967 (4 April through 26 Sept.) was composed of 186 delegates who proposed a new state constitution; however this was rejected by the registered voters on 7 Nov. 1967. The Senate consists of 60 members, and the Assembly of 150 members, both elected every 2 years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for 4 years. The right of suffrage resides in every adult who has been a citizen for 90 days, and has the usual residential qualifications; new voters must establish, by certificates or test, that they have had at least an elementary education.

The state is represented in Congress by 2 senators and 39 representatives.

In the 1972 presidential election Nixon polled 4,192,778 votes, McGovern 2,951,084.

The state capital is Albany. For local government the state is divided into 62 counties, 5 of which constitute the city of New York. New York leads in state parks and recreation areas, covering 242,000 acres in 1973.

Governor: Malcolm Wilson (R.), 1974 ($85,000).

Lieut.-Governor: —. Anderson (R.) ($45,000).

Secretary of State: John P. Lomenzo (R.) ($44,175).

Cities are in 3 classes, the first class having each 175,000 or more inhabitants and the third under 50,000. Each is incorporated by charter, under special legislation. The government of New York City is vested in the mayor (Abraham Beame), elected for 4 years, and a city council, whose president and members are elected for 4 years. The council has a President and 37 members, each elected from a state senatorial district wholly within the city. The mayor appoints all the heads of departments, except the comptroller, who is elected. Each of the 5 city boroughs (Manhattan, Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond) has a president, elected for 4 years. Each of these boroughs is also a county, bearing the same name except Manhattan borough, which, as a county, is called New York, and Brooklyn, which is Kings County.

OKLAHOMA

GOVERNMENT. An unorganized area in the centre of the present state was thrown open to white settlers on 22 April 1889. The Territory of Oklahoma, organized in 1890 to include this area and other sections, was opened to white settlements by runs or lotteries during the next decade. In 1893 the Territory was enlarged by the addition of the Cherokee Outlet, which fixed part of the present northern boundary. On 16 Nov. 1907 Oklahoma was combined with the remaining part of the Indian Territory and admitted as a state with boundaries substantially as now. The present constitution, dating from 1907, provides for amendment by initiative petition and legislative referendum; it has had 79 amendments.

The Legislature consists of a Senate of 48 members, who are elected for 4 years, and a House of Representatives elected for 2 years and consisting of 101 members. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for 4-year terms; the Governor can only be elected for two terms in succession. Electors are (with necessary exceptions) all citizens 18 years or older, with the usual qualifications. Indians are qualified as voters.

The state is represented in Congress by 2 senators and 6 representatives.

In the 1972 presidential election Nixon polled 759,025 votes, McGovern 247,147 and Schmitz 23,728.

The capital is Oklahoma City. The state has 77 counties.

Governor: David Hall (D.), 1971-75 ($35,000).

Lieut.-Governor: George Nigh (D.) ($18,000).

Secretary of State: John Rogers (D.) ($15,000).

On the other hand, small-scale farming also exists; 10,931 farms were of less than 50 acres, and, of the commercial farms, 5,702 sold products valued at less than $2,500.

Soil erosion is serious. The conservation and development of the renewable natural resources of the state has received close attention by local, county and state governments during the past 20 years. All of the land in the state is within the boundaries of one of the 87 soil and water conservation districts. Of the total surface (44.5m. acres), 29m. acres are being operated under a basic conservation plan prepared by the conservation district with assistance from the Soil Conservation Service. Only 23,875 acres of the land received damage from wind erosion in 1972, compared with 92,600 acres in 1971. With improved technology, equipment and crop residue management, farmers are able to control wind erosion. INDUSTRY. Petroleum refining is the chief industry; production, 1971, included 213,606,520 bbls of petrol. Tourism and food processing are growing in importance. In 1972, 2,845 manufacturing establishments had 103,700 production workers.

COMMUNICATIONS. The state, 1 Jan. 1970, maintained 12,090 miles of highway; the counties, 85,718 miles; municipalities, 9,309 miles. In 1972, 419 miles of turnpikes were maintained by the Oklahoma Turnpike Authority and the 68.8-mile Cimarron turnpike was under construction. In 1972 Oklahoma had 5,217 miles of railway. Airports, 1972, numbered 252, of which 120 were publicly owned. Motor car registrations, 1971, 1,987,641. West of the Cascade Range there is a good rainfall and almost every variety of crop common to the temperate zone is grown; east of the Range stock-raising and wheat-growing are the principal industries and irrigation is needed for row crops and fruits. There are numerous irrigation districts and in 1972 some 22,000 farms, covering 2m. acres, used irrigation water.

Oregon farms are decreasing in number and increasing in size. There were, in 1972, 36,000 farms with an acreage of 20.9m. (33.8% of the land area), including 5.3m. acres of total crop land; average farm size in 1972 was 620 acres valued at an average $120,000 per farm (including buildings); commercial farms numbered 20,000.

There are 426 farming corporations in Oregon, 2.5% of all commercial farms. Commercial farms represent just half of all farms in the state. The average corporation farm was 5,982 acres, over 4 times the average commercial farm.

Cash receipts from crops in 1972 amounted to $380.2m., and from livestock and livestock products, $290m. Principal crops are hay, wheat, potatoes, barley, snap beans, ryegrass, strawberries, pears, peppermint, onions.

Livestock, 1 Jan. 1973; Milch cows, 94,000; all cattle, 1,514,000; sheep and lambs, 464,000; swine, 113,000.

Federal and state land for grazing cattle and sheep, 19.2m. acres. In 1972 the wool clip yielded 4.8m. lb. from 621,000 sheep.

FISHERIES. All food and shellfish landings in the calendar year 1972 amounted to 93,053,689 lb., including salmon, 12,189,490 lb.; tuna, 29,233,715 lb.; crabs, 6,762,259 lb.; bottom fish, 22,801,367 lb.; shrimp, 20,731,151 lb.; shad, 640,844 lb.

FORESTRY. Forest products manufacturing ranks as Oregon's leading industry, with saw-mills, plywood, and pulp and paper-mills contributing almost $1,984m., or about 60% of the state's economy. Some 30m. acres of forest land, nearly half the land area of the state, provides recreational areas, watersheds and an annual harvest of about 8,500m. bd ft. Oregon has been the leading lumber producing state since 1938, and its forest-oriented tourist trade is mounting rapidly. The state's over 491,000m. bd ft of sawtimber is capable of sustaining indefinitely a wood-based sector in the economy of about the present size. In Oregon forests stand more than one-fifth of the country's current sawtimber supply. She now supplies nearly one-fourth of the softwood lumber, over half of the plywood and more than one-fourth of the hardboard produced in the US. About 83,200 workers have full-time jobs in this industry that provides annual earnings of nearly $764m.

MINING. Oregon's mineral resources include gold, silver, copper, lead, mercury, chromite, sand and gravel, stone, clays, lime, silica, diatomite, expansive shale, scoria, pumice and uranium. Oregon is the only state producing nickel in the US. Value of mineral products, 1972, was $79.8.

INDUSTRY. During Oct.-Dec. 1972, 4,833 manufacturing establishments reported to the Employment Division, average annual employment, 1972, 184,053 with pay of $1,711,500,612; value added by manufacture (1971), $2,806.6m.

TOURISM. In 1972, 3,661,094 out-of-state cars visited Oregon; the total 1972 income from tourism was estimated to be $588m.

POWER. Four privately owned utilities, 11 municipally owned utilities, 16 co-operatives and 4 utility districts provide electricity in the state. The privately owned companies serve 80% of the electricity. Private utilities generated 9,126,648,000 kwh. of hydro-electric power in 1972.

A federal agency, the Bonneville Power Administration, also markets electric power from 26 federal dams in the Pacific Northwest to 149 public and private utilities and large industrial plants. The dams, which are operated by the Army Corps of Engineers or the Bureau of Reclamation, had on 30 June 1973 a total generating capacity of 10,485,900 kw. Five more dams are under construction, with a total capacity of 6,662,880. The Bonneville transmission network now covers the states of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Western Montana, and parts of California, Nevada, Utah and Wyoming.

COMMUNICATIONS. The state maintains (1973) 7,580 miles of primary and secondary highways, almost all surfaced; counties maintain 28,037 miles, and cities 5,966 miles; there were 48,421 miles in national parks and federal reservations. Registered motor vehicles, 1 Jan. 1973, totalled 1,698,710. The state had (1973) 23 railways with a total mileage of 3,303. There were over 300 airports in 1972.

Portland is a major seaport for large ocean-going vessels and is 101 miles in- and from the mouth of the Columbia River.

In 1973 there were 106 commercial radio stations and 13 educational radio stations. There were 13 commercial television stations and 3 educational television stations.

RHODE ISLAND

GOVERNMENT. The earliest settlers in the region which now forms the state of Rhode Island were colonists from Massachusetts who had been driven forth on account of their non-acceptance of the prevailing religious beliefs. The first of the settlements was made in 1636, settlers of every creed being welcomed. In 1647 a patent was granted for the government of the settlements, and on 8 July 1663 a charter was executed recognizing the settlers as forming a body corporate and politic by the name of the 'English Colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, in New England, in America'. On 29 May 1790 the state accepted the federal constitution and entered the Union as the last of the 13 original states. The present constitution dates from 1843; it has had 36 amendments. The General Assembly consists (1973) of a Senate of 50 members and a House of Representatives of 100 members, both elected for 2 years, as are also the Governor and Lieut.-Governor. WEST VIRGINIA

GOVERNMENT. In 1862, after the state of Virginia had seceded from the Union, the electors of the western portion ratified an ordinance providing for the formation of a new state, which was admitted into the Union by presidential proclamation on 20 June 1863, under the name of West Virginia. Its constitution was adopted by the voters almost unanimously on 26 March 1863; the present one was adopted in 1872; it has had 68 amendments.

The Legislature consists of the Senate of 34 members elected for a term of 4 years, one-half being elected biennially, and the House of Delegates of 100 members, elected biennially. The Governor is elected for 4 years and may succeed himself once. Voters are all citizens (with the usual exceptions) 18 years of age and meeting certain residential requirements.

In the 1972 presidential election Nixon polled 484,964 votes, McGovern 277,435.

The state sends to Congress 2 senators and 4 representatives.

The state capital is Charleston. There are 55 counties.

EDUCATION. Public school education is free for all from 5 to 21 years of age, and school attendance is compulsory for all between the ages of 7 and 16 (school term, 200 days—180–185 days of actual teaching). The public schools are non-sectarian. During school year 1971–72 elementary schools had 8,392 instructional personnel and 236,559 pupils enrolled; secondary schools, 6,397 and 418,388 respectively. Average minimum salary of instructional personnel (1971) was $8,425. Total 1971–72 expenditures for public schools, $334,718,246.

All statutes requiring racial segregation in West Virginia have been eliminated. After a United States Supreme Court decision in June 1967 voided all state and local anti-miscegenation laws, West Virginia's Attorney-General issued a formal opinion that West Virginia's anti-miscegenation law is unconstitutional and invalid. Effective on 1 July 1967, the West Virginia Human Rights Act prohibits discrimination in employment and places of public accommodations based on race, religion, colour, national origin or ancestry. Discrimination in these areas has lessened, but discrimination in housing and real property continues to be a major problem for which legislative remedies have been proposed.

The chemical process industry employed 23,800 workers with an average wage of $191.17.

West Virginia University has pioneered research in wood plastic combinations (WPC). This is a process in which wood is impregnated with a monomer (liquid plastic) and bombarded with gamma-rays to polymerize the plastic; thereby creating a 'super hard wood'.

COMMUNICATIONS. In 1973 the state had 3,798 miles of railway, all operated by diesel or electric trains. There were 46 licensed airports. Total highways, 36,846 miles (state system of rural roads and highways, 31,826 miles; national parks, state parks and forests, 1,068 miles; West Virginia Turnpike, 87 miles). WISCONSIN

GOVERNMENT. Wisconsin was settled in 1670 by French traders and missionaries. Originally a part of New France, it was surrendered to the British in 1763 and in 1783, when ceded to the US, became part of the North-west Territory. It was then contained successively in the Territories of Indiana,

Illinois and Michigan. In 1836 it became part of the Territory of Wisconsin, which also included the present states of Iowa, Minnesota and parts of the Dakotas. It was admitted into the Union with its present boundaries on 29 May 1848. Its constitution, which dates from 1848, has 93 amendments affecting 52 sections. The legislative power is vested in a Senate of 33 members (1973 term: 15 Democrats and 18 Republicans), elected for 4 years, one-half elected alternately, and an Assembly of 99 members (1973 term: 62 Democrats and 37 Republicans) all elected simultaneously for 2 years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for 4 years. All 6 constitutional officers serve 4-year terms.

Wisconsin has universal suffrage for all citizens over 18 years of age; but, as there is no official list of voters, the size of the electorate is unknown; 1,350,189 voted for Governor in 1970. Wisconsin is represented in Congress by 2 senators and 9 representatives.

There were 106,000 farms with a total acreage of 19.7m. acres and an average size of 186 acres in 1973, compared with 142,000 farms with a total acreage of 22.4m. acres and an average of 158 acres in 1959.

Cash income from products sold by Wisconsin farms in 1972 of $1,850m. was the highest on record, and included $1,598m. from livestock and livestock products and $252m. from crops. The volume of all livestock, livestock products and crops harvested in the state in 1972 was the highest on record.

Wisconsin ranked first among the states in 1972 in the number of milch cows, milk production, output of American, both Brick and Munster, Limburger, Italian and Blue Mold cheese. Production of all cheese accounted for 40.9 % of the nation's total. The state also ranked first in bulk sweetened whole milk, bulk skim condensed milk sweetened and unsweetened, as well as powdered whey and malted milk powder. In crops the state ranked first for tons of corn for silage, all hay, green peas for processing and beets for canning. Production of the principal field crops in 1972 included: Corn for grain, 204m. bu.; corn for silage, 10.6m. tons; oats, 74.3m. bu.; all hay, 10.2m. tons. Wisconsin has an estimated 14.9m. acres of forest lands (about 43 % of land area). The production and remanufacture of wood and products is one of the state's most important industries.

MINING. Sand and gravel, stone and zinc are the chief mineral products. Mineral production (except for taconite pellets) in 1972 was valued at $89.4m. This value included $31.3m. for sand and gravel and $29.7m. for stone. Production of zinc ore was valued at $2.4m., and lead ore worth approximately $228,000 was recovered as a by-product. The first taconite plant in Wisconsin began operation in Dec. 1969 and produced 887,000 long tons of iron ore pellets during 1972. Exploration for copper is taking place in northern and southern Wisconsin. Significant deposits have been found in Rusk county.

MANUFACTURING. Wisconsin has much heavy industry, particularly in the Milwaukee area. In 1971 the state ranked twelfth in value added by manufacture; non-electrical machinery was the major industrial group, followed by food processing, transport equipment, paper and products, electrical machinery and fabricated metals. In 1971 manufacturing establishments had a total employment of 479,800 earning $4,227m.; value added by manufacture, $8,476m.

ELECTRICITY. There were, Jan. 1973, 92 hydro-electric power plants (19 of them municipal) operated by public utilities with a total installed capacity of 409,709 kw.; output, 1972, was 2,318,856m. kwh. Fossil fuel and nuclear plants numbered 73 (24 municipal); total installed capacity, 6,060,752 kw.; total output (1972), 25,130,820m. kwh.

TOURISM. The tourist-vacation industry ranks among the first three in economic importance. Approximately $2,000m. is spent annually by tourists, at least 60% of this amount by non-residents. The decline of lumbering and mining in the northern section of the state has increased dependency on the recreation industry. The Vacation and Travel Service of the Department of Natural Resources spends $600,000 annually to promote tourism, and up to $170,000 on tourist information centres.

COMMUNICATIONS. With the opening of the St Lawrence Seaway in 1959, 14 Wisconsin ports became accessible to ocean-going vessels. Green Bay, Kenosha, Manitowoc, Marinette, Milwaukee, Sheboygan, Sturgeon Bay and Superior (one of the world's largest iron-ore and grain ports) have developed foreign waterborne commerce.

On 1 Jan. 1972 the state had 5,882 road-miles of railway. There were, in 1973, 99 publicly operated airports. Twenty-two airports were served by 5 certificated and 4 commuter air carriers. The state had on 1 Jan. 1973, 103,810 miles of highway. 66% of all roads in the state have a bituminous (or similar) surface. There are 11,914 miles of state trunk roads and 19,656 miles of county trunk roads.

COMMONWEALTH OF PUERTO RICO

GOVERNMENT. Puerto Rico, by the treaty of 10 Dec. 1898 (ratified 11 April 1899), was ceded by Spain to the US. The name was changed from Porto Rico to Puerto Rico by an Act of Congress approved 17 May 1932. Its territorial constitution was determined by the 'Organic Act' of Congress (2 March 1917) known as the 'Jones Act', which ruled until 25 July 1952, when the present constitution of the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico was proclaimed. Puerto Rico has representative government, the franchise being restricted to citizens 18 years of age or over, residence (1 year) and such additional qualifications as may be prescribed by the Legislature of Puerto Rico, but no property qualification may be imposed. Women were enfranchised in 1932 (with a literacy test) and fully in 1936. Puerto Ricans do not vote in the US presidential elections, though individuals living on the mainland are free to do so subject to the local electoral laws. The executive power resides in a Governor, elected directly by the people every 4 years. Thirteen heads of departments form the Governor's advisory council, also designated as his Council of Secretaries. The legislative functions are vested in a Senate, composed of 27 members (2 from each of the 8 senatorial districts and 11 senators at large), and the House of Representatives, composed of 51 members (1 from each of the 40 representative districts and 11 elected at large). Puerto Rico sends to Congress a Resident Commissioner to the US, elected by the people for a term of 4 years. But he has no vote in Congress, and under the doctrine of 'no taxation without representation' Puerto Rico is not subject to US taxes, including income tax. Males, however, are subject to conscription.

On 27 Nov. 1953 President Eisenhower sent a message to the General Assembly of the UN stating 'if at any time the Legislative Assembly of Puerto Rico adopts a resolution in favour of more complete or even absolute independence' he 'will immediately thereafter recommend to Congress that such independence be granted'.

For an account of the constitutional developments prior to 1952, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1952, p. 742. The new constitution was drafted by a Puerto Rican Constituent Assembly and approved by the electorate at a referendum on 3 March 1952. It was then submitted to Congress, which struck out Section 20 of Article 11 covering the 'right to work' and the 'right to an adequate standard of living'; the remainder was passed and proclaimed by the Governor on 25 July 1952.

At the election on 6 Nov. 1972 the Popular Democratic Party, headed by Rafael Hernández Colón, polled 609,670 votes (51.2% of the total); the New Progressive Party (advocates of US statehood), headed by Luis A. Ferre, polled 524,039 votes (44% of the total); the Independence Party (full independence by constitutional means), 52,070 (4.4% of the total); Partido Auténtico Soberanista (full independence by constitutional means), 422 votes; Partido Union Puertorriqueña (full independence by constitutional means), 1,608 votes; El Partido del Pueblo, 2,910 votes.

Governor: Rafael Hernández Colón (Popular Democratic Party), 1973-76 ($35,000).

VIRGIN ISLANDS OF THE UNITED STATES

GOVERNMENT. The Virgin Islands of the United States, formerly known as the Danish West Indies, were purchased by the United States from Denmark for $25m. in a treaty ratified by both nations and proclaimed 31 March 1917. Their value was wholly strategic, inasmuch as they commanded the Anegada Passage from the Atlantic Ocean to the Caribbean Sea and the approach to the Panama Canal. Although the inhabitants were made US citizens in 1927, the islands are, constitutionally, an 'unincorporated territory'.

The Organic Act of 22 July 1954 gives the US Department of the Interior full jurisdiction; some limited legislative powers are given to a single-chambered legislature, composed of 15 senators elected for 2 years (11 represent 3 legislative districts; 4 are elected by all voters).

The Governor was formerly appointed by the President, with the consent of the Senate, for an indefinite term. In 1970 the islanders elected a Governor for the first time.

Governor: Melvin H. Evans ($25,890).

Government Secretary: David E. Maas ($22,526).

Comptroller: Howard L. Ross ($20,400).

For administration, there are 13 executive departments, 12 of which are under commissioners and the other, the Department of Law, under an Attorney-General.

The franchise is vested in residents who are citizens of the United States, 21 years of age or over. In 1968 there were 16,887 voters, of whom 13,692 participated in the local elections that year. They do not participate in the US presidential election and have no representative in Congress.

The capital is Charlotte Amalie, on St Thomas Island.

AREA AND POPULATION. The Virgin Islands group, lying about 40 miles due east of Puerto Rico, comprises the islands of St Thomas (32 sq. miles), St Croix (82 sq. miles), St John (19 sq. miles) and about 50 small islets or cays, mostly uninhabited. The total area of the 3 principal islands is 133 sq. miles (344.5 sq. km), of which the US Government owns 9,599 acres (10%).

The Virgin Islands are in the midst of a population explosion. The population, according to the census (preliminary) of 1 April 1970, was 63,200, an increase of 31,101 or 96.9% since 1960; density was 243 per sq. mile. Population had slowly declined since 1835, when it stood at 43,600, but began to recover in the 1940s. Of the 1960 population, males numbered 15,930 and females, 16,169. Whites numbered 5,373; Negroes, 20,634; mixed and other races, 6,092. Estimated population as at 31 Dec. 1968, was 62,802. Births, 1970, were 2,921 (46.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 466 (7.5); infant deaths, 72 (24.6 per 1,000 live births); marriages, 1,089 (17.4 per 1,000 population); divorces (1966), 293 (5.8).

The 1960 population of St Thomas was 16,201; St Croix, 14,973; St John, 925. There is one city, Charlotte Amalie, on St Thomas, with a population (1960) of 12,740, and 2 towns, both on Croix, Christiansted with 5,088 (in 1960) and Frederiksted with 1,925 (in 1950).

RELIGION. There are churches of the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths in St Thomas and St Croix.

EDUCATION. Education is compulsory between the ages of $5\frac{1}{2}$ and 16 years, inclusive. In 1969 there were 22 public schools (ranging from kindergarten to high schools); enrolment (1966-67) was 10,594; the school budget was \$7,287,929. In 1969 the College of the Virgin Islands had 430 full-time and over 1,000 part-time students.

FINANCE. Under the 1954 Organic Act finances are provided partly from local revenues—customs, federal income tax, real and personal property tax, trade tax, excise tax, pilotage fees, etc.—and partly from Federal Matching Funds, being the excise taxes collected by the federal government on such Virgin Islands products transported to the mainland as are liable. The US Government provides a separate fund to be expended for emergency purposes and essential public works. Total revenue for fiscal year ending 30 June 1969 including federal income taxes, Matching Funds and the federal grant-in-aid, $70,492,569, and expenditure totalled $59,576,266.

AGRICULTURE. The population census of 1960 showed 315 farms in St Croix, 128 in St Thomas and 58 in St John, a total of 501. The average farm was of 87.9 acres; total value of land and buildings, $64,289,529. With the phasing out of the sugar-cane industry in St Croix, and the accelerated construction activities carried on in all three islands, the number of farms has decreased, but the value of land and buildings has increased to $193m. Sugar has been terminated as a commercial crop and over 4,000 acres of prime land will be utilized for food crops.

INDUSTRY AND TOURISM. St Thomas, once an important commercial shipping centre, now is an important port of call for pleasure cruises. In 1968-69 there were 1,107,000 tourists spending approximately $100m. It is also the key to a steadily increasing import-export trade, serving the freeport tourist shopping and local manufacturing industries. Four desalting plants, which also generate electric power, can produce 4.78m. gallons of fresh water per day.

The Virgin Islands National Park covers more than half the island of St John. Tourism is the important business in St John. A few small manufacturing concerns have been established; a new clinic and a public housing project are planned.

The Virgin Islands offer liberal tax exemptions to persons, firms or companies prepared to invest $15,000 in new industries or in the promotion of tourism.

COMMERCE. Exports, 1968, totalled $153,782,838 and imports $260,160,366.

Trade between the US Virgin Islands and UK (British Board of Trade returns, in £1,000 sterling):

	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	5,134	3,294	787	544	6	26
Exports and re-exports from UK	1,382	1,762	2,050	2,041	1,889	1,866

COMMUNICATIONS. There is a daily air-mail and passenger service between St Thomas and St Croix, and a daily boat service—mail and passengers—between St Thomas and St John.

All three Virgin Islands have a dial telephone system. Marine cables have been installed, to make possible direct dialling to Puerto Rico and the mainland. Worldwide radio telegraph service is also available.

The islands are served by 3 radio stations, 2 television stations and 6 newspapers, 3 of them dailies.

The Virgin Islands have approximately 316 miles of roads, and 19,651 motor vehicles were registered in 1969.

MONEY AND BANKING. United States currency became legal tender on 1 July 1934. Banks are the Virgin Islands National Bank; the Chase Manhattan Bank; the Bank of Nova Scotia; the St Croix Savings Bank; the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Puerto Rico; Barclays Bank International; Bank of America; First National City Bank and Virgin Islands Title and Trust Co. Assets (1969) totalled $723,779,152.

There is a British Vice-Consul at St Thomas.

GUAM

Guam is the largest and most southern island of the Marianas Archipelago, in 13° 26' N. lat., 144° 43' E. long. Magellan is said to have discovered the island in 1521; it was ceded by Spain to the US by the Treaty of Paris (10 Dec. 1898). The island was captured by the Japanese on 10 Dec. 1941, and retaken by American forces 21 July–10 Aug. 1944. Guam is of great strategic importance; substantial naval and air force personnel occupy about one-third of the usable land. Its constitutional status is that of an 'unincorporated territory' of the US. Entry of US citizens is unrestricted; foreign nationals are subject to normal regulations. The port is open to foreign vessels.

GOVERNMENT. In 1949 the President transferred the administration of the island from the Navy Department (who held it from 1899) to the Interior Department. The transfer was completed by 1 Aug. 1950, on the passage of the Organic Act, which conferred full citizenship on the Guamanians, who had previously been 'nationals' of the US.

Governor: Carlos Garcia Camacho (R.) ($35,000), elected 3 Nov. 1970.

The Governor and his staff constitute the executive arm of the government. The Legislature is unicameral. The latter's powers are similar to those of an American state legislature. Following the general election of Nov. 1972, the Democratic Party won 14 seats and the Republicans won 7. All adults 18 years of age or over, including women, are enfranchised.

AREA AND POPULATION. The length is 30 miles, the breadth from 4 to 10 miles, and the area about 209 sq. miles (450 sq. km). Agaña, the seat of government is about 8 miles from the anchorage in Apra Harbour. The census on 1 April 1970 showed a population of 84,996, an increase of 17,952 or 26.8% since 1960; those of Guamanian ancestry numbered about 52,000; density was 321 per sq. mile. On 1 Jan. 1970 transient residents connected with the military were estimated at 19,307. The Malay strain is predominant. The native language is Chamorro; English is the official language and is taught in all schools.

RELIGION. About 96% of the Guamanians are Roman Catholics; others are Baptists, Episcopalians, Bahais, Lutherans, Mormons, Presbyterians, Jehovah's Witnesses and members of the Church of Christ and Seventh Day Adventists.

EDUCATION. Elementary education is compulsory. There were, Sept. 1973, 25 elementary schools, 1 school for handicapped children, 5 junior high schools, 3 senior high schools and 1 vocational-technical school for high school students and adults. A total of 1,166 classroom teachers and a total enrolment of 21,000 students. Budget of the school system, 1970-71, was $19,694,425. The Catholic school system also operates 3 senior high schools, 3 junior high and 5 elementary schools with 5,079 students. The Seventh Day Adventist Guam Mission Academy operates a school from grades 1 through 12, serving over 100 students. St John's Episcopal Preparatory School furnished education for 200 students between kindergarten and the 9th grade. The University of Guam (an accredited institution) had approximately 6,000 students, 1969-70.

NEWSPAPERS. There are 2 daily newspapers and 4 weekly publications (all of which are of military or religious interest only).

JUSTICE. The Organic Act established a District Court with jurisdiction in matters arising under both federal and territorial law; the judge is appointed by the President subject to Senate approval. Misdemeanours are under the jurisdiction of the 'Island court' and the police court. The Spanish law was superseded in 1933 by 5 civil codes based upon California law.

AGRICULTURE. The major products of the island are maize, sweet potatoes, taro, cassava, bananas, and citrus and truck crops, including breadfruit, coconuts and sugar-cane. In 1970-71, 569 full-time and part-time farmers each held 500 acres under cultivation. Livestock included 605 carabao, 5,800 cattle, 900 goats, 8,750 hogs, 95 horses and 130,000 laying-hens. Commercial production of fruit and vegetables amounted to 2.4m. lb. ($2.3m.); fish caught, 151,000 lb. ($2.5m.); egg production, 2.3m. dozen.

AMERICAN SAMOA

The Samoan Islands were first visited by Europeans in the 18th century; the first recorded visit was in 1722. On 14 July 1889 a treaty between the USA, Germany and Great Britain proclaimed the Samoan islands neutral territory, under a 4-power government consisting of the 3 treaty powers and the local native government. By the Tripartite Treaty of 7 Nov. 1899, ratified 19 Feb. 1900, Great Britain and Germany renounced in favour of the US all rights over the islands of the Samoan group east of 171° long. west of Greenwich, the islands to the west of that meridian being assigned to Germany (now the Independent State of Western Samoa, see p. 504). The islands of Tutuila and Aunu'u were ceded to the US by their High Chiefs on 17 April 1900, and the islands of the Manu'a group on 16 July 1904. Congress accepted the islands under a Joint Resolution approved 20 Feb. 1929. Swain's Island, 210 miles north-north-west of the Samoan Islands, was annexed in 1925 and is administered as an integral part of American Samoa.

GOVERNMENT. American Samoa is constitutionally an unorganized unincorporated territory of the US administered under the Department of the Interior. Its indigenous inhabitants are US nationals and are classified locally as citizens of American Samoa with certain privileges under local laws not granted to non-indigenous persons. Polynesian customs (not inconsistent with US laws) are respected.

The harbour at Pago Pago, which nearly bisects the island of Tutuila, is the only good harbour for large vessels in Samoa. Fagatogo is the seat of the Government.

The islands are organized in 14 counties grouped in 3 districts; these counties and districts correspond to the traditional political units. On 25 Feb. 1948 a bicameral legislature was established, at the request of the Samoans, to have advisory legislative functions. With the adoption of the Revised Constitution of American Samoa, effective 1 July 1967, the legislature was vested with limited law-making authority. The lower house, or House of Representatives, is composed of 20 members elected by universal adult suffrage. The upper house, or Senate, is composed of 18 members elected, in the traditional Samoan manner, in meetings of the chiefs.

Governor: John M. Haydon.

Lieut.-Governor: Frank C. Mockler.

AREA AND POPULATION. The total area of American Samoa is 76.1 sq. miles (197 sq. km); population, 1970, 27,159, nearly all Polynesians or part-Polynesians. The island of Tutuila, 80 miles from Apia, has an area of 53 sq. miles, with a population (1970) of 24,973 (including the island of Aunu'u). Ta'u has an area of 17 sq. miles, and the other islands (Ofu and Olosega) of the Manu'a group have an area of about 5 sq. miles with a population of 2,112 in 1970. Swain's Island, circular in shape, has an area of 1.9 sq. miles and a population, 1970, of 74. Rose Island (uninhabited) is 0.4 sq. mile in area.

EDUCATION. Education is compulsory between the ages of 6 and 18. The Government (1972) maintains 27 consolidated elementary schools, 4 senior high schools with technical departments, 1 community college and 138 village schools for small children. Total elementary and secondary enrolment (1972-73), 8,207; total classroom teachers, 390. Five private schools had 1,600 students. The community college had 223 full-time students and 25 full-time instructors. The new consolidated elementary school will be completed in 1973. Learning is by a variety of media including television.

HEALTH. The Medical Services Department provides the only medical and dental care in American Samoa. It operates a general hospital (177 beds), 3 dispensaries on Tutuila, 4 dispensaries in the Manu'a group and 1 on Swain's Island. A $3.5m. tropical medical centre was completed and placed in service in 1968.

JUSTICE. Judicial power is vested in a High Court. Fifty-nine district courts, traffic courts and small claims courts are heard without record and appeals therefrom are tried, de novo, in the trial division of the High Court. The trial division also has original jurisdiction of all criminal and civil cases. The probate division has jurisdiction of estates, guardianships, trusts and other matters. The land and title division decides cases relating to disputes involving communal land and Matai title court rules on questions and controversy over family titles. The appellate division hears appeals from trial, land and title and probate divisions as well as having original jurisdiction in selected matters. The appellate court is the court of last resort. Two stateside judges sit with 5 Samoan judges permanently. In addition there are 13 temporary judges or assessors who sit occasionally on cases involving Samoan customs.

FINANCE. The chief sources of revenue are annual federal grants from the US, and local revenues from individual and corporate income taxes, import duties, sale of utilities, rents and leases and liquor sales. During the fiscal year ended 30 June 1972 the government operated under a direct federal appropriation of $470,000 and a federal grant-in-aid of $11,713,000 from the US Department of the Interior. Receipts from other US Government agencies totalled $4,836,000 and from local sources $7.78m.

In 1970-71 American Samoa exported goods valued at $41,369,235 and imported goods valued at $19,556,873. Chief exports are canned tuna, copra, pandanus mats and handicrafts. Mats woven from laufala leaves (for floor and wall coverings) are being exported in increasing quantities.

PLANNING. The first formal Economic Development and Planning Office completed its first year in 1971. Much has been done to promote economic expansion within the Territory and a large amount of outside investment interest has been stimulated. Pacific Time Corporation, a subsidiary of Bulova Watch, and Meadow Gold Samoa, Inc., a subsidiary of Beatrice Foods, have already started operations in the Territory; the Office is negotiating with manufacturers of food products, steel wire, industrial gas and other items.

The Office initiated the first Territorial Comprehensive Plan. This plan when completed will, with periodic updating, provide a guideline to territorial development for the next 20 years. The planning programme was made possible under a Housing and Urban Development '701' grant programme.

The focus will be on physical development and the problems of a rapidly increasing population with severely limited land resources.

AGRICULTURE. There are virtually no public lands in American Samoa. Nearly all the land is owned by Samoans and, with a few exceptions, cannot be sold except to persons having at least one-half Samoan blood. Of the 48,640 acres of land area, 11,000 acres are suitable for tropical crops, 1,000 acres for most temperate vegetables, 8,000 acres only to such crops as coconut and cacao with good conservation practice, 5,000 acres to controlled forestation and about 22,500 to indigenous and introduced forest with strict conservation measures; 1,000 acres are roads, building sites and villages. Principal crops are copra, taro, breadfruit, yams, bananas, coconuts, arrowroot, oranges and papayas. Principal livestock are poultry, swine and cattle.

COMMUNICATIONS. There are about 38 miles of paved roads and 5 miles of secondary roads. There are 28 miles of secondary unpaved roads maintained mainly on Tutuila. A commercial radiogram service is available to all parts of the world through 3 principal trunks, Hawaii, Fiji and Western Samoa. Commercial phone services are operated to all parts of the world on a 24-hour service. Number of telephones (Sept. 1972), 2,300.

American Airlines operates 2 flights weekly from Honolulu to New Zealand via American Samoa and Fiji. Continental Airlines has been granted rights to operate between American Samoa and Okinawa via the Gilbert and Ellice Islands, the Trust Territory and Guam. Polynesian Airlines operate twice-daily services between American Samoa and Western Samoa. By sea, there is a twice-monthly service from New Zealand; ships provide regular service between US, South Pacific ports and Japan.

BANKING. The American Samoa branch of the Bank of Hawaii offers all commercial banking services. The Development Bank of American Samoa, government owned, is concerned primarily through loans and guarantees with the economic advancement of the Territory.

TRUST TERRITORY OF THE PACIFIC ISLANDS

Under the Treaty of Versailles (1919) Japan was appointed mandatory to the former German possessions north of the Equator. In 1946 the US agreed to administer the former Japanese-mandated islands of the Caroline, Marshall and Mariana groups (except Guam) as a Trusteeship for the United Nations; the trusteeship agreement was approved by the Security Council 27 April 1947 and came into effect on 18 July 1947. In 1951 all the islands passed under the care of the US Department of the Interior, but in 1953 responsibility for civil administration of the Northern Marianas (except Rota) was transferred back to the Department of the Navy. On 7 May 1962 Saipan and the islands of the Northern Marianas were transferred back to the Secretary of the Interior, so that the whole area is now under one administration.

The Trust Territory extends from 1° to 22° N. lat. and from 130° to 172° E. long. The area is generally known as Micronesia, or 'land of the small islands'; 2,141 atolls and islands (of which 96 are inhabited) cover less than 700 sq. miles (1,813 sq. km) in some 3m. sq. miles (8m. sq. km) of ocean.

The population of the 6 administrative districts as of 30 June 1972 was: Truk, 32,732; Ponape, 23,722; Marshall Islands, 24,248; Palau, 13,025; Mariana Islands, 13,381; Yap, 7,536; total, 114,645. The administrative centre is Saipan, Mariana Islands. Nine different languages are spoken, each with variations; English is used in the schools and is the official language.

Law and order is maintained by the armed, uniformed and trained Micronesia Police in each district; the local district community court judges, sheriffs and deputy sheriffs are all Micronesians. Local customs are respected in law and practice. Elected legislatures function in all districts. Membership in some of these includes hereditary leaders as well as elected representatives, although the trend is towards all-elective bodies.

The bicameral Congress of Micronesia, a Senate and House of Representatives, was established in 1965. Regular sessions of 50 days begin annually in January.

High Commissioner: Edward E. Johnston.

Living standards are being improved through the introduction of higher standards of subsistence and exportable agricultural and marine products.

There are approximately 170 Peace Corps Volunteers in the Territory working in education, public health and community development.

In 1972-73 there were 244 public and private elementary schools (30,748 pupils), 22 public and private high schools (7,102 pupils), 890 students were attending institutions of higher education abroad.

The public health system, which includes 6 district and 3 large field hospitals and 154 dispensaries, is carried on by a staff consisting chiefly of trained Micronesian medical and dental officers and assistants under senior US medical officers. There is a school of nursing in the Mariana Islands.

Trade (1972). Major imports were food, $9.3m.; beverages, $3.08m.; and building materials, $3.02m. Total imports were an estimated $30m., of which $15m. (est.) were from US and $8.12m. from Japan. Major exports were copra, $1.3m.; fish, $886,385; handicraft, $170,391; meat, vegetables and fruits, $140,554. Total exports were $2.6m., of which $1.4 to Japan.

PART IV

AFGHÁNISTÁN

Doulat i Jumhouri ye Afghánistán

HISTORY. A military coup on 17 July 1973 overthrew the monarchy of King Záhir Sháh. The coup was lead by the King's cousin and brother-in-law Mohammad Daoud who declared a Republic. King Záhir abdicated on 24 Aug. 1973.

AREA AND POPULATION. Afghánistán is situated between parallels 29° and 38° 35' N. lat., and 60° 50' and 71° 50' E. long., with a long narrow strip extending to 75° E. long. (Wákhán). For the boundaries, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1925, pp. 654-55. A new boundary agreement with the Soviet Union was signed in Moscow in June 1946; a joint commission completed the demarcation in Sept. 1948. A border treaty with China was signed in 1963; the frontier was demarcated in 1964.

The area is 250,000 sq. miles (657,500 sq. km). Population, according to the latest Afghan estimate, is 16·9m., of which some 2·5m. are nomadic tribes. This estimate would mean a population density equal to that of USA and twice as large as that of Iran. More cautious estimates arrive at about 10m.

A census conducted in Kábul in 1965 showed a population of 435,000. Estimates of population of other municipalities are: Kandahár, 115,000; Herát, 62,000; Gardez, 46,000; Jalálábád, 44,000; Mazár-i-Sharif, 40,000.

GOVERNMENT. The 1964 Constitution was abolished by Presidential decree on 26 July 1973 and pending a new Constitution rule is by Presidential decree. The military leaders of the coup with some senior civilians form the 'Central Committee of the Republic', a body of uncertain membership and responsibilities which approved the ministerial appointments announced on 1 Aug. 1973

Head of State, Chairman of the Central Committee of the Republic, Prime Minister, Minister of National Defence and Foreign Affairs: Mohammad Daoud. Deputy Prime Minister: Dr Mohammad Hassan Sharq. Justice: Dr Abdul Majid. Finance: Sayed Abdul Ellah. Interior: Faiz Mohammad. Education: Dr Nehmatullah Pazhwak. Frontier Affairs: Pacha Gul. Mines and Industries: Dr Abdul Qayoum. Public Works: Ghausuddin Faeq. Communications: Abdul Hamid Mohtat. Health: Dr Nazar Mohammad Sekandar. Information and Culture: Dr Abdul Rahm Navin. Agriculture: Ghulam Jailan Bakhtari.

There are 28 provinces, each under a governor. These are (with their centres in brackets): Kábul (Kábul); Parwan (Charikar); Wardak (Maidan); Logar (Baraki Rajan); Nangarhar (Jalálábád); Paktya (Gardez); Kattawaz and Urgun (Urgun), temporarily linked with Paktya; Ghazni (Ghazni); Zabul (Kalat); Kandahár (Kandahár); Uruzgan (Uruzgan); Bamian (Bamian); Helmand (Lashkargah); Faráh (Faráh); Nimrooz (Zaranj); Ghor (Chakcharan); Herát (Herát); Badghis (Qala-i-Nau); Faryab (Maimana); Jouzjan (Shiberghan); Balkh (Mazar-i-Sharif); Samangan (Haibak); Kunduz (Kunduz); Takhar (Taleqan); Badakhshán (Faizabad); Baghlan and Pul-i-Khumri (Baghlan); Laghman (Metarlam); Kunar (Chaghasarai).

National flag: Black, red, green (vertical); with a white device in the centre.

The official languages are Pushtu and Dari (Persian).

RELIGION. The predominant religion is Islam, mostly of the Sunni sect, though there is a minority of about 1m. Shiah Moslems.

EDUCATION. The number of elementary schools is rapidly increasing, but secondary schools exist only in Kábul and provincial capitals. Both elementary and secondary education are free. There are several teacher-training institutions in Kábul and a few elsewhere; UNESCO is supporting a 30-year expansion programme. Technical, art, commercial and medical schools exist for higher education. The Kábul University was founded in 1932 and has 9 faculties (medicine, science, agriculture, engineering, law and political science, letters, economics, theology, pharmacology). The University of Nangarhar in Jalálábád, founded in 1963, has at present only a faculty of medicine. A Polytechnic in Kábul was completed in 1968.

In 1963 the Prime Minister stated that illiteracy was over 90%.

JUSTICE. Until 1965 Afghánistán was ruled on the basis of Shariat or Islamic law.

FINANCE. Currency. The monetary system is on the silver standard. The unit is the afgháni, weighing 10 grammes of silver 0.900 fine, which is subdivided into 100 puls. Rates of exchange fluctuate round Afs. 130 = £1; Afs 50 = US$1.

Budget. The revenue and expenditure for years ending 20 March (in 1m. afghánis):

	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Revenue	5,354	6,796	6,269	6,751	7,622
Expenditure	5,979	7,419	8,175	7,149	8,295

Main sources of revenue in 1972-73 were: Taxation, Afs. 1,845m.; import duties, Afs. 1,700m.; monopoly and government enterprises, Afs. 891m.

DEFENCE. Army. The Army is based on selective conscription with a regular cadre of officers and n.c.o.s. An agreed figure of conscripts is chosen in each province under local arrangements. A proportion of conscripts is drafted into the Labour Corps (employed mainly on public works). Call-up begins at the age of 20, and is for 2 years (1 year for conscript officers). Reserve liability is up to the age of 42. There is a reserve of officers.

The peace strength of the Army is about 80,000. Reserves, 200,000. It is organized in 2 armoured and 4 infantry divisions and 1 independent brigade. Equipment is almost entirely Russian and includes T-54 tanks and surface-to-air missiles. Transport is mainly mechanized.

The Army has the following training establishments: a military academy (formed 1932), a school for each principal arm, a technical school, a n.c.o.s' school and a military high school (Kábul), which takes boys from the age of 10, and from which the regular element in the armed forces is mainly drawn. Selected officers receive training abroad, chiefly in USSR but also in Turkey; a few go to USA, UK and France.

Air Force. The Air Force, which is Russian-equipped, has about 250 aircraft and 6,000 officers and men. There are 2 squadrons of Su-7 attack aircraft, 3 squadrons of supersonic MiG-21 interceptors (about 40 aircraft), 1 squadron with MiG-19s, 3 squadrons of MiG-17s (about 50 aircraft), 2 bomber squadrons each with about 15 twin-jet Il-28s, a transport wing with about 20 piston-engined Il-14s, 20 Mi-4 helicopters and 1 or 2 turboprop Il-18s, and Yak-11, Yak-18 and MiG-15UTI trainers. The main fighter station is Bagram, with facilities for the largest jet airliners and bombers. A Russian-built bomber station was completed at Shindand in 1963. There is a training station at Mazar-i-Sharif and an air academy at Sherpur with about 400 cadets. Large numbers of 'Guideline' surface-to-air missiles are operational in Afghánistán.

Gendarmerie. The gendarmerie, about 21,000 strong, is administered by the Ministry of the Interior.

PLANNING. The first two 5-year plans ran 1956–61 and 1962–67. The third plan (1967–72) envisaged expenditures of Afs. 33,000m. (compared with actual expenditures of 25,000m. during the second plan), but was never approved by Parliament. It has now been tacitly abandoned, although some of the projects mentioned in the plan were implemented. The Ministry of Planning is engaged on drawing up the fourth plan to run 1973–77.

AGRICULTURE. Although the greater part of Afghánistán is more or less mountainous and a good deal of the country is too dry and rocky for successful cultivation, there are many fertile plains and valleys, which, with the assistance of irrigation from small rivers or wells, yield very satisfactory crops of fruit, vegetables and cereals. It is estimated that there are 14m. hectares of cultivable land in the country, of which 7,844,000 hectares are being cultivated (5·34m. hectares of this being irrigated land). Afghánistán is virtually self-supporting in foodstuffs, apart from wheat and sugar. The castor-oil plant, madder and the asafœtida plant abound. Fruit forms a staple food (with bread) of many people throughout the year, both in the fresh and preserved state, and in the latter condition is exported in great quantities. The fat-tailed sheep furnish the principal meat diet, and the grease of the tail is a substitute for butter. Wool (annual production, about 10,000 tons, of which about 7,000 tons are exported) and skins provide material for warm apparel and one of the more important articles of export. Persian lamb-skins (Karakuls) are one of the chief exports.

Cotton production, 1970–71, was estimated at 60,000 tons.

MINING. Mineral resources are scattered and little developed. Coal is mined at Karkar in Pul-i-Khumri, Ishpushta near Doshi, north of Kábul and Dara-i-Suf south of Mazar (total production, 1967–68, 151,000 tons). Natural gas is found in northern Afghánistán around Shiberghan and Sar-i-Pol; this is now being piped to the USSR, and 57,700m. cu. metres are to be supplied by 1985. Rich, but as yet unexploited, deposits of iron ore exist in the Hajigak hills about 100 miles west of Kábul; beryllium has been found in the Kunar valley and barite in Bamian province. Other deposits include gold; silver (now unexploited, in the Panjshir valley); lapis lazuli (in Badakhshán); asbestos; mica; sulphur (near Maimana); chrome (in the Logar valley and near Herát); and copper (in the north).

INDUSTRY. At Kábul there are factories for the manufacture of cotton and woollen textiles, leather, boots, marble-ware, furniture, glass, bicycles, prefabricated houses and plastics. A large machine shop has been constructed and equipped by the Russians, with a capability of manufacturing motor spares. There is a wool factory and a cotton ginning plant at Kandahár; a small cotton factory at Jabal-us-Seráj and a larger one at Pul-i-Khumri. A cotton-seed oil extraction plant has been built in Lashkargah by a British firm which also has a contract for the construction of 4 factories in the north which became operative in 1972. Germans have built and equipped a large modern cotton textile factory at Gulbahar, and another has been built and equipped by the Chinese at Bagram. A large cotton plant has recently been completed in the north Balkh.

An ordnance factory manufactures arms and ammunition, boots and clothing, etc. for the Army. There is a beet sugar plant at Baghlan (equipped with British machinery) and an inoperative fruit-canning factory in Kandahár. Hydro-electric plants have been constructed at Sarobi, Nangarhár, Naghlu, Mahipár, Pul-i-Khumri and Kandahár; more hydro and thermal plants are under construction.

Industrial and commercial enterprises are financed partly by the private sector and partly on public account. The largest private investor is the Afghan National Bank (Bánek-i-Milli) with interests ranging from textile factories to agricultural processing industries. Government agencies, such as the Ministry of Mines and Industries and the Ministry of Commerce, are actively engaged in the establishment of new industrial enterprises, many of which are assisted by long-term foreign loans. Industries include hydro-electric projects, cement, coalmining, cotton textiles, small vehicle assembly plants, fruit canning, carpet making, leather tanning, footwear manufacture, sugar manufacture, preparation of hides and skins, and building. Most of these are relatively small and, with the exception of hides and skins, carpets and fruits, do not meet domestic requirements. The Government encourages foreign investment in Afghan industries; a new domestic and foreign productive investment law was introduced in 1967, under which about 100 new industries have been established. The Ministry of Planning is responsible for general policy and for co-ordinating the establishment of new industries.

COMMERCE. Trade is supervised by the Government through the Ministries of Commerce and Finance and the Da Afghánistán Bānk. The Association of Afghan Chambers of Commerce works in close liaison with the Ministry of Commerce. Afghánistán follows liberal trading policies so far as the balance-of-payments position will allow. The Government monopoly controls the import of petrol and oil, sugar, cigarettes and tobacco, motor vehicles and consignment goods from bi-lateral trading countries. Bi-lateral trade agreements exist between Afghánistán and the USSR, Czechoslovakia, Poland, China, India and Pakistan. These agreements are reviewed annually. Transit agreements have been reached with Pakistan (Karachi being the most important port for the transit of Afghan imports and exports), the USSR, Turkey and Iran.

In the year ended 20 March 1970 Afghan imports (c.i.f.), including loan and grant imports, totalled Afs. 9,410m. and exports (f.o.b.) Afs. 6,180m.

Afghánistán's largest customers during this period were USSR, India, UK, Pakistan, USA, Czechoslovakia and West Germany, and the largest suppliers were USSR, Japan, India, USA, West Germany, UK and Pakistan. Main export commodities were karakul skins (US$13.1m.), raw cotton (US$5.6m.), dried fruit and nuts (US$19.5m.), fresh fruit (US$8.9m.) and natural gas (US$12.1m.). Main items imported were petroleum products (US$3.6m.), textiles (US$9.3m., tea (US$9.3m.).

Total trade between Afghánistán and UK (in £1,000 sterling, British Board of Trade returns):

	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Exports and re-exports from UK	1,994	1,697	2,513	3,320	2,905

ROADS. There are now over 2,000 km of asphalted road. The Americans have asphalted the Kandahár-Chaman and Kábul-Torkham roads. The Russians have constructed a road and tunnel through the Salang pass (over 11,000 ft) which was opened in Sept. 1964 and cuts 120 miles off the old road from Kábul to the north; they have continued this road to Kunduz and Sherkhan Bandar (Qizil Qala) on the Oxus. In addition, the Americans in 1966 completed the road between Kábul and Kandahár and the Russians have constructed a concrete road between Kandahár and Herát. In 1968 the Americans completed an asphalt road from Herát to the Iranian frontier at Islam Qala. With Soviet assistance a metalled road from Pul-i-Khumri to Mazar-i-Sharif was completed in 1969 and Mazar-i-Sharif to Shiberghan in 1971.

RAILWAYS. There are no railways in the country but, under the terms of the Tehran agreement of 1963, Pakistani railways may be extended into Afghánistán at Torkham and/or Chaman.

SHIPPING. There are practically no navigable rivers in Afghánistán, and timber is the only article of commerce conveyed by water, floated down the Kunar and Kábul rivers from Chitral on rafts. A port has been built at Qizil Qala on the Oxus; barge traffic is increasing on the Oxus.

AVIATION. On 29 June 1956 Afghánistán signed an agreement with the USA for the development of civil aviation, including the construction of the international airport at Kandahár, comprising a loan of $5m. and a grant of $9.56m. Kábul airport has been expanded with Russian assistance. New runways at Kábul and Kandahár airports have been completed. Provincial all-weather airports have been constructed at Herát, Qunduz, Jalálábád and Mazar.

Ariana Afghan Airlines (a national airline) operates regular services to Tehran, Beirut, Istanbul, Frankfurt, Rome, London, New Delhi, Tashkent and Moscow.

Bakhtar Afghan Airlines (the domestic national airline) began operations on 8 Feb. 1968 and regularly serves the main internal airfields and the remoter airfields at Bamian, Chakcharan, Lashkargah, Faizabad, Khost, Maimana, Neemroz and Taleqan.

POST. Telephones, installed in most of the large towns, numbered 20,960 in 1972. There is telegraphic communication between all the larger towns and between Kábul and Kandahár and Peshawar and Chaman. A wireless installation connects Kábul with Europe, Bombay, the Far East, America and other parts of the world. Kábul Radio broadcasts in Pushtu, Persian, Urdu, English, French, Russian and German. The telecommunication system is being expanded slowly, mainly with German assistance.

BANKING. The Afghan State Bank (da Afghánistán Bánk) is the largest of the 3 main banks and also undertakes the functions of a central bank, holding the exclusive right of note issue. Total assets of the 3 main banks on 21 Sept. 1967 were: da Afghánistán Bánk, Afs. 28,074.4m.; Pashtany Tejaraty Bánk, Afs. 1,070.46m.; Bánk-i-Milli, Afs. 1,410.29m.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. Weights and measures used in Kábul are: Weights: 1 khurd = 0.244 lb.; 1 pao = 0.974 lb.; 1 charak = 3.896 lb.; 1 sere = 16 lb.; 1 kharwár = 1,280 lb. or 16 maunds of 80 lb. each. Long measure: 1 yd or gaz = 40 in. The metric system is in common use by the bigger cloth merchants in Kábul. Square measures: 1 jarib = 60 × 60 kábuli yd or $\frac{1}{2}$ acre; 1 kulbá = 40 jaribs (area in which $2\frac{1}{2}$ kharwárs of seed can be sown); 1 jarib yd = 29 in.

Local weights and measures are in use at Kandahár, Herát and Jalálábád.

ALBANIA

Republika Popullore e Shqipërisë

HISTORY. After the death of George Kastrioti—popularly known as Skanderbeg—in 1467 Albania passed under nominal or actual Turkish suzerainty until 1912. The independence of Albania was proclaimed at Vlonë (Valona) on 28 Nov. 1912, and the London conference of ambassadors decided upon its frontiers and nominated as its ruler Prince William of Wied, who arrived at Durrës (Durazzo) on 7 March 1914, but on 3 Sept. 1914 left the country, which fell into a state of anarchy. By the secret Pact of London of 26 April 1915 provision was made for the partition of Albania; but this arrangement was repudiated by Italy on 3 June 1917, when the Italian C.-in-C. in Albania proclaimed at Gjirokastër (Argyrocastro) the independence of Albania. In Jan. 1925 the country was proclaimed a republic and on 1 Sept. 1928 a monarchy. Ahmed Beg Zogu, President of the Republic since 31 Jan. 1925, reigned as King Zog till April 1939, when, on the occupation of the country by the Italians, he fled to England. After the liberation he was formally deposed in absentia, on 2 Jan 1946. During the years 1939–44 the country was overrun by Italians and Germans. The official Albanian date of the liberation is 29 Nov. 1944.

On 10 Nov. 1945 the British, US and USSR Governments recognized the Provisional Government under Gen. Enver Hoxha, on the understanding that it would hold free elections. The elections of 2 Dec. 1945 resulted in a Communist-controlled assembly, which on 11 Jan. 1946 proclaimed Albania a republic.

In 1946 Great Britain and the USA broke off relations with Albania and vetoed its admission to the United Nations. Albania was finally admitted on 15 Dec. 1955, the USA abstaining from voting.

Because of Albania's Stalinist and pro-Chinese attitudes diplomatic relations with USSR were broken off in 1961.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The political structure derives from the Constitution of 1950 as amended in 1955, 1960 and 1963. The supreme legislative body is the single-chamber People's Assembly of 264 deputies, which meets twice a year, and delegates its day-to-day functions to a Presidium composed of a chairman, 3 deputy chairmen, a secretary and 10 members. Election of deputies to the People's Assembly is by universal suffrage (at 18 years).

In the Sept. 1970 elections it was claimed that 100% of the electorate voted unanimously for 264 candidates on the single list of the Albanian Democratic Front.

The government consists of a prime minister (Chairman of the Council of Ministers), 4 deputy prime ministers, 13 ministers and the chairman of the State Planning Commission.

Effective rule is exercised by the Albanian Labour (i.e., Communist) Party, founded 8 Nov. 1941, whose governing body is the Politburo.

In 1971 the Party had 68,858 full and 18,127 candidate members (women, 22%; workers, 36%; peasants, 30%; professional and managerial, 34%).

Titular Head of State: Chairman of the Presidium of the People's Assembly: Haxhi Lleshi, elected July 1953. In March 1974 the chief Party and Government posts were filled as follows: The 13 full members of the Politburo:

First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Party: Enver Hoxha. Chairman of the Council of Ministers (Prime Minister): Mehmet Shehu. *Beqir Balluku*¹ (Minister of Defence); Spiro Koleka,¹ Adil Çarçani,¹ Kadri Hazbiu (Minister of the Interior); Koço Theodhosi (Minister of Industry); Abdyl Këllezi (Chairman, State Planning Commission); Manush Myftiu, Mrs Rita Marko. Secretaries of the Central Committee: Hysni Kapo, Ramiz Alia, Haki Toska. The 4 candidate members: Petrit Dume (Chief of Staff); Pilo Peristeri; Piro Dodbiba (Agriculture); Xhafer Spahiu.¹ Not in the Politburo: Foreign Minister: Nesti Nase. Minister of Foreign Trade: Kico Ngjela. Minister of Finance: Aleks Verli.

¹Deputy Chairman, Council of Ministers.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT is carried out by People's Councils at village, lokalitet town and district level. Councillors are elected for 3 years.

National flag: Red, with a black double-headed eagle and a red, gold-edged 5-pointed star above it. Mercantile flag: red, black, red (horizontal).

National anthem: Rreth Flamurit te per bashkuar (The flag that united us in the struggle).

AREA AND POPULATION. The area of the country is 28,748 sq. km (11,101 sq. miles). By the peace treaty Italy restored the island of Sazan (Saseno) to Albania. At the census of 2 Oct. 1960 the population was 1,626,315 (51.3% males, 30.9% urban). Population in 1970, 2,135,600 (males, 1,068,300 in 1969; 33.6% urban; density, 74 per sq. km). The capital is Tirana (1970 population in 1,000), (171); other large towns are Shkodër (Shkodra, Scutari) (55), Durrës (Durrsi, Durazzo) (53), Vlonë (Vlona, Vlorë, Vlora, Valona) (50), Korçë (Korça, Koritza) (47), Elbasan (42), Berat (26), Fier (23), Kavajë (18), Lushnjë (18), Gjirokastër (Argyrocastro) (17), Qytet Stalin (formerly Kuçovë) (14).

There is a small Greek minority (2.4% in 1960).

Vital statistics, 1969 (per 1,000): Births, 35.3; deaths, 7.5; marriages, 7.4; divorces, 0.8. Natural increase, 27.8. Life expectancy in 1970 was 68 years.

The country is administratively divided into 26 districts (rreth, pl. rrethët) (see map in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1962. N.B. The district of Ersekë has been renamed Kolonjë). Districts are subdivided into lokaliteteve.

The districts are for the greater part named after their capitals; exceptions: Tropojë, chief town, Bajram Curri; Mat, Burrel; Mirditë, Rrëshen; Skrapar, Çorovodë.

The Albanian language is divided into two dialects—Gheg, north of the river Shkumbi, and Tosk in the south. Many places therefore have two forms of name: Vlonë (Gheg), Vlorë (Tosk), etc., and many are known also by an Italian name, e.g., Valona. Since 1945 the official language has been based on Tosk.

RELIGION. For details of the situation before 1967 see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1969–70. In 1967 the Government closed 2,169 mosques and churches and claimed that Albania was the first atheist state in the world. The population was distributed according to the following estimates: Moslems, 1·2m.; Orthodox Christians (the Orthodox Church of Albania), 300,000; Roman Catholics, 200,000.

EDUCATION. Primary education is free and compulsory in 8-year schools from 7 to 15 years. Secondary education is available in 12-year (general), technical-professional or lower vocational schools. JUSTICE is administered by People's Courts. Judges of the Supreme Court are elected by the People's Assembly for 4-year terms. The Office of the Procurator-General oversees the administration of justice. In 1966 the Ministry of Justice was incorporated into the Ministry of the Interior. In 1968 tribunals were set up in towns and villages to try minor crimes which had previously been dealt with by courts.

FINANCE. Currency. The monetary unit is the lek of 100 qintars. It replaced the Albanian gold franc (franc ar) in July 1947. In Aug. 1965 a new lek was introduced: 10 old leks = 1 new lek.

Budget. Budget figures for 1970: Revenue, 5,247m. leks (turnover tax, 2,137m. leks; profit surplus, 1,492m. leks; social insurance, 215m. leks) (direct taxes were abolished in 1970); expenditure, 4,937m. leks (national economy, 2,745m. leks; social and cultural, 1,210m. leks; defence, 475m. leks; administration, 85m. leks.) The budget remains dependent upon massive Chinese subventions.

DEFENCE. Albania did not participate in meetings of the Warsaw Pact countries after 1962 and withdrew from it in Sept. 1968 in protest against the invasion of Czechoslovakia. Military ties with China have been strengthened.

Transport and training types include 3 Il-14s, An-2 biplanes, Mi-4 helicopters, Yak-11s, Yak-18s and MiG-15UTIs.

PLANNING. The first 5-year plan covered 1951-55; the second, 1956-60. The third (1961-65) failed to reach all its targets and was followed by an emergency plan for 1966. The fourth 5-year plan covered 1966-70. The fifth 5-year plan is running from 1971 to 1975. Emphasis is laid on industrial expansion, especially in the oil, mining and chemical industries. Continuing Chinese economic assistance is a sine qua non of Albania's development.

AGRICULTURE. The country for the greater part is rugged, wild and mountainous, the exceptions being along the Adriatic littoral and the Korçë (Koritza) Basin, which are fertile. In 1973 a programme of land reclamation and anti-erosion measures was instituted. In 1970 arable land comprised 599,000 hectares and pasture 623,000 hectares. 283,200 hectares were irrigated.

Land is held by the State (largely forests and non-agricultural), state farms (33 in 1970 holding 100,700 hectares of arable land), co-operatives (643 in 1970 holding 473,700 hectares); and privately (1,300 hectares). The size of private plots was reduced in 1967. A pension plan for collective farmers was enacted in 1972. Tractors in 1970 numbered 10,900 (in 15-h.p. units).

FISHERIES. The catch in 1964 was 3,600 metric tons.

MINING. The mineral wealth of Albania is considerable but is only recently being developed. In 1971 there were 8 coal, 7 chromium (annual output some 300,000 metric tons) and 6 copper mines. Ferro-nickel ores are mined and output is increasing. In 1969 extensive coal deposits were discovered at Valias, near Tirana. There is no bituminous coal. Salt is extracted near Vlonë and bitumen mined at Selenicë.

INDUSTRY. All industry is nationalized down to the smallest workshop. Output is small, and the principal industries are agricultural product processing, textiles, oil products and cement. Chemical and engineering industries are being built up. An iron and steel works is being built in Elbasan with a smelting capacity of 800,000 tons.

OIL. The oil industry is being rapidly expanded and the output of crude exceeded 2m. metric tons in 1973. Refining capacity in 1970 was over 1m. metric tons. Oil is produced chiefly at Qyter Stalin which a pipeline connects to the port of Vlonë.

COMMERCE. In 1969, 70% of Albania's trade was with China and 25% with other communist countries (nothing to USSR). Italy is Albania's biggest non-communist trading partner. Better trade relations with Yugoslavia were established in 1970, and with Romania and the West in 1971.

Exports include crude oil, bitumen, chrome ore, copper wire, tobacco, fruit and vegetables. In 1971, 56% of exports were finished or semi-finished goods.

In 1972 a trade agreement was signed with Italy. Aid agreements were signed with China in Oct. 1970.

ALGERIA

El Djemhouria, El Djazaïria Demokratia Echaabia—
 République Algérienne Démocratique et Populaire

LIBERATION. On 1 Nov. 1954 the National Liberation Front (FLN), founded on 5 Aug. 1951, went over to open warfare against the French administration and armed forces. In Sept. 1958 a free Algerian government was formed in Cairo with Ferhat Abbas as provisional president.

A referendum was held in Metropolitan France and Algeria on 6–8 Jan. 1961 to decide on Algerian self-determination as proposed by President de Gaulle. His proposals were approved by 15,200,073 against 4,996,474 votes in Metropolitan France, and by 1,749,969 against 767,546 votes in Algeria. In Metropolitan France 20·2m. out of 27·2m. registered voters went to the polls; in Algeria 2·5m. out of 4·5m. registered voters.

Long delayed by the terrorism, in Metropolitan France as well as Algeria, of a secret organization (OAS) led by anti-Gaullist officers, a cease-fire agreement was concluded between the French Government and the representatives of the Algerian Nationalists on 18 March 1962; but OAS terror acts continued for some months. On 7 April a provisional executive of 12 members was set up, under the chairmanship of Abderrhaman Farès.

On 8 April 1962 a referendum in Metropolitan France approved the Algerian settlement with 17,505,473 (90·7%) against 1,794,553 (9·3%) and 1,102,477 invalid votes; 6,580,772 voters abstained. On 1 July 1962, 5,975,581 Algerians voted in favour of, 16,534 against the settlement.

A national referendum held on 15 Sept. 1963 elected Ben Bella, the only candidate, as President of the new Democratic People's Republic of Algeria.

The Government was overthrown by a junta of army officers which, on 19 June 1965, established a Revolutionary Council under Col. Houari Bou-médiénne.

Prime Minister and Minister of Defence: Houari Boumédiénne.

Foreign Affairs: Abdelaziz Bonteflika.

The official language is Arabic, French being the principal foreign language.

JUSTICE. There are appeal courts at Algiers, Constantine and Oran; and in the arrondissements are 17 courts of first instance. There are also commercial courts and justices of the peace with extensive powers. Criminal justice is organized as in France. The Supreme Court is at the same time Council of State and High Court of Appeal.

Since then many more aircraft of Soviet design have followed, and the Air Force now has about 190 combat aircraft and 4,500 personnel. Training and technical assistance are given by Egypt and the Soviet Union. The greater part of Algeria is of limited value for agricultural purposes. In the northern portion the mountains are generally better adapted to grazing and forestry than agriculture, and a large portion of the native population is quite poor. In spite of the many excellent roads built by the Government, a considerable area of the mountainous region is without adequate means of communication and is accessible only with difficulty. There were an estimated 16.7m. hectares of agricultural land in 1969, of which 6.2m. hectares were arable; 370,000 hectares under vine and 9.6m. hectares pastures and brushlands. The greater part is mere brushwood, but there are very large areas covered with cork-oak trees, Aleppo pine, evergreen oak and cedar. The dwarf-palm is grown on the plains, alfa on the table-land. Timber is cut for firewood, also for industrial purposes, for railway sleepers, telegraph poles, etc., and for bark for tanning. Considerable portions of the forest area are also leased for tillage, or for pasturage for cattle and sheep.

Exports	3,080	3,571	4,097	4,610	4,980

In 1963 France supplied 76% of the imports and took 73% of the exports. In 1970 the figures were 25% and 30% respectively; exports to the 5 other members of the EEC were then 13% (three-quarters of this being crude oil) and imports, 17%.

ANDORRA

Les Vallées d'Andorre—Valls d'Andorra

The co-principality of Andorra is situated in the eastern Pyrenees. The country consists of gorges, narrow valleys and defiles, surrounded by high mountain peaks varying between 1,880 and 3,000 metres. Its maximum length is 30 km and its width 20 km; it has an area of 465 sq. km (190 sq. miles) and a population of about 23,094, scattered in 6 villages. Catalan is the language spoken.

The political status of Andorra was regulated by the Paréage of 1278 which placed Andorra under the joint suzerainty of the Comte de Foix and of the Bishop of Urgel. The rights vested in the house of Foix passed by marriage to that of Béarn and, on the accession of Henri IV, to the French crown. The sovereignty is exercised jointly by the President of the French Republic and the Bishop of Urgel. The co-princes are represented in Andorra by the 'Viguier de France' and the 'Viguier Episcopal'. Each co-prince has set up a Permanent Delegation for Andorran affairs; the Prefect of the Eastern Pyrenees is the French Permanent Delegate.

The valleys pay every second year a due of 960 francs to France and 460 pesetas to the bishop.

National flag: Blue, yellow, red (vertical).

A 'General Council of the Valleys' submits motions and proposals to the Permanent Delegations. Its 24 members are elected for 4 years; half of the council is renewed every 2 years. The council nominates a First Syndic (Syndic Procureur Général) and a Second Syndic from outside its members.

Judicial power is exercised in civil matters in the first instance, according to the plaintiff's choice, by either the Bayle Français or the Bayle Episcopal, who are nominated by the respective co-princes. The judge of appeal is appointed alternately by each co-prince; the third instance (Tercera Sala) is either the supreme court of Andorra at Perpignan or the ecclesiastical court of the Bishop at Urgel. Criminal justice is administered by the Tribunal des Corts consisting of the 2 Viguier and the judge of appeal.

During the summer tourism is the main industry of the principality.

A good road connects the Spanish and French frontiers by way of Sant Julià, Andorre-la-Vieille, les Escaldes, Encamp, Canillo and Soldeu: it crosses the Col d'Envalira (2,400 metres). Another road connects Andorre-la-Vieille with Ordino. Radio Andorra and Sud Radio are private commercial broadcasting companies. Number of receivers (1973), 6,000. French and Spanish currency are both in use.

British Consul-General: L. J. Evans (resident in Barcelona).

ARGENTINA

República Argentina

HISTORY. In 1515 Juan Díaz de Solís discovered the Río de La Plata. In 1534 Pedro de Mendoza was sent by the King of Spain to take charge of the 'Gobernación y Capitanía de las tierras del Río de La Plata', and in Feb. 1536 he founded the city of the 'Puerto de Santa María del Buen Aire'. In 1810 the population rose against Spanish rule, and in 1816 Argentina proclaimed its independence. Civil wars and anarchy followed until, in 1853, stable government was established.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. Until 16 March 1949 the Constitution of the Argentine Republic was that of 1853, with modifications of 1860, 1866 and 1898. On the date mentioned a new constitution drafted by the Perón government and passed by the Constitutional Convention elected 5 Dec. 1948 came into force giving the Government great powers over the national economy. At a National Constituent Assembly held in Sante Fé Sept.-Nov. 1957 it was decided to revert to the 1853 constitution as amended up to 1898; thereafter the President and Vice-President were to be elected through electoral colleges by popular vote for 6-year terms. The President was not to be immediately re-elected. The Vice-President was to preside over the Senate. The President would be Commander-in-Chief of the Armed Services and would make appointments to all civil services and Judicial Offices. The President would be responsible with the Cabinet for the Executive. Both President and Vice-President must be Roman Catholic and of Argentine birth.

The National Congress consisted of a Senate and House of Deputies: the Senate with 2 representatives from the Capital and each province (with a total of 46 seats), elected by popular vote for 9 years (one-third retiring every 3 years). The House of Deputies was to have 192 seats, each deputy being elected for 4 years and half the seats renewable each 2 years. The 2 Chambers meet annually from 30 Sept. to 2 May. Since 1912 voting has been free, secret and obligatory. Women were enfranchised on 9 Sept. 1947; beginning with the presidential election on 11 Nov. 1951, all women 18 years of age or older must vote. Equal suffrage was confirmed by a revisionary law of Aug. 1961.

The military leaders supported by the Navy and Air Force staged a coup d'état on 27 June 1966, and the temporary Revolutionary Junta of the Commanders-in-Chief of the three Armed Services deposed Dr Illia and his Government elected in 1963. The provincial governors were dismissed and the national and provincial legislatures dissolved, as were all political parties. A former Commander-in-Chief of the Army, Lieut.-Gen. Onganía, was appointed President and the Junta dissolved. The previous Constitution remained in force in so far as it was consistent with the statutes and objectives of the Revolution.

In Aug. 1967 a law was promulgated decreeing the registration of communists and excluding them from holding any public office, any position in employers' and workers' trade unions, and any teaching post in state and private schools.

The following is a list of Presidents from 1946 onwards:

Gen. Juan Domingo Perón, 4 June 1946-22 Sept. 1955. (Deposed.)

Gen. Eduardo Lonardi, 23 Sept.-13 Nov. 1955. (Deposed.)

Dr Arturo Frondizi, 23 Feb. 1958-29 March 1962. (Deposed.)

Dr José María Guido, 29 March 1962-12 Oct. 1963.

Dr Arturo Illia, 12 Oct. 1963-June 1966. (Deposed.)

Gen. Juan Carlos Onganía, 29 June 1966-8 June 1970. (Deposed.)

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. From 1958 until the June 1966 Revolution apart from the period March 1962 to Oct. 1963, the governors were elected for terms of either 3 or 4 years. The Provinces elected their own Legislature and have control over their own internal affairs. After the Revolution of June 1966 the governors were appointed by the President and are responsible to him.

In 1970 the urban population, i.e., in communities of 2,000 or more inhabitants, was 72% of the total; 36% of the inhabitants lived in greater Buenos Aires; of the national total, 11,601,155 were men and 11,761,049 women; foreign born, 2,180,918.

The population is overwhelmingly European in origin (principally from Italy and Spain) with little mixture with the aborigines. The dwindling Indian population is estimated at from 20,000 to 30,000. Immigration was, under the Perón Constitution, restricted to white persons, exception being made for the relatives of non-white persons (Japanese, etc.) already resident. An agreement signed in Buenos Aires on 19 Oct. 1964 provided for immigration of French subjects formerly resident in North Africa.

Movement of population:

In 1970 births were 20·9 (per 1,000 population); deaths, 8·4; migrations, 1·2.

The population of the capital, Buenos Aires (census 1970), was 2,972,453; and, in 1,000: Rosario, 798; Córdoba, 798; La Plata, 408; Tucumán, 326; Santa Fé, 312; Bahía Blanca, 191; Paraná, 189; Mendoza, 118.

RELIGION. The Roman Catholic religion is supported by the State.

In 1888, civil marriage was established in the republic. Divorce was made legal in Dec. 1954 but ceased to be so by a decree of 1 March 1956.

The Department of Worship is under the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The tax exemption enjoyed by some religious establishments has been derogated. There are at present 2 Cardinal-Archbishops. 11 Archbishops and 46 bishops. The clergy has 10 seminaries. On 10 Oct. 1966 Argentina returned to the Vatican the right to appoint bishops and archbishops, who had been nominated by the Argentine Government since 1853.

EDUCATION. Education is free (subsidized by the central and provincial governments), secular and compulsory for children from 6 to 14 years of age. In 1968 the 25,609 primary schools had 3,480,534 pupils and 180,423 teachers. In 1968, 3,906 secondary, normal and special schools had 887,236 pupils and 122,394 teachers, and (1952) 1,132 incorporated secondary schools had 153,926 pupils. Of the 12·68m. registered voters in Argentina on 31 Dec. 1966, 9·1% were illiterate.

There are national universities at Córdoba (founded 1613), with, 1966, 47,000 students; Buenos Aires (1821), with 81,000 students; La Plata (1897), with 57,000 students; Tucumán (1914), with 8,000 students; the National University of the Litoral, in Santa Fé, with branches in Rosario (1920), and in Corrientes (1920), with 15,000 students; the National University of Cuyo, with 14,700 students, and that of the North-East, with 4,300 students. In 1956 the Technological Institute in Bahía Blanca was raised to the status of 'Universidad del Sur'; (1968) 7,000 students. Since 29 July 1966 these formerly autonomous institutions are under the authority of the Ministry of Education.

CINEMAS (1966). Cinemas number 2,158, with seating capacity of 1·1m.

NEWSPAPERS (1966). Daily newspapers numbered over 400, with an aggregate daily circulation of 3,250,000; 75% of this was shared by the dailies of Buenos Aires.

WELFARE. Free medical attention is obtainable from public hospitals. Many trade unions provide medical, dental and maternity services for their members and dependants. Welfare services are scanty in places distant from urban centres. A Ministry of Social Welfare was set up in 1966.

JUSTICE. Justice is administered by federal and provincial courts. The former deal only with cases of a national character, or in which different provinces or inhabitants of different provinces are parties. The chief federal court is the Supreme Court, with 5 judges at Buenos Aires. Other federal courts are the appeal courts, at Buenos Aires, Bahía Blanca, La Plata, Córdoba, Mendoza, Tucumán and Resistencia. Each province has its own judicial system, with a Supreme Court (generally so designated) and several minor chambers. Trial by jury is established by the Constitution for criminal cases, but never practised, except occasionally in the provinces of Buenos Aires and Córdoba.

A new code of civil and commercial procedures came into force on 1 Feb. 1968.

The police force is centralized under the Federal Security Council.

FINANCE. Currency. The monetary system is on a gold-exchange standard, the unit for foreign transactions being, nominally, the peso oro (gold peso) and for domestic transactions, the peso moneda nacional (paper peso), legal tender for all domestic debts.

The gold peso weighs 1.6129 grammes of gold 0.900 fine; it is divided into 100 centavos, but gold is not in circulation. Circulation consists chiefly of paper notes (issued since 1897) ranging from 10,000 down to 50 pesos. The coins actually circulating, 1968, were steel-nickel, 25, 10, 5, 1 peso and 50 centavos. The government is considering (1969) the possibility of introducing a 'new peso', equivalent to 100 of the present units of currency. It has been officially stated that the change will begin gradually from Jan. 1970, to allow time for the consolidation of monetary stability and the design of new notes.

Due to constant inflation, the international value of the peso has fallen steadily. In Oct. 1955 it was 18 to US$1; in Dec. 1965 it was officially 189 to US$1. The buying and selling of foreign exchange is now controlled, and with certain minor exceptions may only be through authorized institutions. On 25 Aug. 1971 the rate of exchange was officially 5 new pesos to US$1.

Monetary circulation, 622,200m. pesos on 31 Dec. 1967. Gold and foreign-exchange reserves were equal to US$331.5m. on 30 April 1967.

Budget. The financial year commences on 1 Nov. Budget estimates of total ordinary receipts and expenditures in 1m. paper pesos:

	1964	1965	1966	1967	1968	1969
Revenue	205,925	293,921	338,656	524,510	639,870	977,300
Expenditure	298,128	359,423	480,100	620,500	688,400	1,020,500

Proposed government expenditure for 1968 includes: Education, 152,000m.; social welfare, 43,300m.; defence, 152,300m.; economic development, 372,700m.; public debt service, 66,600m.

Total foreign investments at 31 Dec. 1959 were estimated at US$1,991m. including USA, 31.1% and UK, 20%. Further important investments in chemicals, motor vehicles, oil refineries and the manufacture of machinery have taken place since then, totalling over US$286m.

The national foreign debt in Sept. 1969 totalled about US$545m.

DEFENCE. Army. The Army is a National Militia, service in which is compulsory for all citizens from their 20th to their 45th year. Naturalized citizens are exempt for a period of 10 years. For the first 10 years the men belong to the 'active' Army, or first line. After completing 10 years in the first line the men pass to the National Guard, and serve in it for another 10 years, finishing their service with 5 years in the Territorial Guard; the latter is mobilized only in case of war. The period of continuous service, or training in the ranks with the permanent forces, is for 1 year for the Army or Air Force, and 14 months for the Navy. The reservists can be called out for training periodically.

The territory of the republic is divided into 5 military districts for administrative purposes. The Army is organized in 4 army corps; it consists of 2 armoured and 1 infantry brigade, 3 mountain brigades, 1 airborne brigade, 2 mechanized, 1 cavalry brigade and 10 artillery regiments.

In 1973 the army was 85,000 strong, of whom 60,000 were National Service men and the remainder, an officer corps of 5,000 and 15,000 n.c.o.s, all of whom were career regulars.

The trained reserve numbers about 250,000, of whom 200,00 belong to the National Guard and 50,000 to the Territorial Guard.

² Ex-Karel Doorman, purchased from the Netherlands in 1968, ex-Venerable, purchased from UK in 1948.

³ Ex-Phoenix and ex-Boise, purchased from the USA in 1951.

There are also 2 old ex-US submarines, 10 old destroyers, 3 frigates, 2 corvettes, 4 coastal minesweepers, 2 minehunters, 11 patrol vessels, 3 patrol craft, 3 survey ships, 1 training ship, 4 transports, 3 oilers, 1 dock landing ship, 5 landing ships, 29 landing craft, 1 icebreaker, 1 salvage vessel and 13 tugs.

The new construction programme includes 2 modified Type 42 guided missile armed destroyers, 2 diesel powered hunter-killer (anti-submarine) patrol submarines, 2 fast patrol vessels and a helicopter carrying tank-landing ship.

The active personnel of the Navy comprises 31,130 (2,620 officers and 28,510 men, including 12,000 conscripts, who have to serve 2 years). There is a corps of coast artillery of 450 men, a naval school and a school of mechanics.

The Naval Aviation Service, formed on 17 Oct. 1919, has some 2,000 personnel, in 4 wings. Aircraft acquired in recent years include 16 A-4B Skyhawk attack bombers, 6 Aermacchi M.B.326 light jet armed trainers, 6 P-2H Neptune and 6 S-2A Tracker anti-submarine aircraft, navalized Harvard trainers, and 45 North American armed T-28s bought from France, of which only the last 3 types can be launched from the Argentine aircraft carrier with existing equipment; various training, transport and general purpose aircraft, including helicopters.

Air Force. The Air Force, founded on 10 Aug. 1912 and autonomous since 4 Jan. 1945, is organized into Air Operations, Air Regions, Materiel and Personnel Commands. Air Operations Command, responsible for all operational flying, is made up of 5 air brigades, each with up to 3 groups of approximate squadron strength operating from a single base. No. 1 Air Brigade is a military air transport service, with responsibility also for LADE (state airline) operations into areas of Argentina not served by civilian companies. Its equipment includes 5 C-130E Hercules and 11 F.27 Friendship/Troopship turboprop transports, 12 C-47s, 5 Twin Otters, 32 Guarani IIs, the Presidential twin-turboprop F.28 Fellowship and twin-turboprop HS 748, and many older or smaller types. No. II Air Brigade has 9 Canberra twin-jet bombers and 2 Canberra trainers and about 25 nationally built twin-engined Huanquero armed trainer and reconnaissance aircraft (being replaced by up to 70 IA 58 Pucara twin-turboprop COIN aircraft). No. IV Air Brigade comprises 3 ground attack groups equipped with about 20 F-86F Sabres and 30 Paris light jet combat and liaison aircraft. No. V Air Brigade comprises only 2 groups, with a total of about 45 A-4P Skyhawk strike aircraft. No. VII Air Brigade has 1 group with 10 Mirage IIIE fighter-bombers and 2 Mirage IIID trainers, and another with about 20 UH-1H and Hughes 500M helicopters for COIN duties. There is a flying school at Cordoba, equipped with piston-engined T-34 Mentors and Paris jets. Total strength of the Air Force is about 21,000 personnel and 375 aircraft.

AGRICULTURE. Argentina has an area of about 670,251,000 acres, of which about 41 % is pasture land, 32 % woodland and 11 % (73.73m. acres) cultivated. It was estimated (1966) that 30m. hectares were cultivated by the country's 110,600 tractors.

Argentina's wealth is based on agriculture and livestock. With about 55m. cattle she ranks fourth (eclipsed by India, 160m.; USA, 96m., and USSR, 70m.), but as an exporter of raw meat (excluding Denmark's exceptional trade in bacon) she has long led the world (pre-war average, 662,000 metric tons). In 1965 exports amounted to 483,300 metric tons carcase weight (1966: 455,038 tons) out of a total production of 2.09m. tons.

The livestock estimate (1967) showed: Cattle, 54.8m. (1973; sheep, 46m.; pigs, 3.5m.; horses (1960), 4,846,500. The Province of Buenos Aires has 38 % of the cattle. Wool production, 1971, was estimated at 179,000 tons. Exports in the wool year ending 30 Sept. 1968, 159,700 tons.

Wheat production usually exceeds 6m. metric tons (1973, provisional, 7.6m), ahead of Australia but well behind Canada and US. Other cereals and linseed are also important.

Crop statistics with area (in 1,000 hectares) and production (in 1,000 metric tons) are shown as follows:

The total grain and meat exports, in metric tons:

	Wheat	Maize	Barley	Meat
1968	2,421,120	2,892,400	187,617	409,191
1969	2,344,278	4,023,964	208,454	580,623
1970	2,301,145	5,227,983	90,877	778,500

Argentina's meat exports are calculated in terms of actual weight; not 'carcase weight', as is the international practice.

Cotton, potatoes, vine, tobacco, citrus fruit, olives, rice, soya, and yerba maté (Paraguayan tea) are also cultivated. There are 36 cane-sugar mills and 1 beet-sugar factory. Potato harvest, 1971-72, amounted to 327,900 metric tons. The area under tobacco, 1971-72, was 66,700 hectares; output 73,700 metric tons.

Before the Second World War the country was the largest grower and shipper of linseed (flaxseed), but, preferring to convert it into oil, exported virtually none from 1946 until April 1950, when export was resumed. Exports, 1965 were valued US$49,758,000. Sunflower seed, first grown by Russian immigrants in 1900, now furnishes the country's most popular edible oil. Production of tung oils, 1965, 174,500 metric tons. There are more than 10m. olive trees, of which 48% are in Mendoza. Production in 1964 was 10,304 tons. 58,660 tons of groundnut oil were produced in 1964 (mainly in Córdoba). Argentina's 20 quebracho extract factories produced 109,000 tons of extract in 1965; exports, 1964, 104,000 metric tons. Argentina is the world's largest source of tannin. Woodpulp is produced from 28 factories having about 191,000 tons total capacity; actual output keeps about 25% below this level.

Flour-milling ranks second to refrigeration. In 1964-65 Argentine mills produced 2,259,400 tons of flour.

FISHERIES. The Banco de la Nación has outlined a plan to increase fish production from 121,000 in 1963 to 200,000 tons a year. 6,636 tons of fish-meal were produced in 1963, compared with 903 tons in 1961. On 5 Jan. 1968 a government decree extended Argentina's territorial waters to 200 miles offshore. Fishing by foreign vessels inside this limit up to 12 miles from the coast would be granted.

MINING. Mining is of mainly local importance. Since 1954 it has been under state control. Argentina produced 472,300 tons of washed coal in 1968 (Río Turbio, with reserves of 300m. tons). Gold (500 fine oz., 1963), silver (1,318,150 fine oz. in 1962) and copper are worked in Catamarca, where there are also 2 tin-mines, and gold and copper in San Juan, La Rioja and the south-western territories. Iron ore (225,736 metric tons in 1967), tungsten (1,800 short tons of ore in 1962), beryllium (268,623 metric tons in 1967), mica (45 short tons in 1958), lead (42,726 tons in 1967), barites (13,800 short tons in 1963), zinc (54,408 short tons in 1967), manganese (11,000 short tons in 1963) and limestone are produced. Crude oil production in 1968 was 19.95m. cu. metres.

INDUSTRY. On 30 July 1954 a census showed 621,329 firms, of which 181,763 (employing 1,536,530 men and women) were in manufacturing and mining, 417,423 (employing 1,230,466) were in commerce and 22,143 (employing 163,916) were in construction. Of the total employed in this non-agricultural sector, 2,355,546 were men and 565,366 (19%) were women.

The National Development Plan, 1974-77, was announced in Dec. 1973 by President Perón.

Cotton yarn produced in 1967 amounted to 83,000 tons. Cement output, 1968, was 4.2m. metric tons. 1965 production of pig-iron was 662,500 tons; crude steel (1968), 1.55m. tons; finished rolled products, 1,843,000 tons. Electric power production, 1968, was 13,496,559 kwh.

Foreign investment is encouraged by 10-year tax reduction, starting at 100% for the first 4 years, then reducing to 10% after 10 years for approved industries. Alternatively companies may deduct between 30-70% of their investment from their tax. Machinery and parts not available locally may be imported duty free and there are specialized export incentives.

TOURISM. In 1966, 323,159 tourists visited Argentina, contributing about US$52.3m. to the economy.

TRADE UNIONS. According to the 1965 national census of workers' associations there are 502 trade unions with a total of nearly 1,764,700 paying members. Of these unions 240 are connected with manufacturing industries, 5 with construction, 36 with gas, water, electricity and sanitary services, 70 with commerce, 62 with transport, storage and communications and 117 with other services. The majority of these unions are affiliated to the General Confederation of Labour. The economically active population was estimated at the end of 1964 to total 8,422,700, of which 6,623,700 were males and 1,799,000 females. The main groups are agriculture and fishing (19%), manufacturing industries (20%), commerce (12%) and other services (28%).

Legal status which confers authority to negotiate wage agreements and other privileges is granted by the Secretary of Labour (Ministry of Economy and Labour) to one union in each industry or activity. The minimum wage law provides for a twice-yearly adjustment of the minimum wage to take account of cost-of-living changes. On 1 May 1966 the minimum monthly wage for a family consisting of a man, wife and 2 children were fixed at 22,500 pesos and that for a single man at 15,750 pesos.

The Trade Union Law was revised by decree in 1966. Political activity within the unions is prohibited, finances are placed under government supervision and all strikes must be decided by a two-thirds majority obtained by secret ballot.

COMMERCE. The control of imports by permits and quotas was abolished on 30 Dec. 1958. Exchange controls were re-imposed in April 1964.

Import values include charges for carriage, insurance and freight; export values are on a f.o.b. basis. Real values of foreign trade (in US$1m.), exclusive of coin and bullion:

COMMUNICATIONS. From 1 Nov. 1948 all land, sea, river and air transport was under the control of the Ministry of Transport.

SHIPPING. The merchant fleet, 31 Dec. 1954 (registered with Lloyd's), consisted of 400 vessels (over 100 gross tons) of 1,070,995 gross tons; the tanker fleet had 56 vessels of 340,421 gross tons. The total was 1.02m. GRT in Dec. 1966.

The state-owned ocean and river fleet (1963) included 216 vessels of over 1,000 GRT which totalled 1,200,061 GRT.

RAILWAYS. On 1 March 1948 Argentina became the owner of her entire railway system, consisting of 18 different railways with a total length of 42,193 km. (Sole exception was a railway, 900 km of metre-gauge line, belonging to the Province of Buenos Aires, not nationalized until 20 Aug. 1951.) The amalgamation brought together 7 government railways (mostly small) with 8,347 miles (and some 12% of the aggregate revenue), 3 French-owned railways (2,660 miles and 7% of the revenue) and 8 British-owned railways (15,561 miles and 80% of the revenue). Legal formalities were completed on 5 May 1949. The present system comprises 6 railways with a total route-mileage of 24,573 (metre, 4 ft 8½ in. and 5 ft 6 in. gauges). A new line linking Buenos Aires with Pôrto Alegre, Brazil, opened in 1974.

ROADS. In 1969, 587,186 miles of national and provincial highways were open and 14% were metalled. The 4 main roads constituting Argentina's portion of the Pan-American Highway were opened to traffic in 1942. Motor vehicles are produced at some 11,000 per month, and in 1968 there were on the roads 1.5m. cars and (1964) 553,450 lorries and buses.

AVIATION. Commercial airlines flew a total of 50,995,500 km in 1968, carrying 2,122,000 passengers and 33.4m. tons of freight, of which air-mail was 1,608 tons. Lines operating international flights to and from Buenos Aires include BUA, Aerolineas Argentinas, Air France, Iberia, Alitalia, KLM, Swissair, SAS, Canadian Pacific Airlines, Lufthansa and PANAM.

POST. In 1949 the telephone service was nationalized; instruments numbered 1,825,532 in 1972. Privately owned exchanges operated 122,005 instruments. There were, in 1945, 4,382 post offices. BANKING. The Central Bank continues the normal functions of a national institution.

On 31 July 1948 there were 44 banks, each with capital of 1m. paper pesos or over (including the Banco de la Nación, with 36% of the total assets of the banking system), consisting of 9 provincial banks, 25 domestic banks and 10 foreign banks, all of which are shareholders in the Central Bank. The Banco de la Nación (founded in 1891) has 306 branches and agencies, including one at Asunción, Paraguay. There are 5 Stock Exchanges.

AUSTRIA

Republik Österreich

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. Austria recovered its sovereignty and independence on 27 July 1955 by the coming into force of the Austrian State Treaty between the United Kingdom, the United States of America, the Soviet Union and France on the one part and the Republic of Austria on the other part (signed on 15 May).

On 12 March 1938 Austria was forcibly absorbed in the German Reich until it was liberated by the American, British, French and Soviet armies in spring 1945. Already in the Moscow Declaration of Oct. 1943, Great Britain, the USA and the USSR had resolved upon the re-establishment of a free and independent Austria.

On 27 April 1945 Dr Karl Renner set up a provisional government which restored the Republic of Austria in the spirit of the Constitution of 1920/29, and was recognized by the Four-Power Allied Control Council on 20 Oct. 1945. The last occupation forces left Austria in Oct. 1955.

President of the Republic: Franz Jonas, former Lord Mayor of Vienna, elected on 23 May 1965 and re-elected on 25 April 1971 by 2,487,239 votes against 2,227,809 cast for Dr Kurt Waldheim.

On 10 Oct. 1971 the elections were held for the National Assembly, which returned 93 Socialists, 80 People's Party, 10 Freedom Party.

From 1 Jan. 1971 the number of members of the National Council was increased from 165 to 183. The government of the Socialist Party which was formed in Oct. 1971 was composed as follows:

Chancellor: Dr Bruno Kreisky.

Vice-Chancellor and Social Welfare: Ing. Rudolf Häuser. Foreign Affairs: Dr Rudolf Kirchschläger. Interior: Otto Rösch. Agriculture and Forestry: Ing. Dr Oskar Weihs. Transport: Erwin Frühbauer. Justice: Dr Christian Broda. Finance: Dr Hannes Androsch. Education and the Arts: Dr Fred Sinowatz. Trade, Commerce and Industry: Dr Josef Staribacher. Defence: Karl Lütgendorf. Construction and Technology: Josef Moser. Science and Research: Dr Hertha Firnberg. Health and Environment: Dr Ingrid Leodolter. Nationalized Industries: Dr Eugen Veselsky (Minister of State); Family Policy: Elfriede Karl (Minister of State).

The Federal Council (Bundesrat) which represents the federal provinces has 54 members and (1971) the Socialist Party had 29 members and the People's Party 25. The Nationalrat and Bundesrat together form the National Assembly.

National flag: Red, white, red (horizontal).

National anthem: Land der Berge, Land am Strome (words by Paula Preradovic; tune by W. A. Mozart).

The official language is German.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. The Republic of Austria comprises 9 Federal States (Vienna, Lower Austria, Upper Austria, Salzburg, Styria, Carinthia, Tirol, Vorarlberg, Burgenland). There is in every province an elected Provincial Assembly.

Every commune has a Council, which chooses one of its number to be head of the Commune (burgomaster) and a committee for the administration and execution of its resolutions.

BAHRAIN

HISTORY. Treaties with Britain of 1882 and 1892 were replaced by a treaty of friendship which was signed on 15 Aug. 1971. Under the earlier treaties Britain had been responsible for Bahrain's defence and foreign relations. On the same day Bahrain declared its independence.

AREA AND POPULATION. The Bahrain islands form an archipelago in the Arabian Gulf, between the Qatar peninsula and the mainland of Saudi Arabia. The total area is about 255 sq. miles. Bahrain ('Two Seas'), largest island, is 30 miles long and 10 miles wide. Muharraq, to the north-east, 4 miles long and 1 mile wide, is connected with Bahrain by a causeway, nearly 1.5 miles long, carrying a motor road. Other islands are Sitra, to the east, 3 miles long and 1 mile wide; Umm An-Nassan, to the west, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles by $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles; Jidda, also to the west, 1 mile by $\frac{1}{2}$ mile, the Hawar group off Qatar and several islets, some uninhabited. From Sitra oil pipelines and a causeway carrying a road extend out to sea for 3 miles to a deep-water anchorage. The islands are low lying, the highest ground being a hill in the centre of Bahrain, 450 ft high.

The population in 1971 (census) was 216,815. The majority of the people are Moslem Arabs.

Manama, the capital of the state and the commercial centre, is situated at the northern end of the largest island and extends for $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles along the shore. It has a population of 89,728 (1971 census). Electricity from the government power-station in Manama supplies light and power in Manama, Muharraq (41,143), Hidd (5,230), Rifa'a (9,403) and 'Sa Town (7,501) and the villages. Water is obtained from artesian wells, and there is a piped supply in Manama, Muharraq, Rifa'a and most villages.

Reigning Shaikh: The ruling family, the Al Khalifah, an Arab dynasty, who have been in power since 1782. The present ruler, HH Shaikh Isa bin Sulman Al-Khalifa (born 1933) succeeded on 2 Nov. 1961. Heir Apparent and Minister of Defence: Shaikh Hamed bin Isa Al-Khalifa.

Flag: Scarlet, with white serrated border on hoist.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. A Constituent Assembly met in Dec. 1972 to draft a Constitution and this was published in 1973. A National Assembly with a 4-year life will sit for the first time in 1974. Bahrain is administered by a cabinet, which was formed in 1971 to succeed the Council of State.

Prime Minister: Shaikh Khalifah bin Sulman Al-Khalifah.

Defence: Shaikh Hamed bin Isa Al-Khalifah. Foreign Affairs and acting Minister of Information: Shaikh Mohammed bin Mubarak Al-Khalifah. Finance and National Economy: Sayyed Mahmud Alawi. Development and Engineering Services: Yusef A. Shirawi. Education: Shaikh Abdul Aziz bin Mohammed Al-Khalifa. Municipalities and Agriculture: Shaikh Abdulla bin Khalid Al-Khalifah. Health: Dr Ali Fakhroo. Justice: Shaikh Khalid bin Mohammed Al-Khalifah. Labour and Social Affairs: Ibrahim Humaidan. Minister of State for Legal Affairs: Dr Husain Al Baharna. Minister of State for Cabinet Affairs: Jawad Arrayedh.

EDUCATION. There were, in 1972, 117 schools for boys and girls with 2,614 teachers and 54,465 pupils. Three boys' secondary schools have a commercial studies section. There are 2 boys' technical schools at secondary level, with 1,614 pupils. In addition there are 7 private schools. The Men's Teacher Training College (established 1966) and the Women's Teacher Training College (established 1967) give 2-year courses. Approximately 450 Bahrainis have graduated from universities abroad. The Gulf Technical School opened in Bahrain in Sept. 1968.

HEALTH. There is a free medical service for all residents of Bahrain. There are 11 government hospitals with 970 beds, an American mission hospital and an oil company hospital.

FINANCE. Currency. The Bahrain dinar is divided into 1,000 fls. The Bahrain currency board issues notes of 10, 5, 1, $\frac{1}{2}$ and $\frac{1}{4}$ dinars and 100 fls, and coins of 500, 100, 50, 25, 10, 5 and 1 fls.

Budget. The revenue of the state is derived from oil royalties and from customs duties, which are 10% ad valorem for luxury goods and 5% for essential goods. The exceptions are liquor (50%) and tobacco (35%). Total revenues in 1970, BD 15m.; 1971, BD 18m.; 1972, BD 26m.; 1973, BD 32.5m.

On 2 Jan. 1958 Manama was declared a free transit port and the former 2% transit duty was abolished, but storage charges are levied.

PRODUCTION. In 1932 oil was discovered. Operations are being conducted by the Bahrain Petroleum Company, registered in Canada but owned by US interests, under a concession granted by the Shaikh. Production of oil in 1969 was 27.77m. US bbls. A large oil refinery on Bahrain Island, besides treating crude oil produced locally, also processes oil from Saudi Arabia transported by pipeline. Refinery throughput in 1973 was 255,000 US bbls (42 gallons) daily.

Under the terms of the agreement signed between Bahrain and Saudi Arabia in 1958, Bahrain will receive 25% of the profits on any oil produced in the Abu Saafa area of sea between Bahrain and Saudi Arabia. Aramco, which is responsible for the development of this field, began production in 1966.

Bahrain is being developed as a major manufacturing state, the first important enterprise being the Aluminium Bahrain Smelter, which is operated by a company whose shareholders include the Bahrain Government and British, Swedish, West German and US interests. The aluminium operation is the largest non-oil industry in the Middle East. Ancillary industries being developed around aluminium smelting include the production of aluminium powder and paste. Other projects at present under consideration include the further development of marine industries and the expansion of Bahrain's tourist potential.

In addition to the traditional minor industries such as boat-building, weaving, pottery, etc., other modern industries have developed, which include the manufacture of building materials, soft drinks, drinking straws, paper bags, woollen garments, plastic and other consumer goods. There is also an important fishing industry and a fairly large farming community. The most important crops are dates and vegetables, and there is also dairy and poultry farming.

The pearling industry for which Bahrain used to be famous has considerably declined. Only about 10 boats visit the pearl banks each year, as compared with the 600-1,000 that were employed 30 years ago.

Bahrain's traditional position as the entrepôt of the Southern Gulf has been supplemented by the development of Mina Sulman—the new modern harbour—as a free transit and industrial area. Local and international companies have developed industries in this area, which is also used as a storage centre for firms selling elsewhere in the Gulf. The facilities offered by Mina Sulman include engineering and ship repairing yards; the Kanoo slipway is probably the largest between Rotterdam and Hong Kong.

A large drydock to take tankers of up to 375,000 DWT tons is to be built in Bahrain under the auspices of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries. OAPEC will be in partnership with Lisnav of Portugal and Kawasaki Heavy Industries of Japan.

COMMERCE. In 1971 imports totalled BD 105,005,000; exports and re-exports, BD 28,405,000. Chief imports were (in BD 1,000): Manufactured goods, 30,624; machinery and transport equipment, 33,332; food and live animals, 14,536; chemicals, 7,134

Exports and re-exports (in BD 1,000) went to Saudi Arabia, 14,016; Kuwait, 3,418; Dubai, 1,542; Iran, 1,043.

Import of arms and ammunition and telecommunication equipment is subject to special permission; the sale of alcoholic liquor is restricted and the import of cultured pearls is forbidden.

Total trade between Bahrain and UK, in £1,000 sterling (British Board of Trade returns):

	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	2,072	1,554	4,046	8,635	15,811
Exports and re-exports from UK	12,768	24,340	25,181	19,562	24,338

COMMUNICATIONS. Steamships of several lines and British Airways aircraft make regular calls. The airport, situated at Muharraq, can take the largest aircraft. Gulf Aviation, Middle East Airlines, Pakistan International Airways, Qantas, Kuwait Airways, Air India International and Saudi Arabian Airlines also operate to and from Bahrain. Bahrain International Airport is the Arabian Gulf's main air communication centre. It has recently been expanded, the runway has been extended to 12,000 ft and a new terminal building constructed to meet the demands of the Jumbojets that will start using Bahrain as a main stopping point on the routes between the Far East and Australia and Europe and the Middle East. There were, in 1971, 11,627 telephones, not counting 1,959 telephones on the oil company exchange. There is a state-operated radio station.

BANKING. Banking facilities are provided by the Bank of Bahrain, the Bank of Bahrain and Kuwait and branches of the Chartered Bank, the British Bank of the Middle East, the Arab Bank, Habib Bank (Overseas), United Bank, First National City Bank, Banque du Caire, Chase Manhattan, Bank Melli and the Rafidain Bank.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. British and US standard weights and measures are understood. The following local weights are in use: 1 tola = 180 grains = 11.641 grammes; 39 tolas = 1 ratl (lb.) = 0.454 kg; 4 ratls = 1 Ruba' (4 lb.) = 1.816 kg; 15 Ruba'as = 1 Maund (56 lb.) = 54.424 kg.

BELGIUM

Royaume de Belgique—Koninkrijk België

HISTORY. The kingdom of Belgium formed itself into an independent state in 1830, having from 1815 been part of the Netherlands. The secession was decreed on 4 Oct. 1830 by a provisional government, established in consequence of a revolution which broke out at Brussels, on 25 Aug. 1830. A National Congress elected Prince Leopold of Saxe-Coburg King of the Belgians on 4 June 1831; he ascended the throne 21 July 1831.

By the Treaty of London, 15 Nov. 1831, the neutrality of Belgium was guaranteed by Austria, Russia, Great Britain and Prussia. It was not until after the signing of the Treaty of London, 19 April 1839, which established peace between King Leopold I and the King of the Netherlands, that all the states of Europe recognized the kingdom of Belgium. In the Treaty of Versailles (28 June 1919) it is stated that as the treaties of 1839 'no longer conform to the requirements of the situation', these are abrogated and will be replaced by other treaties.

KING. Baudouin, born 7 Sept. 1930, succeeded his father, Leopold III, on 17 July 1951, when he took the oath on the constitution before the two Chambers; married on 15 Dec. 1960 to Fabiola de Mora y Aragón, daughter of the Conde de Mora and Marqués de Casa Riera.

Father of the King. Leopold III, born 3 Nov. 1901, son of the late King Albert (died 17 Feb. 1934) and of Queen Elisabeth, Duchess of Bavaria (died 23 Nov. 1965); married (1) on 4 Nov. 1926 to Princess Astrid of Sweden, died 29 Aug. 1935, and (2) on 11 Sept. (civil marriage, 6 Dec.) 1941, to Mlle Mary Lilian Baels, Princess de Rethy, daughter of Hendrik Baels, formerly Minister of Agriculture. Leopold III succeeded to the throne on 23 Feb. 1934; on 20 Sept. 1944 parliament elected Prince Charles, Count of Flanders, Leopold's brother, as Regent of the Kingdom. The Regency ended on 22 July 1950; but King Leopold delegated his powers to Prince Baudouin on 11 Aug. 1950, and abdicated on 16 July 1951.

Brother and Sister of the King. (1) Josephine Charlotte, Princess of Belgium, born 11 Oct. 1927; married to Prince Jean of Luxembourg, 9 April 1953; (2) Albert, Prince of Liège, born 6 June 1934; married to Paola Ruffio di Calabria, 2 July 1959; offspring: Prince Philippe, born 15 April 1960; Princess Astrid, born 5 June 1962; Prince Laurent, born 19 Oct. 1963. Half-brother and half-sisters of the King. Prince Alexandre, born 18 July 1942; Princess Marie Christine, born 6 Feb. 1951; Princess Maria-Esmeralda, born 30 Sept. 1956.

Uncle and Aunt of the King. (1) Prince Charles, Count of Flanders, born 10 Oct. 1903. (2) Princess Marie-José, born 4 Aug. 1906, married to Prince Umberto (King Umberto II of Italy in 1946) on 8 Jan. 1930.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. According to the constitution of 1831, Belgium is a constitutional, representative and hereditary monarchy. The legislative power is vested in the King, the Senate and the Chamber of Representatives. The royal succession is in direct male line in the order of primogeniture. By marriage without the King's consent, however, the right of succession is forfeited, but may be restored by the King with the consent of the two Chambers. No act of the King can have effect unless countersigned by one of his Ministers, who thus becomes responsible for it. The King convokes, prorogues and dissolves the Chambers. In default of male heirs, the King may nominate his successor with the consent of the Chambers. If the successor be under 18 years of age the two Chambers meet together for the purpose of nominating a regent during the minority.

National flag: Black, yellow, red (vertical).

National anthem: Après des siècles d'esclavage (La Brabançonne; words by Jenneval, 1830; tune by F. van Campenhout, 1930).

French, Dutch and German are official languages.

Those sections of the Belgian Constitution which regulate the organization of the legislative power were revised in Oct. 1921. For both Senate and Chamber all elections are held on the principle of universal suffrage.

The Senate consists of members elected for 4 years, partly directly and partly indirectly. The number elected directly is equal to half the number of members of the Chamber of Representatives. The constituent body is similar to that which elects deputies to the Chamber; the minimum age of electors is 21 years, and the minimum length of residence required is 6 months. Women were given the suffrage at parliamentary elections on 24 March 1948. In the direct elections of members both of the Senate and Chamber of Representatives the principle of proportional representation was introduced by law of 29 Dec. 1899.

Senators are elected indirectly by the provincial councils, on the basis of 1 for 200,000 inhabitants. Every addition of 125,000 inhabitants gives the right to 1 senator more. Each provincial council elects at least 3 senators. There are at present 48 provincial senators. No one, during 2 years preceding the election, must have been a member of the council appointing him. Senators are elected by the Senate itself in the proportion of half the preceding category. The senators belonging to these two latter categories are also elected by the method of proportional representation. All senators must be at least 40 years of age. They receive 425,000 francs per annum. Sons of the King, or failing these, Belgian princes of the reigning branch of the royal family, are by right senators at the age of 18, but have no voice in the deliberations till the age of 25 years; this prerogative is hardly ever used.

The members of the Chamber of Representatives are elected directly by the electoral body. Their number, at present 212 (law of 3 April 1965), is proportional to the population, and cannot exceed one for every 40,000 inhabitants. They sit for 4 years. Deputies must be not less than 25 years of age, and resident in Belgium. Each deputy has an annual allowance of 425,000 francs. Senator and deputies have also free railway passes.

The Senate and Chamber meet annually in October and must sit for at least 40 days; but the King has the power of convoking extraordinary sessions and of dissolving them either simultaneously or separately. In the latter case a new election must take place within 40 days and a meeting of the chambers within 2 months. An adjournment cannot be made for a period exceeding 1 month without the consent of the Chambers.

Parties in the Senate, at 1 Jan. 1974: Christian Social, 34; Socialist, 30, Freedom and Progress, 17; Front Démocrate francophone and Rassemblement Wallon, 12; Flemish People's Union, 12; Communist, 1.

Parties in the Chamber elected 7 Nov. 1971: Christian Social, 67 (previously 69); Socialists, 61 (59); Freedom and Progress, 34 (47); Flemish People's Union, 21 (20); Front Démocrate francophone and Rassemblement Wallon, 24 (12); Communist, 5 (5).

The Liberal Party, founded in June 1846, on 8 Oct. 1961 changed its name to that of Party of Freedom and Progress.

The Executive Government (Christian Social and Socialist), formed on 20 Jan. 1972, was composed as follows:

Prime Minister: Gaston Eyskens (CS). Deputy Prime Minister and Economic Affairs: André Cools (S). Minister without Portfolio in charge of Scientific Policy and Programmes: Théo Lefèvre (CS). Foreign Affairs: Pierre Harmel (CS). Development Aid: Raymond Scheyven (CS). Foreign Trade: Hendrik Fayat (S). Defence: Paul Willem Segers (CS). Finance: Baron Jean Snoy et d'Oppuers (CS). Public Works: Joseph de Saeger (CS). Transport: Alfred Bertrand (CS). Post and Telegraphs: Edward Anseele (S). Interior: Lucien Harmegnies (S). Civil Service: René Pêtre (CS). Justice: Alphons Vranckx (S). Education (Dutch): Pierre Vermeylen (S). Education (French): Abel Dubois (S). Culture (French): Albert Parisi (CS). Culture (Dutch): Frans van Mechelen (CS). Relations between Dutch- and French-speaking Communities: Leo Tindemans (CS). Agriculture: Charles Héger (CS). Middle Class: Charles Hanin (CS). Labour and Employment: Louis Major (S). Social Security: Placide de Paepe (CS). Public Health: Louis Namèche (S). Family Affairs and Housing: Gustave Breyne (S). There are also 10 Secretaries of State.

The government resigned in Jan. 1974 and on 12 April 1974 no new government had been formed.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. The 9 provinces and 2,359 communes of Belgium have a large measure of autonomous government. According to the law of 15 April 1920, changed by the law of 1 July 1969, all Belgians over 18 years of age without distinction of sex, who have been domiciled for at least 6 months, have the right to vote in communal elections. Proportional representation is applied to the communal elections, and communal councils are to be renewed every 6 years. In each commune there is a college composed of the burgomaster as the president and a certain number of aldermen.

AREA AND POPULATION. Belgium has an area of 30,513 sq. km (11,778 sq. miles). The Belgium exclave of Baarle-Hertog in the Netherlands has an area of 7 sq. km, and a population (31 Dec. 1970) of 1,098 males and 1,060 females.

By an agreement signed on 23 Sept. 1956 the frontier with Germany was slightly readjusted.

SOCIAL WELFARE. Social security is based on the law of Dec. 1944. It applies to all workers subject to an employment contract, and is administered by the Central National Office of Social Security (ONSS), which collects from employers and employees all contributions referring to family allowances, health insurance, old age insurance, holidays and unemployment. These sums are distributed by the Central Office to the various institutions concerned with these benefits. Insurance against unemployment is organized through a common fund, which also undertakes to retrain the unemployed for another employment while providing for their families. Since 1944 further laws have increased allowances, made fresh provisions for housing (1945), injuries while working, professional illnesses, etc. (1948).

Apart from private charity, the poor are assisted by the communes through the agency of the Commissions d'assistance publique. Provisions of a national character have been made for looking after war orphans and men disabled in the war. Certain other establishments, either state or provincial, provide for the needs of deaf-mutes and the blind, and of children who are placed under the control of the courts. Provision is also made for repressing begging and providing shelter for the homeless.

BHUTÁN

Druk-yul

HISTORY. In 1774 the East India Company concluded a treaty with the ruler of Bhután, but repeated outrages on British subjects committed by the Bhután hillmen led from time to time to punitive measures, usually ending in the temporary or permanent annexation of various duars or submontane tracts with passes leading to the hills. Under a treaty signed in Nov. 1865 the Bhután Government was granted an annual subsidy. By an amending treaty concluded in Jan. 1910 the British Government undertook to exercise no interference in the internal affairs of Bhután, and the Bhután Government agreed to be guided by the advice of the British Government in regard to its external relations.

The Government of India concluded a fresh treaty with Bhután on 8 Aug. 1949. Under this treaty the Government of Bhután continues to be guided by the Government of India in regard to its external relations, and the Government of India have undertaken not to interfere in the internal administration of Bhután. The subsidy paid to Bhután has been increased to Rs 500,000, and the Government of India agreed to retrocede to Bhután an area of about 32 sq. miles in the territory known as Dewangiri, which was annexed in 1865.

AREA AND POPULATION. Bhután is situated in the eastern Himalayas, between 26° 45' and 28° N. lat. and between 89° and 92° E. long., bordered on the north and east by Tibet and India, on the west by Sikkim and on the south by India. Extreme length from east to west 190 miles; extreme breadth 90 miles. Area about 18,000 sq. miles (46,600 sq. km); population estimated at approximately 1,010,000 (1972). The capital is at Thimphu. The official language is Dzongkha, which belongs to the Tibeto-Burman group of languages.

GOVERNMENT. In 1907 the Tongsa Penlop (the governor of the province of Tongsa in eastern Bhután), Sir Ugyen Wangchuk, GCIE, KCSI, was elected as the first hereditary Maharaja of Bhután. The Bhutanese title is Druk Gyalpo, but his successor is now addressed as King of Bhután. From Oct. 1969 the absolute monarchy was changed to a form of 'democratic monarchy'. The powers of removal and selection of the King having been given to the National Assembly (Tsogdu). The monarch can be removed by a two-thirds vote of the Assembly members at any time. A vote of confidence in the King, by a two-thirds majority, is required every 3 years. New monarchs would be appointed by the Assembly from the line of succession of members of the Royal family. The National Assembly was made sovereign with the right to outvote any Government bills or proposals of the King.

KING. Jigme Singye Wangchuk, succeeded his father Jigme Dorji Wangchuk who died 21 July 1972.

RELIGION. The majority of the people are Mahayana Buddhists of the Drukpa sub-sect of the Karyud School which was first introduced from Tibet during the 12th century.

DEFENCE. Bhután has an army of about 4,000 men, trained by Indian officers.

PRODUCTION. The chief products are rice, millet, wheat, barley, maize, cardomom, oranges, apples, handloom cloth, timber and yaks. Extensive and valuable forests abound. Large deposits of limestone and gypsum have been found. Surveys for hydro-electric power are being carried out.

PLANNING. The Government of Bhután has drawn up three 5-year development plans (1961–65, 1966–70, 1971–76), with the active co-operation and financial support of the Government of India. Educational facilities are being expanded and medical facilities are being provided. Forest and mineral wealth is to be exploited. About 1,000 km of new roads have been built.

COMMERCE. Trade with India is considerable. Bhután imported from the UK in 1966 goods valued at £11,000; nil 1967–73.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS. The Government of Bhután is in diplomatic relations with Bangladesh and India at ambassadorial level.

Elections are to be held in Aug. 1975.

The Cabinet consists of the President and 19 Ministers of State.

President: Col. Hugo Banzer-Suarez.

Minister of Foreign Affairs: Gen. Alberto Guzmán Soriano.

The republic is divided into 9 departments, established in Jan. 1826, with 98 provinces administered by sub-prefects, and 1,272 cantons administered by corregidores. The supreme authority in each department is vested in a prefect appointed by the President.

AREA AND POPULATION. Bolivia is a landlocked state with an area of some 424,160 sq. miles (1,098,580 sq. km). In the series of disastrous wars in the 19th and early 20th centuries its territorial losses to each of 5 neighbouring nations reduced its area from an estimated 1.16m. sq. miles.

Until 1884, when Bolivia was defeated by Chile, she had a strip bordering on the Pacific which contains extensive nitrate beds and at that time the port of Cobija (which no longer exists). She lost this area to Chile; but in Sept. 1953 Chile declared Arica a free port and, although it is no longer a free port for Bolivian imports, Bolivia still has certain privileges.

The following table shows the area and population of the departments (the capitals of each are given in brackets):

Departments	Area (sq. km)	Census Aug.- Sept. 1950	Estimated 1971	Per sq. km 1971
La Paz (La Paz)	133,985	948,446	1,590,000	11.87

Potosí (Potosí)	118,218	534,399	896,000	7.58
Santa Cruz (Santa Cruz)	370,621	286,145	479,800	1.29
Chuquisaca (Sucre)	51,524	282,980	474,000	9.21

Total	1,098,581	3,019,031¹	5,062,500	4.61

A report prepared in 1967 on behalf of the International Labour Office gives the following forecast: 1970, 4,931,000; 1975, 5,634,000. The Ministry of Planning estimated economically active population in 1970 at 1.48m., of whom 1m. were employed in agriculture, 118,300 in industrial manufacture, 35,100 in construction, 74,000 in commerce and finance, 65,000 in central and local government, 47,800 in mining and 41,900 in transport. Unemployed, 700,900.

Population (estimated, 1970) of the principal towns: La Paz, 562,000; Cochabamba, 149,900; Santa Cruz, 124,900; Oruro, 119,700; Potosí, 96,800; Sucre, 84,900; Tarija, 35,700; Trinidad, 22,800; Cobija, 4,500.

Crude birth rate, 1968, 42 per 1,000 population; crude death rate, 17; crude marriage rate (1958), 4; infantile mortality, 140 per 1,000 live births.

The language of the educated classes is Spanish, that of the majority of Indians, Aymará (25.2%) or Quechua (34.4%).

RELIGION. The Roman Catholic is the recognized religion of the state; the free exercise of other forms of worship is permitted. The Catholic Church is under a cardinal (in Sucre), an archbishop (in La Paz), 6 bishops (Cochabamba, Santa Cruz, Oruro, Potosí, Riberalta and Tarija) and vicars apostolic (titular bishops resident in Cueva, Trinidad, San Ignacio de Velasco, Riberalta and Rurrenabaque). Protestants numbered 43,135 in 1962.

By a law of 11 Oct. 1911 all marriages must be celebrated by the civil authorities. Divorce is permitted by a law enacted on 15 April 1932.

EDUCATION. Primary instruction is free and obligatory between the ages of 6 and 14 years. Estimates for 1968 show 977,765 children between 6 and 14 years, of whom 581,994 attend school. All illiterates between 15 and 50 years are obliged to attend literacy classes. This meant in 1965 some 66.9%, according to the Minister, who attributed the increase in absolute numbers to the increase in population.

At Sucre, Oruro, Potosí, Cochabamba, Santa Cruz, Tarija, Trinidad and La Paz are universities; La Paz is the most important of them while the San Francisco Xavier University at Sucre is one of the oldest in America, having been founded in 1624.

CINEMAS (1970). Cinemas numbered 90, with seating capacity of about 42,500.

NEWSPAPERS (1972). There were 12 daily newspapers with an aggregate daily circulation of about 150,000.

JUSTICE. Justice is administered by the Supreme Court, superior district courts (of 5 or 7 judges) and courts of local justice. The Supreme Court, with headquarters at Sucre, is divided into two sections, civil and criminal, of 5 justices each, with the Chief Justice presiding over both. Members of the Supreme Court are chosen on a two-thirds vote of Congress. They nominate the district judges and largely administer the judiciary budget.

FINANCE. Currency. On 1 Jan. 1963 the peso boliviano ($b.) was introduced. Current exchange rates are $b.6.20 = US$1 and $b.6.47 = £1.

Money in circulation at the end of Oct. 1970 totalled 1,396m. pesos bolivianos.

Budget. The foreign-exchange revenue is derived mainly from sales of tin and other non-ferrous metals (furnishing about 84% of export revenue in 1971), but oil and gas are of increasing importance. Revenue and expenditures in 1m. pesos bolivianos balanced as follows: 1967, 860.4; 1968, 1,224.7; 1969, 1,265.3. Aid from USA in 1971 was about $US20.2m. The external debt amounted to $US601.8m. in 1971.

DEFENCE. Bolivia is divided into 8 military districts, with divisional headquarters in Viacha, Oruro, Villa Montes, Camiri, Roboré, Riberalta, Santa Cruz, Cochabamba; regional HQ are located at La Paz, Sucre, Tarija, Potosí, Trinidad and Cobija.

The law of 1943 provided for a permanent force of 15,000 men, including the police force and the frontier carabineers, but the standing army in 1973 numbered 20,000 men. Military service is compulsory for all males from the 19th to the 49th year. The Army consists of 12 infantry regiments, 2 motorized regiments, 3 artillery regiments, a paratroop regiment (CITE) and 3 ranger battalions specially trained in anti-guerrilla warfare.

The Bolivian Air Force, established in 1923, is organized into 4 groups, and comprises staff, bomber, fighter, transport, training, reconnaissance, maintenance and supply commands. Its small combat force consists of 9 Brazilian-built MB 326G armed jet trainers, about 10 modernized Cavalier F-51D Mustang piston-engined fighters supplied under MAP and a few T-28 armed trainers, plus 12 Hughes 500M armed light observation helicopters for counter-insurgency operations. Other types in service include T-6 basic trainers, Convair 440 and C-47 transports with which a military airline service is operated, a presidential C-54 and some light aircraft. Personnel strength is about 2,200.

AGRICULTURE. The extensive and still largely undeveloped region east of the Andes comprises about three-quarters of the entire area of the country, and since the agrarian reform of 1952 sugar-cane, rice and cotton have been grown in this Oriente in increasing abundance, reaching self-sufficiency in all these products. Output in metric tons in 1971 was: Sugar-cane (estimate), 720,000; rice, 50,000; coffee, 19,000; maize, 378,000; potatoes, 688,000; wheat, 68,500, and cotton (lint), 10,000.

In 1966 there were some 827,730 head of cattle, mostly in the Santa Cruz and Beni departments; some are exported to Peru. The public lands of the state have an area of about 245,000 sq. miles, of which 104,000 sq. miles are reserved for special colonization. The National Agrarian Reform Service reported in Nov. 1969 that since May 1965 it had distributed 5.5m. hectares of land in 323,046 properties.

A colony of Jewish refugees was established in 1940 at Buena Tierra, 60 miles east of La Paz and, more recently, Japanese and Okinawan settlements in the region of Santa Cruz. The Bolivian Development Corporation has a programme for relief of over-population on the barren altiplano and in 1964 resettled 1,217 families in tropical areas. Its target was another 8,000 families by the end of 1966.

FORESTRY. Tropical forests with woods ranging from the 'iron tree' to the light palo de balsa are beginning to be exploited. In 1962 the Forestry Service announced proved reserves of 46.3m. hectares, plus a similar amount available for immediate development.

Rubber exports in 1970 earned US$800,000.

MINING. Mining is the most important industry, accounting for more than 80% of the foreign-exchange earnings. About half the mineral mined is tin. Bolivia in 1968 produced 16% of the tin output of the non-communist world and was second to Malaysia in the production of this metal. Tin mines are at altitudes of from 12,000 to 18,000 ft, where few except native Indians can stand the conditions; transport is costly. Bolivian tin is extracted by shaft-mining, frequently very deep; the ore yields only 3.5% or less of tin and is very refractory; tin is exported in concentrates called barrilla, through Pacific ports for refining, much of it in the UK. A twin dredger has been installed by Grace & Co. to exploit alluvial deposits and another dredger is operated by COMSUR. Total tin production in 1971 was 35,900 tons.

A decree of 31 Oct. 1952 nationalized the mining companies of the Patiño, Hochschild and Aramayo groups, which were responsible for about 60% of Bolivia's mineral output. Provisional compensation proposed was: Patiño, $7.5m.; Hochschild, $9.25m.; Aramayo, $4,976,324. Agreements were concluded during 1953 for the gradual payment of compensation on a sliding scale based on prices received for Bolivian tin abroad, but a final settlement has still to be negotiated. The state industry is being run by the Corporación Minera de Bolivia (COMIBOL) employing about 23,000 in mining and administrative capacities.

Alluvial gold deposits in the Alto Beni region are being exploited. Co-operative mines at Tipuani produce over 100 kg of gold per month.

There are petroleum and natural gas deposits in the Santa-Cruz-Camiri areas. A pipeline for crude oil connects Caranda (Santa Cruz) with the Pacific coast at Arica (Chile) and a natural gas pipeline to Argentina was inaugurated in May 1972. Bolivia is virtually self-sufficient in petroleum products. All production, refining and internal distribution is now in the hands of Yacimientos Petroliferos Fiscales Bolivianos (the State Petroleum Organization), the Bolivian Gulf Oil Company having been nationalized on 17 Oct. 1969. Total production of crude oil in 1971 amounted to 2.1m. cu. metres. Production of refined products was as follows (in cu. metres): Petrol, 345,000; paraffin, 134,000; diesel oil, 105,800; fuel oil, 154,900.

INDUSTRY. There are few industrial establishments (1,713 in 1970) and the country relies on imports for the supply of many consumer goods. However a new investment law passed in 1971 provides incentives and protection for new investment, both foreign and domestic, and for reinvestment in various fields including manufacturing industry, mining, agriculture, construction and tourism. The new law of hydrocarbons encourages foreign participation in developing the petroleum and natural gas resources of the State.

POWER. Electric power production is expanding. Installed capacity was estimated at 270,000 kw. at the end of 1969. Consumption during 1971 amounted to 832m. kwh. Hydro-electric production amounted to 678m. kwh.

COMMERCE. The value of imports and exports in US$1,000 has been as follows:

	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972
Imports	152,800	165,000	158,500	171,000	189,000
Exports	170,600	198,000	228,000	212,000	254,000

Tin ore remains the principal export. Total exports, 1970, of minerals, in concentrates, ingots or solder, were valued at US$204.9m., of which tin, 28,900 tons (US$102m.); wolfram, 2,370 tons (US$17.6m.); lead, 25,350 tons (US$7.8m.); copper, 8,700 tons (US$12.5m.); zinc, 45,800 tons (US$14.3m.); antimony, 11,400 tons (US$30.9m.); silver, 180 fine tons (US$10.5m.); gold, 155,168 fine grammes (US$169,000); bismuth, 600 tons (US$7.95m.); sulphur, 16,000 tons (US$47,000). Large deposits of salt are found near Lake Poopó and in the south of Bolivia.

Bolivia having no seaport, imports and exports pass chiefly through the ports of Arica and Antofagasta in Chile, Mollendo-Matarani in Peru, through La Quiaca on the Bolivian-Argentine border and through river-ports on the rivers flowing into the Amazon. The chief imports are lard, flour, cooking oil, iron and steel products, mining machinery, motor vehicles, pharmaceuticals, paper products and textiles. In 1970 imports (in US$m.) were 49.2 from USA; Japan, 19.7; West Germany, 26; Argentina, 16.3; UK, 8.

Total trade between UK and Bolivia (British Board of Trade returns) for 5 years (in £1,000 sterling):

	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	34,212	28,460	16,062	17,040	19,964
Exports and re-exports from UK	2,609	2,201	1,756	1,822	2,205

SHIPPING. Traffic on Lake Titicaca between Guaqui and Puno is carried on by the steamers of the Peruvian Corporation. About 12,000 miles of rivers, in 4 main systems (Beni, Pilcomayo, Titicaca-Desaguadero, Mamoré), are open to navigation by light-draught vessels.

ROADS. A motor highway, 312 miles long, runs from Cochabamba to the lowland farming region of Santa Cruz. Of other main highways (unmetalled) there is one from La Paz through Guaqui into Peru, another from La Paz, via Oruro, Potosí, Tarija and Bermejo, into Argentina, with branches to Cochabamba, Sucre and Camiri, passable throughout the year except at the height of the rainy season, and others from Villazón to Villa Montes via Tarija, passable during the dry season. The asphaltting of the road from La Paz to Oruro has been completed, and 2 important roads are under construction, linking Cochabamba with the Chapare and Ichilo areas and with Santa Cruz and the Mamoré river system. The total length of the road system is 25,637 km (1971). Motor vehicles registered in 1970, 52,624.

RAILWAYS. The total length of railway open in 1971 was 3,524 km. On 1 Nov. 1964 the State Railway Authority was set up to run all lines in the Western system except the Guaqui-La Paz Railway (owned by the Peruvian Corporation); and also the Corumbá-Santa Cruz line, which until 1964 was administered by a Brazilian-Bolivian Mixed Commission. The new 500-km line Santa Cruz-Yacuiba is administered by an Argentine-Bolivian Mixed Commission. Access to the Pacific is by lines to Antofagasta—of which the Chilean section is owned by the Antofagasta (Chili) and Bolivia Railway Co.—and Arica, and to Mollendo in Peru via Guaqui and Arequipa. The Bolivian and Peruvian sections are separated by Lake Titicaca (12,506 ft) which is crossed by steamer. Another railway from Santa Cruz to Trinidad Beni is being built.

AVIATION. The national airline is Lloyd Aéreo Boliviano; in 1970 a total of 12,376 hours were flown, carrying 341,787 passengers and 35,722 metric tons of freight. The airline runs regular services between La Paz and Lima, São Paulo, Buenos Aires, Salta and Arica as well as many internal services. Braniff International Airways runs regular flights between La Paz, Lima, Buenos Aires, Santiago and Asunción, linking Bolivia (via Lima) to the USA. Lufthansa and Iberia link Bolivia with Europe.

POST. In Bolivia there were, in 1969, 418 post offices, of these, 205 provided telegraph and telephone services together with a further 245 offices for telegraph and telephone service only. There is telephone service in the towns of La Paz, Cochabamba, Oruro, Sucre, Potosí and Santa Cruz, with 44,200 telephones. There are about 40 broadcasting stations, of which 7 are state-owned.

BANKING. The Banco Central de Bolivia was established in 1911 as Banco de la Nación Boliviana and re-organized in 1928. The Bank was nationalized in 1939. In 1945 the Banco Central de Bolivia was divided into two independent departments, the Banking Department and the Monetary Department. The latter has the sole power of note issue and must maintain a legal reserve equal to the amount of notes in circulation: 50% of such reserve must be in gold and foreign exchange and 50% in securities. At 31 Dec. 1971 the Bank's gross gold and foreign exchange reserves amounted to US$57.2m. and Bolivia's net gold and reserves stood at US$33.8m. The country also has a stand-by agreement of up to US$32m. with the International Monetary Fund.

There are Argentine, Brazilian, Peruvian, USA and domestic banks.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system of weights and measures is used by the administration and prescribed by law, but the old Spanish system is also employed.

BRAZIL

Brasil

HISTORY. Brazil was discovered on 22 April 1500 by the Portuguese Admiral Pedro Alvares Cabral, and thus became a Portuguese settlement; in 1815 the colony was declared 'a kingdom', and on 13 May 1822 Dom Pedro, eldest surviving son of King João of Portugal, was chosen 'Perpetual Defender' of Brazil by a National Congress. He proclaimed the independence of the country on 7 Sept. 1822, and was chosen 'Constitutional Emperor and Perpetual Defender' on 12 Oct. 1822.

¹ Owing to illness did not take office; died 16 Jan. 1919.

On 24 Jan. 1967 both houses of Congress in joint session approved the new constitution and press law which came into force on 15 March. An amendment to the constitution, which came into force on 30 Oct. 1969, was issued on 17 Oct. The present constitution provides for the indirect election of the President and Vice-President by an electoral college, comprising the members of Congress and delegates from the state legislatures; it grants powers to the President to issue decree-laws on matters connected with the economy and national security; it gives the President authority to intervene in any of the 22 states without consultation with Congress and the right to declare a state of siege and to rule by decree. President and Vice-President are elected for a 5-year term and are not immediately re-eligible. The Senate is elected for 8 years, the Chamber of Deputies for 4 years.

The name of the country is changed from 'United States of Brazil' to 'Brazil'.

Freedom of speech and press are not absolute: war propaganda, the teaching of 'subversive doctrines' and the dissemination of race or class prejudices are banned, as also are political parties opposed to democracy, the existing multi-party system or to 'fundamental human rights' which include the right to own private property. The Supreme Electoral Court on 7 May 1947 declared the Communist Party illegal.

The Institutional Act No. 5 issued on 13 Dec. 1968 was incorporated into the new constitution through an amendment on 17th Oct. 1969. This gives the President power to cancel citizens' political rights for periods of 10 years. The Congress renewed its sessions on 22 Oct. 1969 and elections were held on 15 Nov. 1970.

Voting is compulsory for men and women between the ages of 18 and 65 and optional for persons over 65. Enlisted men and illiterates (who comprise about 40% of the adult population) may not vote.

President of the Republic: Gen. Ernesto Geisel, assumed office 15 March 1974.

Vice-President: Adalberto Pereira dos Santos.

Minister of Foreign Affairs: Antônia Francisco Azeredo da Silveira.

There are Secretaries of State at the head of the following Ministries: Finance; Justice; Interior; Foreign Affairs; Transport; Communications; Agriculture; Labour and Social Welfare; Education and Culture; Health; Industry and Commerce; Mines and Power; Planning and General Co-ordination; and the Ministries of Army, Marine and Air.

National flag: Green, with yellow lozenge enclosing a blue sphere, with 22 white stars, of which 5 form the southern cross, and the motto Ordeme Progresso.

National anthem: Ouviram do Ipiranga (words by J. O. Duque Estrada; tune by F. M. da Silva).

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. Brazil consists of 22 states, 4 federal territories (Rondônia, Roraima, Amapá, Fernando de Noronha) and 1 federal district. Each state has its distinct administrative, legislative and judicial authorities, its own constitution and laws, which must, however, agree with the constitutional principles of the Union. The states may unite or split or form new states. Taxes on interstate commerce, levied by individual states, are prohibited. The governors and members of the legislatures are elected, but magistrates are appointed and are not removable from office save by judicial sentence.

In 1970, 9.6m. cattle, 11.2m. swine, 2.2m. sheep and lambs, 1.9m. goats, 62.4m. poultry and rabbits were slaughtered for meat; total was barely sufficient for domestic needs.

FISHERIES. The fishing industry totalled a fleet of 154,695 vessels in 1968; the catch in 1971 was 591,543 metric tons.

In 1971 the sovereignty over territorial waters, including fishing rights, was extended to 200 miles.

MINING. Brazil is the only source of high-grade quartz crystal in commercial quantities; exports in 1970, 5,910 metric tons. It is an important source of industrial diamonds (exports, 1972, 4,958 grammes); the second largest western producer of chrome ore (reserves of 4m. tons; output, 1969, 18,353; 1968, 17,032 metric tons); fifth in the output of mica (483 tons in 1968); third in zirconium, 2,934 tons (1969); she is the largest producer of beryllium, output (1969) 207 metric tons; graphite (1968), 22,000 metric tons, titanium ore (1967), 284 tons and magnesite (1968), 137,820 metric tons. Along the coasts of the states of Rio de Janeiro, Espírito Santo and Bahia are found monazite sands containing thorium; reserves are estimated at 100,000 tons. Manganese ores of high content are important (reserves in the Amapá region alone are estimated at 10m. metric tons); exports, 1972, 1.2m. metric tons. Exports of tungsten ore and concentrates, 1971, totalled 2,265 metric tons; in 1972, 1,723 metric tons. Mine production of lead, (1969) 340,905, (1968) 320,553 metric tons. Asbestos production, (1967) 337,813, (1968) 345,442 metric tons. Coal deposits exist in Rio Grande do Sul, Santa Catarina, Paraná and São Paulo. Total reserves are estimated at 5,000m. tons; output (1972), 5.88m. metric tons.

Iron is found chiefly in Minas Gerais, notably the Cauê Peak at Itabira. The Government is now opening up what is believed to be one of the richest iron-ore deposits in the world, with estimated reserves of 35,000m. tons, of which half rival the Swedish ores in iron content (about 68.5%) and have lower silica and phosphorus contents. Total output of iron ore, 1969, mainly from the Cia. Vale do Rio Doce mine at Itabira, was 27,156,684 (1968: 25,123,213) metric tons. The National Iron and Steel Co. at Volta Redonda, State of Rio de Janeiro, furnishes a substantial part of Brazil's steel requirements. Brazil's total output included: Pig-iron, (1971) 4,737,167, (1970) 4,202,175 metric tons; ingots castings, (1971) 5,997,119, (1970) 5,367,701 metric tons.

Production of aluminium was started in Minas Gerais in 1945; output of bauxite, 1969, 362,058 metric tons. Exports of barytes, 1972, was 21,916 metric tons. Cement output, 1971, was 9,802,639 (1970: 9,002,431) metric tons. Output of phosphate rock, 1968, was 648,793 metric tons, plus 582,703 metric tons of apatite.

Gold is found in practically every state, though large-scale mining is confined to a single mine in Minas Gerais; the production in 1969 was 5,354 kg. Silver output, 1969, 12,170 kg. Salt output (1972), 2,168,082 metric tons. Diamond districts are Diamantina, Grão Mogol, Chapada Diamantina, Bagagem, Goiás and Mato Grosso; output in 1966 was 5,460 grammes.

INDUSTRY. The most important manufacturing industry in Brazil is the weaving industry, which employs about 14% of all industrial workers; nearly 52% of the factories are in São Paulo and the remaining 48% in other states. Output of cotton textiles, 1969, was 1,170m. metres of cloth. Exports of cotton piece-goods, 1972, were 18,363 metric tons. Rayon yarn output, 1970, was 42,183 metric tons. In all, about 650 textile-mills are working. Local production and assembly of vehicles, including automobiles (729,135 in 1973) and tractors (43,299 in 1973), is steadily increasing. Fiat are planning to build a factory at Betim.

Brazil's potential capacity for electric power production is estimated at 55m. kw., one of the largest in the world. Only 5.6m. kw. had been developed by 1970. Consumption, 1972, 43.2m. mw. Of the total capital invested in industrial concerns (US$1,779,786,350), 49% was foreign-owned. The entire petroleum industry, including production, importation and refining, was placed under federal control in April 1938; there are, 1970, 12 refineries. The country imports substantial amounts (22,940,613 metric tons in 1972) to supplement its total production. Crude oil output, 1970, 7.96m. tons; 1971, 8.3m.; 1972, 9.9m. tons.

A paper-mill, reported to be the largest pulp-and-paper mill in South America, is at Monte Alegre, Paraná. Brazil's output of paper, 1972, was 1,344,960 metric tons.

Foreign investment is encouraged by special tax holidays for companies locating in certain regions. There is also a 10-year tax holiday for hotel and tourist investments and export profits tax exemption.

COMMERCE. In 1957 Brazil modernized her 20-year-old tariff (at present duties are levied mainly on volume and not on values) in order to protect her infant industries and to increase government revenue. Her present tariffs furnish 12% of the Government's revenue (see under GATT). She ratified the Treaty of Montevideo on 3 Feb. 1961 (see LAFTA).

The state-owned Central Brazil Railway (2,888 km) joins up the railways of Brazil with those of Uruguay, Argentina and Paraguay, and is being electrified. Four Anglo-Brazilian railways have a length of 3,165.5 miles; 3 of the 4 were purchased in 1949 by the Brazilian Government for £14,235,000. Brazilian railways today operate over tracks of 5 different gauges and handle annually only 50m. metric tons of merchandise needing transport. The railways, in 1972, transported 313.76m. passengers, 47,918,000 metric tons of freight and 446,000 metric tons of animals.

BANKING. The Bank of Brazil (founded in 1808 and reorganized in 1906, with an authorized capital of NCr$60m. from 1967) is not a central bank of issue but a closely controlled commercial bank; it had 730 branches in 1971 throughout the republic. On 31 Dec. 1970 deposits were Cr$16,262.9m.

On 31 Dec. 1964 the Banco Central da República do Brasil was founded.

The country's note circulation, 31 Dec. 1972 was 13,050m. cruzeiros. Since Sept. 1939 gold and dollar supply has risen from US$40m. to US$420m., of which the government's gold was $288m. in May 1961.

BULGARIA

Narodna Republika Bulgaria

HISTORY. The Principality of Bulgaria and the Autonomous Province of Eastern Rumelia, both under Turkish suzerainty, were constituted by the Treaty of Berlin, 13 July 1878. In 1885 Rumelia was reunited with Bulgaria. On 22 Sept. (5 Oct.) 1908 Bulgaria declared her independence of Turkey. Rulers: Prince Alexander I of Battenberg, 1879-86; Prince (after 1908, Tsar) Ferdinand, 1887-1918 (abdicated); Tsar Boris III, 1918-43; Tsar Simeon II, lost his throne as a result of the referendum held on 8 Sept. 1946. 3,801,160 votes were cast in favour of a republic, 197,176 votes in favour of the monarchy; 119,168 voting papers were invalid.

Bulgaria, on 1 March 1941, signed the Three Power Pact, and on 25 Nov. 1941 the Anti-Comintern Pact. On 26 Aug. 1944 Bulgaria asked Great Britain and the USA for an armistice. The USSR formally declared war on Bulgaria on 5 Sept. 1944. The new Bulgarian Government of the Fatherland Front, which was established on 9 Sept., immediately asked the Soviet Government for an armistice, which was signed on 28 Oct. 1944 by representatives of the Soviet Union, Great Britain and the USA. The peace treaty was signed in Paris on 10 Feb. 1947.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. A People's Republic was proclaimed by the National Assembly on 15 Sept. 1946, and the existing 'Tŭrnovo' Constitution of 1879 was replaced by the 'Dimitrov' Constitution on 4 Dec. This was in turn replaced by a new constitution on 18 May 1971. This provides for a single-chamber National Assembly (Narodno Sŭbranie). The highest permanently operating organ of the state is the Council of State which consists of a chairman, 2 first vice-chairmen, 2 vice-chairmen, a secretary and 17 members; it is elected by the National Assembly from its members. Supreme power is vested in the National Assembly, which consists of 400 deputies elected from areas of equal population by direct, secret and universal suffrage (everybody over the age of 18 being eligible to vote and hold office) for a term of 5 years; it is to meet at least three times every year. The National Assembly also elects the Council of State and the ministers who are responsible to it.

A general election was held on 27 Oct. 1946. The Fatherland Front, composed of the Workers (Communist), Agrarian, Socialist and Zveno Parties, and non-party independents, obtained 366 seats (277 of which went to the Communists) and the opposition 99. On 26 Aug. 1947 the oppositional Agrarian Union was dissolved; its leader, Nikola Petkov, was sentenced to death and hanged on 23 Sept. The Socialist Party was merged with the Workers' Party in Aug. 1948, and the Zveno Party dissolved itself.

The Fatherland Front was transformed, in Feb. 1948, into a unified mass organization with individual memberships. Inside the Fatherland Front, there remain two political parties, the Bulgarian Communist Party and the Bulgarian People's Agrarian Union. Georgi Traikov (1st Vice-Chairman, Council of State) is Secretary of the Agrarian Union and Chairman of the Fatherland Front's National Council.

In 1972 the membership of the Communist Party was 728,745 (40% workers, 26% peasants); Young Communist League, 1.3m; Agrarian Union, 120,000; Fatherland Front, 3,770,080.

At the elections of 27 June 1971, 99.85% of the electorate voted, and 99.9% of the votes were cast for the 400 candidates of the Fatherland Front; there were no other candidates. The list comprised 268 Communists, 100 Agrarians and 32 Young Communists and independents. The President of the National Assembly is Vladimir Bonev.

Head of State: Todor Zhivkov (Chairman of the Council of State, 1st Secretary of the Communist Party), elected 7 July 1971 in succession to Georgi Traikov.

The highest policy-making and executive body of the Bulgarian Communist Party is its Politburo, consisting of 10 full members and 5 candidate members. The Politburo is elected by and from the Central Committee.

The Politburo was in March 1974 composed as follows: FULL MEMBERS: Todor Zhivkov, Gen. Ivan Mihailov (member of Council of State), Stanko Todorov (Chairman, Council of Ministers, i.e., Prime Minister), Boris Velchev (Secretary, Central Committee, member of Council of State), Zhivko Zhivkov (Deputy Chairman, Council of Ministers), Ivan Popov (Deputy Chairman, Council of Ministers), Pencho Kubadinski (Deputy Chairman, Council of Ministers), Tano Tsolov (1st Deputy Chairman, Council of Ministers), Tsola Dragoicheva, Todor Pavlov. CANDIDATE MEMBERS: Kostadin Giaurov (member of Council of State, Chairman, Central Committee of Trade Unions), Krüstiü Trichkov (1st Deputy Chairman, Council of State, Chairman, Committee of State Control), Ivan Abadzhiev (Secretary, Central Committee), Peko Takov (Deputy Chairman, Council of State), Venelin Kotsev (Deputy Chairman, Council of Ministers).

Ministers not in the Politburo include: Petür Mladenov (Foreign Affairs), Gen. Dobri Dzhurov (Defence), Ivan Nedev (Foreign Trade), Dimitür Stoyanov (Internal Affairs).

In May 1967 a second 20-year treaty of friendship, co-operation and mutual assistance with the Soviet Union was signed.

National flag: White, green, crimson (horizontal), with the coat of arms of the Republic in the canton.

National anthem: Mila Rodino (Dear Fatherland); folk-song, declared the national anthem in 1964.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. People's Councils at province, region, town and village level are elected for terms of 30 months, to deal with all economic, social and cultural problems of their area. They also supervise the management of state and publicly owned enterprises. The Council's executive organs are Permanent Committees. In 1973 the People's Councils had a total membership of 53,688.

AREA AND POPULATION. On 8 Sept. 1940 by the treaty of Craiova, Rumania ceded to Bulgaria the Southern Dobrudja, fixing the new frontier on the 1912 line.

In April 1941 Bulgaria occupied the Yugoslav part of Macedonia, and the Greek districts of Western Thrace, Eastern Macedonia, Florina and Castoria. The peace treaty of 1947 restored the frontiers as on 1 Jan. 1941.

The area of Bulgaria is 110,911.5 sq. km (42,823 sq. miles).

The country is divided into 28 provinces (okrŭg, plur. okrŭzi): Blagoevgrad, Burgas, Gabrovo, Khaskovo, Kiustendil, Kurdzhali, Lovech, Mihailovgrad, Pazardzhik, Pernik, Pleven, Plovdiv, Razgrad, Russe, Shumen, Silistra, Sliven, Smolyan, Sofia Province, Sofia Town, Stara Zagora, Tolbuhin, Tŭrgovishte, Varna, Veliko Tŭrnovo, Vidin, Vratsa and Yambol. In 1974 there were 188 urban and 973 rural communes.

RELIGION. 'The traditional church of the Bulgarian people' (as it is officially described), is that of the Eastern Orthodox Church. It was disestablished under the 1947 Constitution. On 10 May 1953 the Bulgarian Patriarchate was revived and Metropolitan Kiril was elected the first Bulgarian Patriarch since 1393. Upon the death of Kiril Metropolitan Maksim of Lovech, was enthroned as the new Patriarch in July 1971. The seat of the Patriarch is at Sofia. There are 11 dioceses, each under a Metropolitan, 10 bishops, 2,600 parishes and 1,500 priests. In 1973 there were 3,200 churches, 500 chapels and some 120 monasteries and nunneries.

The Constitution provides for freedom of conscience and belief; the use of religion and religious institutions for propaganda against the Government is punishable. The State provides 17% of Church funds.

Churches may not maintain schools or colleges, except theological seminaries, or organize youth movements.

According to a Bulgarian Academy of Sciences survey in 1962, 35.5% of the population were religious (26.7% of the population Orthodox and 6.7% Moslems). There were 1,180 mosques in 1973.

EDUCATION. Education is free, and compulsory for children between the ages of 7 and 16. It was announced in 1969 that the school starting age would eventually be lowered to 6 and secondary schooling made compulsory. General and vocational secondary schools are to be merged in unified general polytechnical schools. Complete literacy is claimed. Schools are classified according to which years of schooling they offer: Elementary (1-4), primary (1-7), preparatory (5-7), secondary (8-11), complete secondary (1-11).

Some local planning, profitability and consumer demand have been admitted, although central price regulation has been retained. The economy has been reconstructed into large trusts for each industry, each responsible for its own foreign trade.

For the first four 5-year plans see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK for 1969-70. In the fifth 5-year plan, 1966-70, emphasis was laid on the expansion of heavy industry. The sixth 5-year plan is running from 1971 to 1975. Industrial output is scheduled to rise by 55-60%, emphasis being laid on the engineering, metallurgical, electronic, shipbuilding and chemical industries. Output of consumer goods is to rise by 50%, agricultural production by 17-20%.

AGRICULTURE. Cultivated agricultural land covers 6,010,100 hectares, of which 4,771,900 hectares are arable.

Collectivization was completed by 1958. The United Central Co-operative Union co-ordinates the activities of collective farms and consumer co-operatives. Ten agreements with USSR signed in 1969 and 1970 envisage the co-ordination of the Soviet and Bulgarian 5-year plans for 1971-75 in the spirit of 'socialist internationalism'. Bulgaria will import oil, natural gas (a pipeline will be built from Siberia, crossing Romania), steel, cellulose and timber, and export food products, clothing and electronic components. BURMA

Pyi-Daung-Su Myanma-Nainggán

HISTORY. The Union of Burma came formally into existence on 4 Jan. 1948. On this day Sir Hubert Rance, the last British Governor, handed over authority to Sao Shwe Thaiké, the first President of the Burmese Republic, and Parliament ratified the treaty with Great Britain providing for the independence of Burma as a country not within His Britannic Majesty's dominions and not entitled to His Britannic Majesty's protection. This treaty was signed in London on 17 Oct. 1947 and enacted by the British Parliament on 10 Dec. 1947.

For the history of Burma's connexion with Great Britain see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1950, p. 836.

AREA AND POPULATION. The total area of the Union is 261,789 sq. miles (678,000 sq. km). Some small rectifications of the border with China were agreed upon in 1960 and with Pakistan in 1964. The population in March 1973 was estimated at 28·89m. The leading towns are: Rangoon, the capital (1973), 3,186,886; Mandalay (1972), 919,323; and Moulmein (1972), 833,653.

The Burmese belong to the Tibeto-Chinese (or Tibeto-Burman) family.

CONSTITUTION. From Independence Day until 1962 Burma was a parliamentary democracy, having 2 houses, the Chamber of Deputies and the Chamber of Nationalities. The latter comprised 125 members, 62 of whom represented the central unit, 63 the states and special areas. The Chamber of Deputies had twice as many members. Both were elected for 4 years. The Head of State was the President, elected for a 5-year term, by both Chambers of Parliament in joint session.

On 29 Oct. 1958 Gen. Ne Win, the Army Chief of Staff, became prime minister of a caretaker government. The elections to the lower house, held in Feb. 1960, gave the Pyidaungsu (Union) Party, led by U Nu, 161 out of 250 seats. On 2 March 1962 Gen. Ne Win overthrew the government of U Nu and replaced it by a Revolutionary Council. Parliament and the state councils were dissolved; the latter were reformed as 'state supreme councils' under appointed chairmen.

A new Constitution was approved by referendum in Dec. 1973. On 2 March 1974 military rule ended and Burma became a one-party socialist republic. Elections to the People's Assembly took place in Jan. and Feb. 1974. U Ne Win became President under the new Constitution.

On 4 March 1974 the Assembly elected a Council of Ministers:

Prime Minister: U Sein Win.

Deputy Prime Minister and Planning and Finance: U Lwin. Foreign Affairs: U Hla Phone. Defence: Brig. Tin U. Home and Religious Affairs: U Ko Ko. Mines: Dr Nyi Nyi. Construction: U Htin Kyaw. Agriculture and Forests: U Ye Goung. Industry: U Maung Maung Kha. Transport and Communications: U Tha Kyaw. Co-operatives: Col. Sein Lwin. Health: Col. Kyi Maung. Education: Dr Khin Maung Win. Trade: U San Win. Labour: U Tun Tin. Information: U Chit Khin. Social Welfare: U Van Kulh. Culture: U Aye Maung.

As from 22 April 1972, military ranks were dropped by most of the Revolutionary Council Members. From 15 March 1972, the entire governmental system was re-organized, with the Secretariat in Rangoon being abolished and with re-organized Security and Administrative Committees composed of officials and political representatives becoming the directing authority at central and regional levels.

National flag: Red, with a canton of dark blue; in the canton, a 5-pointed large white star with 5 smaller stars between the points.

Language. The official language is Burmese; the use of English is permitted.

RELIGION. The Revolutionary Government, having repealed the amendment of 1961 which made Buddhism the state religion, recognizes 'the right of everyone freely to profess and practise his religion'.

EDUCATION. After the attainment of independence the Government has adopted a centralized system of control of schools which are graded as primary, middle and high school. The medium of instruction in all schools is Burmese; English is taught as a compulsory second language in secondary schools.

Education is free in the primary, junior secondary and vocational schools; fees are charged in senior secondary schools and universities.

In 1971-72 there were 561 state high schools with 182,000 pupils, 1,142 state middle schools with 738,700 pupils and 17,399 state primary schools with 3,528,500 pupils; the total teaching staff was 82,500.

On 1 April 1965 the Government nationalized 129 of the 883 registered private schools, including all the major high schools.

The Higher Education Law 1964 has decentralized the University of Rangoon. Beside the Arts and Science University, there are independent degree-giving institutes of engineering, education, medicine, agriculture, economics and commerce, and veterinary sciences. In 1970-71 students numbered 51,074. The University of Mandalay (with 3,000 students) has been similarly decentralized. A foreign-languages institute in Rangoon has 1,709 students learning French, German, Russian, Japanese, Chinese and English.

There are intermediate colleges at Taunggyi, Magwe and Myitkyina, and degree colleges at Moulmein and Bassein, and several technical and agricultural institutes at higher and middle level, 4,404 middle and primary school teachers were being trained in 14 training colleges in 1970-71.

CINEMAS (1971). There were about 418 cinemas.

JUSTICE. The Chief Court has supervision over all courts in the Union. It is presided over by the Chief Justice and other judges. Its present name was revived in March 1972 having been called Chief Court since 1962. All lower courts are now replaced by People's Courts formed with ordinary citizens to preside over trials, aided by former judges and magistrates acting as law officers.

FINANCE. Currency. The currency unit is now the kyat (formerly the Burma rupee) divided into 100 pyas; the kyat equals £0.07. (US$1 = K.5.35.)

Currency in circulation in May 1971 was valued at K.2,146.9m.

On 17 May 1964 the Government demonetized 50 and 100 kyat notes, and K.40 crores were withdrawn from circulation. The largest denomination is the K.25 note.

Budget. The budget estimates (in K.1m.) for fiscal years 1 Oct.-30 Sept. were as follows:

The internal public debt was K.3,674m. at the end of Jan. 1973.

In Aug. 1971 Japan extended a loan of US$10m. for offshore oil exploration and again in July 1973, a commodity loan of 4,620m. yen was provided as well as a loan of 7,000m. yen for an oil refinery. The International Development Association also granted a loan of US$33m. for rehabilitation of the railways and waterways.

Long-term loans amounting to K.149.2m. and short-term loans amounting to K.133.6m. are to be taken during 1971-72, mainly from Japan, followed by West Germany, USA and Czechoslovakia.

BURUNDI

HISTORY. Tradition recounts the establishment of a Tutsi kingdom under successive Mwamis as early as the 16th century. German military occupation in 1890 incorporated the territory into German East Africa. From 1919 Burundi formed part of Ruanda-Urundi administered by the Belgians, first as a League of Nations mandate and then as a United Nations trust territory. Elections supervised by the United Nations in Sept. 1961 resulted in a large majority for the Unité et Progrès National party (UPRONA). Internal self-government was granted on 1 Jan. 1962, followed by independence on 1 July 1962. An agreement, signed with Rwanda under United Nations auspices at Addis Ababa in April 1962, provided for a monetary and customs union. This union and all organizations operated jointly by the two governments were dissolved by 30 Sept. 1964.

On 15 Jan. 1965 Prime Minister Ngendandumwe was assassinated. Following an abortive coup d'état in Oct. tribal fighting occurred with heavy loss of life and 76 alleged plotters, including virtually all the leading Bahutu politicians, were executed after closed trials.

On 8 July 1966 Prince Charles Ndizeye deposed his father Mwami Mwambutsa IV, suspended the constitution and made Capt. Michel Micombero Prime Minister. On 1 Sept. Prince Charles was enthroned as Mwami Ntare V. On 28 Nov., while the Mwami was attending a Head of States Conference in Kinshasa (Congo), Micombero declared Burundi a republic with himself as president.

On 31 March 1972 Prince Charles returned to Burundi from Uganda and was placed under house arrest. On 29 April 1972 President Micombero dissolved the Council of Ministers and took full power; that night heavy fighting broke out between rebels from both Burundi and neighbouring countries, and the ruling Tutsi, apparently with the intention of destroying the Tutsi hegemony. Prince Charles was killed during the fighting the first night and the violence continued for about one month during which it was estimated that up to 120,000 were killed. On 14 July 1972 President Micombero reinstated a Government.

AREA AND POPULATION. Burundi extends from lat. $2\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ S. and long. 29° to 31° E., and has an area of 27,834 sq. km (10,747 sq. miles). It lies astride the main Nile-Congo dividing crest (6,000-7,000 ft) bounded on the west by the narrow plain of the Ruzizi River and Lake Tanganyika (2,534 ft). The interior is a broken plateau at an average height of about 5,000 ft, sloping eastwards down to Tanzania and the valley of the Maragarazi River. The southernmost tributary of the Nile system, the Luvironza, rises in the south of the country.

The Ruzizi plain has an average temperature of 23° C. (73° F.), the Nile-Congo crest of 17.3° C. (63° F.), the central plateau of 20° C. (68° F.). The long dry season lasts from June to August, the long rainy season from February to May. The annual rainfall at Bujumbura is 31 in., on the Nile-Congo crest 57 in.

The population at the last census in 1959 was 2,213,280; but is now probably over 3.5m. There are three ethnic groups—Hutu (Bantu, forming the great majority): Tutsi (Nilotic, less than 15%); Twa (pygmoids, less than 1%). There are some 3,500 Europeans and 1,500 Asians. In 1968 some 54,000 Tutsi refugees from Rwanda and about 20,000 Zaïrian refugees were living in Burundi.

Bujumbura, the capital, has about 100,000 inhabitants. Kitega (10,000 inhabitants) was formerly the royal residence.

GOVERNMENT. Burundi is a republic and a one-party (Uprona) state. There is as yet no constitution. The President, whose term of office is 7 years, governs through a Council of Ministers and the Political Bureau of the Party.

President of the Republic: Gen. Michel Micombero (born 1940, assumed office 1966).

The administrative divisions are: 8 provinces, each under a military governor (Bujumbura, Bubanza, Muramvya, Ngozi, Gitega, Muhinga, Ruyigi and Bururi); 18 arrondissements; and 181 communes.

Flag: White diagonal cross on green and red quarters, with a circular white panel in the centre with 3 scarlet 6-point stars arranged in a triangular pattern therein.

RELIGION. The population is predominantly Roman Catholic; there is a Roman Catholic archbishop and 3 bishops. The Anglican Missions under a bishop fall within the archdiocese of Uganda.

EDUCATION. In 1967–68 the number of children in primary schools was 170,000, 5,800 pupils were receiving secondary education and 1,337 were receiving craft and technical training. The university of Bujumbura has over 120 students.

The local language is Kirundi, a Bantu language. French is also an official language. Kiswahili is spoken in the commercial centres.

FINANCE. Currency. The currency is administered by the Bank of the Republic of Burundi. The rate was 190 Burundi francs = £1 in Feb. 1974.

Budget. The 1971 budget was 2,121m. Burundi francs, and this included expenditure on education, 611m., and defence, 300m.

DEFENCE. The national army totals approximately 3,500, including the Gendarmerie Nationale.

ECONOMY. Economic and technical assistance is provided substantially by Belgium and to a smaller degree by the European Economic Community and the United Nations.

AGRICULTURE. The main economic activity of the country is subsistence agriculture, which accounts for well over half of the gross national product. Beans, kassava, maize, sweet potatoes, groundnuts, peas, sorghum and bananas are grown according to the climate and the region.

The main cash crop is coffee, particularly arabica. A coffee board (OCIBU) manages the grading and export of the crop. The 1969 crop was 14,500 tons, provisional for 1970, 20,000 tons (a record). Cotton is also grown (7,426 tons in 1968). Plantations of good-quality tea are being developed (90 tons in 1968).

Cattle play an important traditional role, and there are about 590,000 head in the country. The quality is poor, but efforts are being made to improve it. There are some 640,000 goats and sheep and 15,000 pigs.

FISHERIES. There is a small commercial fishing industry on Lake Tanganyika producing 12,000 tons annually. Under the World Food Programme, a development scheme anticipates a catch of 20,000 tons by 1972.

MINING. There is some incipient mining activity; principal products are basthaesite, cassiterite, kaolin and gold. Total mineral exports, 487 tons (1967).

INDUSTRY. Industrial development is rudimentary. In Bujumbura there are plants for the processing of coffee and by-products of cotton, a brewery, cement works, a textile factory, a soap factory, a shoe factory and small metal workshops.

COMMERCE. The total value of exports in 1969 was 1,235.4m. Burundi francs and of imports, 1,652.1m. Burundi francs. Sources of imports in 1966 were Belgium-Luxembourg (29%), Japan (13.5%), West Germany (7.5%), Tanzania (6%) USA (6%), UK (5%) and Zaïre (3.5%). Principal imports were cottons and cotton goods, motor vehicles, synthetics textiles, flour and petrol products. Main exports in 1969 (in Burundi francs 1m.) were coffee (931.4), raw cotton (114.1); 90% of the coffee is bought by USA.

Trade of Burundi with the UK was as follows (in £1,000 sterling, British Board of Trade returns):

Exports and re-exports from UK	340	199	275	338	238	464

COMMUNICATIONS. There is a comprehensive interior road network connecting with Rwanda, the Congo and Tanzania. But only 25 miles are macadamized; and travelling can be difficult in the rainy season. There are lake services from Bujumbura to Kigoma (Tanzania). The main route for exports and imports is via Kigoma, and thence by rail to Dar es Salaam.

Bujumbura has an airport of international standard and there are regular services to Europe, Zaïre and East Africa.

In Jan. 1959 it formed an 'economic and technical union' with the 3 other territories of the former government-general of French Equatorial Africa. The Republic was admitted to the UN on 20 Sept. 1960.

CHILE

República de Chile

HISTORY. The Republic of Chile threw off allegiance to the crown of Spain, constituting a national government on 18 Sept. 1810, finally freeing itself from Spanish rule in 1818.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. By the constitution of 18 Sept. 1925 legislative power is vested in the National Congress, consisting of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies, both of which are elected by direct popular vote. The Senate consists of 50 members, elected for 8 years, who represent 10 provincial groups, each of which elects 5 senators. One-half of the Senate is renewable every 4 years. The Chamber of Deputies consists of members elected for 4 years by departments or groups of departments, 1 member for every 30,000 inhabitants or fraction over 15,000. A system of proportional representation prevails. Electors are all citizens of 18 years of age or over. Women were fully enfranchised in Jan. 1949. Congress sits from 21 May (Navy Day) to 18 Sept. (Independence Day), excluding extraordinary sessions.

The President is elected for 6 years, by direct popular vote, but is not eligible for re-election; he must be Chilean-born and over 30 years of age. Normally there is no Vice-President, but the President may appoint one temporarily, usually the Minister of Interior, when ill or out of the country. He has a modified veto; a bill which he has vetoed may, by a two-thirds vote of the members of both Chambers (a majority of the members being present), be sustained and become law.

The validity of all elections of president, deputies and senators is determined by a special body called Tribunal Calificador, consisting of 5 members chosen by lot from past-presidents or vice-presidents of the Chamber and Senate, members of the Supreme Court, of the Court of Appeal of the city where Congress meets.

The capital is Santiago, founded on 12 Feb. 1541.

National flag: Two horizontal bands, white, red, with a white star on blue square in top sixth next to staff.

National anthem: Dulce patria, recibe los votos (words by E. Lillo, 1847; tune by Ramón Carnicer, 1828).

The following is a list of the presidents since 1927:

Gen. Carlos Ibáñez (Acting, then elected), 6 May 1927–26 July 1931 (resigned).

Salvador Allende Gossens, 3 Nov. 1970–11 Sept. 1973 (deposed and committed suicide).

President of the Republic: Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

Minister of Foreign Affairs: Rear-Adm. Ismael Huerta Díaz

3,539,747 voters were registered for the 4 Sept. 1970 elections; votes cast being: Salvador Allende Gossens (Unidad Popular) 1,075,616; Jorge Alessandri (Independent) 1,036,278; Radomiro Tomic (Christian Democrat) 824,849; blank and invalid, 26,000; total, 2,962,743. The government of President Allende was overthrown on 11 Sept. 1973 by a military junta and Congress was dissolved and all seats declared vacant on 13 Sept.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. For the purposes of local government the republic is divided into provinces, presided over by Intendentes, and the provinces into departments, with Gobernadores as chief officers, appointed by the President. The departments constitute one or more municipal districts, each with a council or municipality of 5 to 15 members, elected for 3 years. Foreign residents may vote in municipal elections; in April 1970, 30,099 foreigners were on the electoral registers.

AREA AND POPULATION. Chile is divided into 25 provinces. All provinces except 3 extend from the Pacific to the international boundary, while the inter-provincial boundaries in most cases now follow watersheds instead of rivers, thus confining within one province the waters of a single system and avoiding jurisdictional disputes.

Many islands to the north, west and south belong to Chile, including Easter Island (Isla de Pascua; 63.9 sq. miles), discovered in 1722. The coastline is about 2,650 miles in length; the average width of the country, 120 miles. Area, 741,767 sq. km or 286,397 sq. miles.

In 1940 Chile declared, and in each subsequent year has reaffirmed, its ownership of the sector of the Antarctic lying between 53° and 90° W. long.; and asserted that the British claim to the sector between the meridians 20° and 90° W. long. overlapped the Chilean by 27°. Three Chilean bases were established in Antarctica in 1947, 1948 and 1951. A law promulgated 21 July 1955 put the Intendente of the Province of Magallanes in charge of the 'Chilean Antarctic Territory'.

Three thinly-settled southern provinces of Magallanes, Chiloé and Aysén and the northern province of Arica are known as 'free zones', for the severe restrictions on imports prevailing elsewhere are modified in respect of those areas.

The total population at the census of 30 June 1972 was 10,044,940. Density per sq. km. 1972, was 13.54; average annual increase, 2.67%.

The areas of the provinces and their estimated populations at 30 June 1972 were as follows:

Provinces	Area: sq. km	Population	Provinces	Area: sq. km	Population
Aconcagua	10,204	181,660	Llanquihue	18,407	225,821

Vital statistics (1969): Revised birth rate 25.04 per 1,000 population; death rate, 8.82; marriage rate, 6.99; infantile mortality rate, 8.7 per 1,000 live births.

The great majority of the population is mixed or mestizo, due to the free inter-marriage between the early Spaniards and women of indigenous tribes; language and culture remain of European origin. The indigenous inhabitants are of three branches: The Fuegians, mostly nomadic, living in or near Tierra del Fuego; the Araucanians in the valleys or on the western slopes of the Andes; the Changos, who inhabit the northern coast region and work as labourers.

The 3 leading cities, with the estimated population at 30 June 1972, are: Santiago, 1,759,087 (Greater Santiago, 3.7m.); Valparaíso, 296,000; Concepción, 178,000. Other towns, with estimated population 1966, are: Viña del Mar, 158,080; Talcahuano, 139,000; Antofagasta, 120,000; Temuco, 109,000; Valdivia, 89,500; Talca, 84,000; Chillán, 82,200; Osorno, 71,000; Iquique, 63,600. Punta Arenas, on the Straits of Magellan, with a population of 67,600, is the southernmost city in the world. The Antarctic Territory proper is now stated to be 484,800 sq. miles, with a population (1962) of 58.

There are 4 zones in Chile—the arid 'desert' zone in the north, which for many years furnished the world's entire supply of natural nitrate of soda, 90% of its iodine and 18% of copper consumed; the agricultural 'Mediterranean' zone in the centre; the 'forest' zone to the south; and the 'Atlantic' zone in the extreme south, barren on the Pacific side, but with rich sheltered pampa on the Atlantic side.

RELIGION. The Roman Catholic religion was disestablished in 1925; it remains, however, a national Church in a state wherein 89.5% of the population are Catholics. There are 1 cardinal-archbishop, 5 archbishops, 23 bishops and 2 vicars apostolic. Latest estimates show 6.7m. Roman Catholics, 880,500 Protestants and 30,000 Jews.

EDUCATION. Education is in 3 stages: Basic (6–14 years), Middle (15–18) and University (19–23). Enrolment (1970): Pre-school (a new programme initiated in 1970), 60,360 children; Primary school, 2,043,032; secondary school, 302,064.

University education is provided in the state university (founded in 1842), the Catholic University at Santiago (1888), the University of Concepción (1919), the Catholic University at Valparaíso (1928), the Universidad Técnica Federico Santa María at Valparaíso (1930), the Universidad Técnica del Estado (1952), Universidad Austral, Valdivia (1954) and Universidad del Norte, Antofagasta (1957) with a total student population of 96,000 in 1970.

CINEMAS (1972). Cinemas numbered 230; 74 of them are in Santiago.

NEWSPAPERS (1970). There were 64 daily newspapers with an aggregate daily circulation of about 550,000.

JUSTICE. There are a High Court of Justice in the capital, 10 courts of appeal distributed over the republic, tribunals of first instance in the departmental capitals and second-class judges in the sub-delegations. The police force had (1969) about 23,000 officers and men; it is organized and regulated by the President of the republic.

FINANCE. Currency. The old monetary unit was the gold peso, containing 0.183057 gramme of fine gold with, originally, a par value of £0.2½ gold or 12.7 cents US$ gold (or 20.6 cents new US). From Dec. 1959 onwards the rate (used to value the gold stock) has been 1.049 escudos (1,049 pesos) to the dollar. For customs purposes imports and exports are still valued in the old £0.2½ gold peso.

In Jan. 1960 a system came into force based on the escudo (equivalent of 1,000 pesos), the centésimo (10 pesos) and the milésimo (1 peso). New notes have replaced the old peso notes, and new escudo coins of 10, 5, 2 centésimos and 1 centésimo have been issued.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure were as follows (1,000 escudos):

	1967	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972 ¹
Revenue	5,277,000	7,557,000	10,605,000	19,614,900	30,930,100	43,273,000

Since 1957 the estimates have consisted of a local currency budget (as above) plus a foreign-exchange budget (in US$1m.). The 1971 expenditures envisaged E.2 393m. for defence, E.3,870m. for education, E.1,054m. for agriculture, E.2,883m. for public works, E.994m. for housing and E.1,063m. for public health. The national development corporation (CORFO) had a total budget on local currencies of E.3,193m. and on foreign currencies of US$171m. for 1971.

Foreign bonds outstanding at 31 Dec. 1971 were £6.3m., US$28.2m., Sw.Fr. 33.6m. nominal value. Total foreign debt at 30 June 1971 amounted to the equivalent of US$2,347m.

DEFENCE. Chile on 9 April 1952 signed the Military Assistance pact with the US, promising access to raw materials and armed support in defence of the Western Hemisphere.

Army. The Chilean Army is a national militia in which all able-bodied citizens are obliged to serve. Liability extends from the 20th to the 45th year, inclusive. In many cases exemption can easily be obtained, as the supply exceeds the number that can adequately be trained. The annual intake has varied up to 20,000. Recruits are called up in their 20th year, and are trained for 12 months. After this training they pass into the reserve, which is estimated at 200,000.

The Army is organized in 16 infantry (including 10 motorized), 5 engineer, 6 cavalry (2 armoured and 2 horsed), and 5 artillery regiments. Total strength, 32,000 men.

Navy. The principal ships of the Chilean Navy are as follows:

Com- pleted	Name	Standard displace- ment Tons	Armour Belt In.	Guns In.	Principal armament	Tor- pedo tubes	Shaft horse- power	Speed Knots
Cruisers
1943	Latorre ^a	8,200	3 4	3-5	7 6-in.	—	100,000	33

² Ex-Göta Lejon, purchased from Sweden in 1971.

There are also 2 old ex-US diesel powered patrol submarines, 4 destroyers, 4 frigates (ex-US destroyer escort transports), 4 torpedo boats, 6 patrol vessels, 1 landing ship, 4 landing craft, 1 survey ship, 1 transport, 1 training ship, 1 antarctic patrol ship, 3 oilers, 1 floating dock and 9 tugs. Two destroyers were built in Britain, Williams and Riveros, commissioned in 1960 and 1962 respectively and recently updated in Britain.

Two frigates of the 'Leander' type and 2 submarines of the 'Oberon' type are under construction in Britain.

Naval personnel in 1973 totalled 22,000 (1,300 officers and 18,500 ratings and 2,200 marines and coastal artillery).

Air Force. Following the purchase of 34 Hunter fighter-bombers and 4 Hunter 2-seat trainers from Britain, the Chilean Air Force distributed these aircraft and its older F-80C Shooting Star jet fighters to form 3 combat groups. There is also a light bomber group of B-26 Invaders. Transport units have turboprop C-130H Hercules, C-118/DC-6 piston-engined transports supplied under MAP, 25 C-47s, 7 Canadian-built turboprop Twin Otters and smaller types. Training types in service include the T-34, T-37B, T-33, Beechcraft 99A and Vampire. Albatross amphibians are used for maritime patrol and, with helicopters, for air/sea rescue. Total strength is about 8,500 personnel and 200 aircraft.

AGRICULTURE. Agriculture and forestry contribute one-ninth of the national product, although one-third of the population take part in it. Total area of land being exploited (census of 1968) was 52.4m. hectares; 14.9% for agriculture, 26.7% for pasture, 28.8% for forest; 29.6% is desert or unproductive.

Chile has to import annually about two-thirds of the foodstuffs needed, a quarter of the total imports.

Some principal crops and exports were as follows:

Crop	Area sown, 1,000 hectares 1969-70	Production, 1,000 metric tons 1969-70
Wheat	727	1,306
Oats	75	110
Barley	53	97
Maize	77	239
Rice	27	76
Potatoes	80	683
Beans	70	65
Lentils	18	11
Peas	10	7

There were in 1955 over 300 large farms, each with more than 12,250 acres, while 500,000 peasants live on less than 4 acres per family. As a result of the Agrarian Reform Bill the CORA (Corporación de la Reforma Agraria) had by March 1972 expropriated 3,601 farms totalling 7,068,780 hectares and settlements had been formed for 43,245 families.

In the Magallanes pampa region and Tierra del Fuego there are about 3m. high-grade sheep (chiefly Romney Marsh and Corriedales). Output of wool is about 11,000 metric tons; exports in 1969, 10,355 metric tons, valued at US$7,836,717.

FORESTRY. According to the Forestry Institute (census 1966) there were 277,944 hectares of artificial forests from Maule to Cautin, the most important species being the pine (pinus radiata) which covers 260,685 hectares. Eucalyptus covers 12,943 hectares, poplars 956 hectares. The volume of all species reaches 62m. cu. metres, of which 60m. correspond to pine. There were also 32,550 sq. km of native forest, divided into the following species: Araucaria, Coigüe, Valdiviano, Roble-Raúl, Chilote, Lenga, Alerce and Ciprés.

Production during 1969 amounted to about 45m. in. of sawn timber. Exports in 1969 were valued at US$7.38m.

Paper production in 1971 was 220,000 metric tons.

FISHERIES. Chile's catch of fish in 1969 was 1.07m. metric tons, including shell fish, 71,900 metric tons. Exports of seafood in 1969 were US$24.7m., of which fishmeal accounted for US$18.5m.

MINING. The wealth of the country consists chiefly in its minerals, especially in the northern provinces of Atacama and Tarapacá.

Copper is the most important source of foreign exchange (about 80% of exports) and Government revenues (over 30%). Reserves represent 40% of the world total. Production in 1970 amounted to 707,500 metric tons. In 1971 proceeds returned to Chile by the large mining companies equalled US$433.8m., and by the medium- and small-sized companies, US$252.4m. On 11 July 1971 the copper industry was nationalized.

Nitrate of soda is found in the Atacama deserts. Once Chile's principal export, production was 782,500 metric tons in 1971 (exports in 1969, 537,804 metric tons). Iodine is a by-product: 1971 production totalled 2,212 metric tons. The use of solar evaporation as a means of reducing costs has developed the production of potassium salts as an additional by-product.

Iron ore, of which high-grade deposits estimated at over 1,000m. tons exist in the province of Atacama and Coquimbo, has overtaken nitrate as Chile's second mineral. Production in 1971 was 11.22m. metric tons.

Coal reserves exceed 2,000m. tons, partially low in thermal unit. Net 1971 production was 1.52m. metric tons. Petroleum was discovered in 1945 in Magallanes with annual output 2.05m. cu. metres in 1971. This state-owned industry is developing fast, an important by-product being liquefied gas (617,400m. cu. metres in 1971), which covered home requirements and left 70,550 cu. metres for export to Argentina and Brazil.

In 1971 other minerals include gold, of which the major part is from copper production (1,996 kg), silver (84,897 kg), molybdenum (6,321 metric tons, pure), zinc (1,982 metric tons), manganese (9,916 metric tons), salt (425,593 metric tons), sulphur (109,197 metric tons) and lead (881 metric tons).

INDUSTRY. A nationally-owned steel plant has been established at Huachipato, near Concepción. Output, 1971, 499,845 metric tons of pig-iron; this is to be doubled by 1973-74.

The textile industry consumes 70% of the wool clip of the country, or about 14,000 metric tons. In 1971 Chile produced 2,710 metric tons of rayon fibre.

ELECTRICITY. In 1971 production was 8,450m. kwh., of which public utilities owned 64% and mines 36%.

TOURISM. There were 261,214 foreign visitors in 1968.

LABOUR. In 1971 the 'economically active' numbered 3,137,000. Professional and 'white-collar' workers numbered 1,300,900; agriculture employed 750,000; manufacturing, 602,900; mining, 100,500; construction, 198,200, and transport, 184,600. A National Health Service covers some 1.5m. employees throughout the country, and there are plans to extend it to a further 1.5m.

Trade unions began in the middle 1880s. The legal minimum monthly wage in Santiago on 1 Oct. 1972 was fixed at E.2,082.

COMMERCE. Imports and exports in US$1m.:

There are 2,185 km of navigable rivers.

ROADS. In 1966 there were in Chile 63,433 km of highways, of which 6,280 first-class paved, 23,290 second class and 33,863 earth. There were in 1970, 176,100 automobiles, 133,800 goods vehicles and 16,000 buses.

RAILWAYS. The total length of railway lines is 9,757 km; of these private railway lines, principally British-owned, amount to 1,335 km. Electrification of the railways is proceeding. A railway from Salta in north-western Argentina to Antofagasta was opened in Dec. 1953.

AVIATION. There were, 1972, 5 customs airports, 11 military airports, 16 civilian airports and 287 landing grounds. Chile is served by 17 commercial air companies (2 Chilean). There are 5 international airports. In 1971, 189,147 passengers were carried into and out of Chile on international services; 200,069 passengers were carried on internal routes.

POST. There are 1,486 post offices and agencies. The length of telegraph lines in 1971 was 12,870 km. In 1972 there were 387,367 (Santiago, 256,818) telephones in use, all (except 2,500) state owned.

A chain of wireless stations along the coast for shore-to-ship transmission is operated by the Navy. At the end of 1971 there were some 100 commercial broadcasting stations. Three television stations are operated by the Universities and there is a national television station. On 9 Aug. 1968 the satellite station at Longovilo, 50 miles south-west of Santiago was inaugurated to cover transmissions (including colour) from the USA and Europe.

BANKING. On 31 Dec. 1971 the Central Bank had gold and foreign exchange reserves equal to US$170m. Notes in circulation and deposits in currency were E.21,213m. at 31 Dec. 1971; total deposits in the commercial banks stood at E.13,157m., in the state bank at E.12,515m. and in the central bank E.10,813m. on 31 Dec. 1971.

From 1 Oct. 1966 commercial banks must maintain minimum cash reserves of 40% of the daily average of all sight and term deposits in local currency between 24 Dec. 1965 and 10 Jan. 1966. Higher reserves are obligatory in excess of that level. Several local and foreign banks have been nationalized.

Inflation is severe: the official cost of living index rose 22.1% at 1 Jan. 1972 to 99.8% at 1 Sept. 1972.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system has been legally established in Chile since 1865, but the old Spanish weights and measures are still in use to some extent.

CHINA

Chung-Hua Jen-Min Kung-Ho Kuo —People's Republic of China

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. In the course of 1949 the Communists obtained full control of the mainland of China, and in 1950 also over most islands off the coast, including Hainan.

On 21 Sept. 1949 the 'Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference' met in Peking, convened by the Chinese Communist Party. The Conference adopted a 'Common Programme' of 60 articles and the 'Organic Law of the Central People's Government' (31 articles). Both became the basis of the Constitution adopted on 20 Sept. 1954 by the First National People's Congress, the supreme legislative body. The Consultative Conference (of about 1,200 members in Dec. 1964) continues to exist as an advisory body.

The Conference elected Mao Tse-tung as Chairman of the Republic; he proclaimed the establishment of the People's Republic of China on 1 Oct. 1949 (now the national day). In 1959 Mao relinquished the position of Chairman of the Republic in favour of Liu Shao-ch'i. Liu was dismissed in 1968. Since early 1972 one of the two Vice-Chairmen, Tung Pi-wu, has been styled 'Acting Chairman'. The other Vice-Chairman is Mme Soong Ch'ing-ling, widow of Sun Yat-sen.

The 1954 Constitution was both a political and an organizational document. It indicated the steps to be taken to build a 'socialist' society, defined the structure and functions of government organs and the rights and duties of citizens appropriate in the period of transition to 'socialism'. Some policy objectives have been attained since 1954; e.g., the elimination of capitalist enterprises and the collectivization of agriculture. Revision of the Constitution is believed to be under consideration.

The National People's Congress is the highest organ of state power and the sole legislative authority. It can amend the Constitution, elects and has power to remove from office the highest State dignitaries, decides on the national economic plan, on questions of war and peace, etc. The Congress elects a Standing Committee which conducts the elections, convenes Congress, interprets laws, adopts decrees, supervises the work of Government, etc.

The Constitution provides that the Congress be elected for a 4-year term and should meet at least once a year. It is composed of deputies elected by provinces, autonomous regions, municipalities directly administered by the Government, the armed forces and Chinese resident abroad. According to the Electoral Law as amended on 8 Dec. 1963, the provinces and autonomous regions elect 1 deputy for every 400,000 persons (or 10 deputies from each province, whichever be the greater); Government-administered cities, industrial cities and industrial districts with populations of 200,000–300,000 elect 1 deputy for every 50,000 persons; the national minorities, 300 deputies; the armed forces, 120; the overseas Chinese, 30 deputies ('to be elected from among returned overseas Chinese'). The Third Congress, elected in Sept. 1964, consists of 3,040 deputies, compared with 1,226 before the revision of the electoral law. It has met only once, in Dec. 1964–Jan. 1965. The Fourth Congress has yet to be elected.

The State Council is the executive organ of the Congress, that is, the Central People's Government. It consists of the Premier, several Vice-Premiers, Ministers and Heads of Commissions. It issues directives, and, inter alia, supervises the work of Ministries, Commissions and local government authorities, administers the national economic plan and supervises the direction of foreign affairs and foreign trade.

Premier: Chou En-lai; Vice-Premiers: Li Fu-chun, Li Hsien-nien, Nie Jong-chen, Teng Hsiao-ping; Foreign Minister: Chi Peng-fei; Foreign Trade: Li Ch'iang; Head of Planning Commission: Yu Chiu-li; Agriculture: Sha Feng; Health: Mme. Liu Hsiang-pin.

Since 1970 when China began to emerge from the isolation of the Cultural Revolution, her diplomatic relations have expanded considerably. On 25 Oct. 1971 the United Nations voted for the People's Republic to take over the China seat from the Nationalists by 76 votes to 35 with 17 abstentions. Diplomatic relations have not been established with the United States, but President Nixon visited China in Feb. 1972 and in 1973 'liaison offices' were opened in the capitals of the two countries.

State emblem: 5 stars above Peking's Gate of Heavenly Peace, surrounded by a border of ears of grain entwined with drapings, which form a knot in the centre of a cogwheel at the base; the colours are red and gold.

National flag: Red, with 5 stars.

National anthem: The March of the Volunteers (words by Tien Han; tune by Nieh Erh).

De facto power is in the hands of the Communist Party of China, which probably has between 18m. and 20m. members. There are 8 other parties, all members of the United Front. Communist Party officials hold key positions in government organs and most social, economic and cultural organizations. In mid-1966 the Party Chairman, Mao Tse-tung, launched the 'Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution' to eradicate 'revisionism' in the Party, Government and the community generally. Numerous Party and State officials were dismissed both at the centre and in the provinces. The Cultural Revolution can be taken to have terminated by April 1969 when the long-delayed 9th National Party Congress was convened (the 8th Congress was elected in 1956 and the 9th was due for election in 1960). The Congress adopted a new Party Constitution which proclaimed the leading rôle of the Party in the State and designated Vice-Chairman Lin Piao as Chairman Mao's successor. A new Central Committee was elected. A factional dispute developed, however, centred on Lin Piao, now denounced and said to have been killed in an air crash in Mongolia in Sept. 1971 while attempting to escape. Allegedly associated with him were a number of Politburo members.

In Aug. 1973 a new Party Congress (the 10th) was convened which adopted amendments to the Party Constitution, removing references to Lin Piao and the succession to Chairman Mao, and elected a new Central Committee (195 full and 124 alternate members). The Central Committee appointed a new Politburo with 21 full and 4 alternate members, a Standing Committee of 9 and 5 Vice-Chairmen. The full members of the new Politburo were: Chairman: Mao Tse-tung. Vice-Chairmen: Chou En-lai, Wang Hung-wen, K'ang Sheng, Yeh Chien-ying and Li Teh-sheng; Chang Ch'un-chiao, Chu Teh, Tung Pi-wu (these 9 constituting the Standing Committee). Ch'en Hsi-lien, Ch'en Yung-kuei, Chi Teng-k'uei, Chiang Ch'ing (Mao's wife), Hsü Shih-yu, Hua Kuo-feng, Li Hsien-nien, Liu Po-ch'eng, Wang Tung-hsing, Wei Kuo-ch'ing, Wu Teh, Yao Wen-yüan. In Jan. 1974, Teng Hsiao-ping, Party Secretary-General dismissed during the Cultural Revolution, was reappointed to the Politburo.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. Local government is carried out by local People's Congresses and People's Councils. There are 3 administrative levels: (1) Provinces, Autonomous Regions and the municipalities directly administered by the Government; (2) chou, counties, autonomous counties and municipalities; (3) towns and rural communes. During the Cultural Revolution the People's Councils were replaced by Revolutionary Committees.

AREA AND POPULATION. China is composed of 22 provinces (this figure includes Taiwan³), 5 autonomous regions originally entirely or largely inhabited by national minorities (owing to the immigration of Han Chinese the original nationality is sometimes outnumbered, e.g., by 10 to 1 in Inner Mongolia), namely Inner Mongolia, Sinkiang-Uighur, Kwangsi-Chuang, Ninghsia-Hui, Tibet (and Chamdo area) and 3 centrally controlled municipalities (Peking, Shanghai, Tientsin). The capital is Peking.

The total area is estimated at 9,597,000 sq. km (3,704,400 sq. miles).

Population at the last census (1953): 601,938,035. This figure was arrived at as follows: Direct census, 574,205,940; Taiwan ('yet to be liberated'), 7,591,298; Chinese resident or studying abroad, 11,743,000; Chinese 'in remote border regions', 8,397,477. Urban population, 77.3m. (13.3%); rural population, 505.3m. (86.7%). According to Chinese news reports in 1972 the population had exceeded 700m., and the rate of increase was about 2% per year. The population may now, therefore, be in the region of 800m. Family planning is encouraged and the recommended ages for marriage are 25 for women and 30 for men. The term 'Han' is used to distinguish racial Chinese from other Chinese citizens. Some 6% of the population are non-Han. Urban population was estimated at 150m. in 1967, but enforced migration to rural areas since may have lowered this figure.

The number of persons of Chinese race outside China and Taiwan was estimated at 16.34m. in mid-1962, including 3.8m. in Thailand, 3.2m. in Hong Kong, 2.5m. in Indonesia, 2.5m. in Malaysia, 1.25m. in Singapore, 237,000 in USA, 52,000 in Canada and 12,000 in the UK.

A number of widely divergent varieties of Chinese are spoken. The official 'Common Speech' (Putonghua) is based on the dialect of North China, and the Government is promoting its use generally. The ideographic writing system is uniform throughout the country. Characters have been simplified, and in 1958 a 26-letter Roman alphabet was adopted as a means of transcribing Putonghua as a language-learning aid, for indexing etc.

From 1949 to 1955 the country was divided into 6 'great administrative regions' for government and Party purposes. This system was terminated in 1955, but in 1961 was revived for Party organizational purposes. The table below shows the Provinces, Autonomous Regions and Government-controlled Municipalities grouped regionally. The cities shown in brackets are the seats of the Regional Bureaux of the Party.

Manchuria, a term not used by the Chinese, is roughly identical with the 3 provinces of the N.E. Region.

Tibet. For events before the revolt of 1959 see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1964-65, under TIBET. After the revolt was suppressed the Preparatory Committee for the Autonomous Region of Tibet (set up 1955) took over the functions of local government, led by its Vice-Chairman, the Panchen Lama, in the absence of its Chairman, the Dalai Lama, who had fled to India in 1959. In Dec. 1964 both the Dalai and Panchen Lamas were removed from their posts. On 9 Sept. 1965 Tibet became an Autonomous Region. 301 delegates were elected to the first People's Congress, of whom 226 were Tibetans. In 1970 the population was reported to be 1.3m. The number of Chinese now in Tibet is at least 500,000. 85,000 Tibetans live in exile (mainly in India). Chinese efforts to modernize Tibet include irrigation, road-building and the establishment of light industry: some 60 factories have been set up making textiles, cement, matches, paper, chemicals and agricultural machinery. A coal mine was opened in 1970. There are some 26,000 Tibetan industrial workers.

Agricultural communes were first introduced in 1965; by 1972 there were about 700.

Buddhist monasteries were suppressed during the Cultural Revolution, but some were restored in 1972. Education has been secularized and made free and compulsory. In 1973 it was claimed there were 10 middle schools and over 2,000 primary schools with a total of about 124,000 pupils. In 1965 there were 7 secondary schools. In 1965 there were also 15 hospitals and 149 clinics.

RELIGION. Confucianism, Buddhism and Taoism have long been established. Confucianism has no ecclesiastical organization and appears rather as a philosophy of ethics and government. Taoism—of Chinese origin—copied Buddhist ceremonial soon after the arrival of Buddhism two millennia ago. Buddhism in return adopted many Taoist beliefs and practices. It is no longer possible to estimate the number of adherents to these faiths. A campaign against Confucianism was launched in 1974.

Ceremonies of reverence to ancestors have been observed by the whole population regardless of philosophical or religious beliefs.

Moslems are found in every province of China, being most numerous in the Ninghsia-Hui Autonomous Region, Yunnan, Shensi, Kansu, Hopei, Honan, Shantung, Szechwan, Sinkiang and Shansi. The total is estimated at 2-5% of the population.

Roman Catholicism has had a footing in China for more than 3 centuries. In 1973 it had about 2m. adherents and are members of the Patriotic Catholic Association, which declared its independence of Rome in 1958. Bishops are elected.

Protestant Missions date from 1807. There were between 800,000 and 900,000 Protestants in 1958.

EDUCATION. Major institutes of education were closed at the beginning of the Cultural Revolution and primary and middle school education was interrupted. It was announced that the entire education system was to be reformed. From 1968 schools began to re-open and in the summer of 1970 some higher educational institutes began to enrol new students. Reforms include an apparent reduction in the number of years in primary schools from 6 to 5, in middle schools from 6 to 4, the selection of students for higher institutes from among workers, soldiers, peasants and school graduates who have had 2-3 years experience in industry or agriculture, the application of a policy of part-work part-study, and more emphasis upon political education. Courses in higher institutes are from 2-3 years duration (3-4 years in medical schools). 150,000 students entered universities in 1973. May Seventh cadre schools (rural camps for non-manual workers) have been set up with the avowed aim of preventing the formation of a privileged élite. Comprehensive recent statistics are not available. It was reported that over 153,000 students were enrolled in institutes of higher education in 1973.

The Academy of Sciences had in 1964 some 20 provincial branches.

Institutes of higher learning included in 1961: 61 universities, 271 engineering colleges, 113 colleges of agriculture and forestry, 174 teacher-training colleges and 142 medical schools. Some 170,000 students (one-third technical) graduated in 1962.

Among the universities are the following: People's University of China, Peking (founded 1912 by Dr Sun Yat-sen; reorganized 1950; about 3,000 students); Peking University, Peking (1898, enlarged 1945; about 10,000 students); Amoy University, Fukien (1921 and 1937); Fudan University, Shanghai (1905); Inner Mongolia University, Huhehot; Lanchow University, Lanchow (Kansu Prov.); Nankai University, Tientsin (1919); Nanking University, Nanking (1888 and 1928); People's University of North-East China, Changchun (Kirin Prov.); North-West University, Sian (Shensi Prov.); Shantung University, Tsingtao (1926); Sun Yat-sen University, Canton (founded 1924 by Dr Sun Yat-sen); Szechwan University, Chengtu (1931); Wuhan University, Wuhan (Hupeh Prov.; 1905 and 1928); Yunnan University, Kunming. In 1958 a university of science and technology was set up by the Academy of Sciences.

CINEMAS numbered 1,386 in 1958.

NEWSPAPERS. The Party newspaper is Jen Min Jih Pao (or Renmin Ribao, People's Daily). In 1972 it had a daily circulation of 3.5m.

SOCIAL WELFARE. Not all medical treatment is provided free, but costs are partly borne by the patient's employing organization. Figures for doctors generally are not available, but it was reported in 1973 that there were 8,000 general practitioners in Inner Mongolia (i.e., about 1 per 1,000 inhabitants). Some 25% of doctors are likely to be trained in Chinese techniques.

JUSTICE. Justice is administered by 'people's courts' which are divided into some 30 higher, 200 intermediate and 2,000 fundamental courts, and headed by the Supreme People's Court. The latter is accountable to the National People's Congress and not only tries cases and hears appeals, but supervises the work of the people's courts; it has been responsible for judicial administration since the abolition of the Ministry of Justice in 1959.

People's courts are composed of a president, vice-presidents and judges. Elected 'people's assessors' take part in trials alongside judges. Fundamental courts may establish 'people's tribunals' to try civil and minor criminal cases, and 'people's conciliation committees' are charged with settling disputes.

There are also special military courts.

The Procuracy has supervisory powers over the observance of law. It consists of the Supreme People's Procuratorate and local and special procuratorates. The Chief Procurator is elected by the National People's Congress for 4 years.

FINANCE. Currency. The currency is called Renminbi (RMB, i.e., People's Currency). The unit of currency is the yuan which is divided into 10 chiao, the chiao, into 10 fen. The official rate of exchange is £1 = 4.66 yuan; US$1 = 1.92 yuan; Hong Kong $1 = 0.3795 yuan; 1 rouble = 2.222 yuan (non-commercial, 1 rouble = 1.29 yuan).

From 1 Dec. 1957 the People's Bank has issued small aluminium coins of 1, 2 and 5 fen (= 0.01, 0.02, 0.05 yuan) and also a new 10-yuan note.

Budget. The latest budget published was that for 1960 which balanced at 70,020m. yuan. A large budgetary surplus was officially announced for 1970.

It is claimed that all national bonds have been redeemed and China has no internal or external debts. US claims in China are about US$196m., and Chinese claims in USA about US$78m.

China's gold and foreign exchange reserves were estimated at US$2,000m. in 1973. In Sept. 1973 China applied to join IMF.

DEFENCE. China is divided into 11 military regions. The military commander also commands the air, naval and civilian militia forces assigned to each region. Conscription was introduced in Feb. 1955. Service begins at the age of 18 and lasts 4 years in the Army, 5 years in the Air Force and 6 years in the Navy.

Formal gradations in military ranks were abolished in 1965; ranks are designated by function.

The Chinese exploded their first nuclear device in May 1964, and tested their first hydrogen bomb in June 1967. Their first earth satellite was launched in April 1970, and a second in March 1971.

Army. The Army consists of 150 divisions, including 20 artillery, 5 armoured, 3 cavalry and 2 airborne divisions. Only a small proportion of the conscript potential, about 700,000 per annum, are called up to serve 3 years. Total strength at the end of 1969 was between 2.5m. and 2.6m.

The security forces, including the armed police, number some 300,000.

The People's Militia has a strength of over 5m.

Navy. Present strength comprises 44 submarines, 9 destroyers, 9 frigates, 11 old escorts, 17 missile boats, 20 patrol vessels, 315 fast gunboats, 27 minesweepers, 200 fast torpedo boats, 22 coastal and river defence vessels, 54 landing ships and landing craft, 33 auxiliaries and support ships and 375 miscellaneous vessels and service craft.

Active personnel (1973): 160,000 officers and men, including 28,000 marines and 20,000 naval airmen.

Main naval bases: Tsingtao, Lushun (North Sea Fleet); Shanghai, Chou Shan (East Sea Fleet); Whampao, Tsamkong (South Sea Fleet).

The naval air force of over 450 aircraft includes MiG-17, MiG-19 and MiG-21 fighters, some 100 Il-28 torpedo bombers, Madge flying boats, Hound M14 helicopters and communications and transport aircraft.

Air Force. In 1973 the Air Force was estimated at 3,000 front-line aircraft, organized in about 40 regiments of jet-fighters and several regiments of tactical bombers, plus reconnaissance, transport and helicopter units. Each regiment is made up of 3 or 4 squadrons (each 12 aircraft), and 3 regiments form a division.

Equipment is Russian in design and consists mainly of F-8 (MiG-21), F-6 (MiG-19) and F-4 (MiG-17) fighters, with about 200 Il-28 jet-bombers and 100 Chinese-built copies of the Soviet Tu-16 twin-jet strategic bomber, Il-14 and An-2 piston-engined transports, and Mi-1 and Mi-4 helicopters. The MiG fighters have been manufactured in China, initially under licence, and other types have been assembled there. Production is estimated at well over 1,000 F-4s, several hundred F-2 (MiG 15UTI) trainers, more than 1,000 F-6s and 1,300 F-8s between 1956 and 1973, when deliveries of improved versions of the F-8 were continuing, together with the new twin-jet F-9 and about 5 TU-16s per month.

Total strength (1973) about 220,000 men.

PRODUCTION. No official statistics were issued between 1960 and 1970; a few figures have been made public since. Figures for 1958 and 1959 were exaggerated.

PLANNING. For planning history since 1953 see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-Book, 1973-74, p. 817.

Planning is decentralized, and priority is given to agriculture and local small-scale industry. The basic planning document is the national annual plan. In the background are specialized long-term plans (i.e., for urbanization) and the global indicative 5-year plans (the present, 4th, is running from 1971 to 1975).

AGRICULTURE. China remains essentially an agricultural country. Intensive agriculture and horticulture have been practised for millennia. Present-day policy aims to avert the traditional threats from floods and droughts by soil conservancy, afforestation, irrigation and drainage projects, and to increase the 'high stable yields' areas by introducing fertilizers, pesticides and improved crops. Crop priorities: food grains; raw materials for industry (especially cotton); crops for export (especially oil seeds). Among livestock, priority is given to pig production.

In 1950 the land belonging to the feudal nobility and to monasteries and other institutions was confiscated by the State. By the end of 1952 land reform and by the end of 1958 the socialization of agriculture was declared to be complete.

By the end of 1958 the peasant population of some 500m. had been organized into roughly 24,000 'communes', each consisting of a number of villages and 5,000-10,000 families. The commune took over the local government function at the village (hsiang) level and assumed responsibility for management, production, trade, welfare, organization of the local militia, etc. Centralized authority was discharged down through the production 'brigade' to the production 'team' at ground level. Since 1958 some modifications have been made in the commune system, and the number of communes raised to 74,000 by reducing their size. Small private plots are permitted.

In 1964 there were 110m. hectares of arable land. In 1972 there were about 23m. tractors in use.

Agricultural production (in 1m. metric tons) has been as follows (with the sown area (in 1m. hectares) in parentheses): Total grain, 1959, 167.6 (109.1); 1972, 240; rice, 1959, 80.2 (29.7); 1963, 78.4 (28.2); wheat, 1959, 24.3 (24.3); 1963, 21.8 (24.2); potatoes, 1959, 21.6 (12.7); 1963, 24.3 (13.3).

FAO estimates in metric tons (1969): Potatoes, 31.2m.; (1971) tea, 173,000; (1972) wheat, 31m.; soybeans, 11.8m.; groundnuts, 2.8m.; tobacco, 878,000; cottonseed, 3m. Total grain output for 1972 was officially put at 240m. metric tons, a slight decline on 1971.

Livestock. Official claim for 1959: Cattle, 65.43m.; horses, 7.6m.; sheep and goats, 112.53m.; pigs, 180m. FAO estimates (1971): Sheep, 71m.; cattle, 63.3m.; pigs, 270m. Milk production, (1970) 3.2m. metric tons; meat, 11.3m. metric tons.

FORESTRY. Forests cover some 12m. hectares. The chief forested areas are in Heilungkiang, Szechwan and Yunnan. The most important tree is the tung (Jatropha Curcas L.), from which oil is produced: it grows chiefly in Szechwan. Tung-oil production amounted to 115,000 metric tons in 1948-49. Timber output in 1957 was 27.87m.; 1958, 35m.; 1959, 41.2m.

The most important timber product is teak. It is estimated that some 1.3m. hectares are afforested each year.

MINING. Coal. Most provinces contain coal, and in 1973 there were 70 major production centres, the larger ones in the north. Coal reserves are estimated at 262,941m. metric tons. Coal and lignite production was estimated at 350m. metric tons in 1972.

Iron. Iron ores are abundant in the anthracite field of Shansi, in Hopei, in Shantung and other provinces, and iron (found in conjunction with coal) is worked in Manchuria. 300m. tons of ore are estimated to be in Shansi; the principal iron-ore reserves total about 19,840m. tons. The Tayeh iron deposits, near Wuhan, are among the richest in the world. Estimated output of iron ore in 1972, 75m. metric tons. The biggest steel bases are at Anshan (in Manchuria) with a capacity of 6m. tons, Wuhan and Paotow (Inner Mongolia) (capacity 1.5m. tons).

Oil and natural gas. China has made rapid progress in oil extraction and refining. The largest oilfields are at Taching, Yumen and Karamai. Refining capacity is estimated at 12m. tons per annum. Crude oil reserves are about 2,700m. tons. Crude oil production in 1972 was claimed to be 30m. metric tons (including crude petroleum, crude shale oil, oil from coal carbonization and synthetic crude oil from coal). Natural gas is available from fields near Canton and Shanghai. Production is small (estimated 1,000m. cu. metres for 1967).

Tin. Tin ore is plentiful in Yunnan, where the tin-mining industry has long existed; production of tin in 1964, 25,000 metric tons. Tin production was estimated at 20,000 metric tons in 1967.

Tungsten. China is the world's principal producer of wolfram (tungsten ore), producing an estimated 10,000 metric tons in 1972. Mining of wolfram is carried on in Hunan, Kwangtung and Yunnan.

Estimated production of other minerals in 1969 (in metric tons): Phosphate rock, 1.1m.; salt, 15,000; sulphur, 130,000; asbestos, 160,000; bauxite (1967), 350,000; aluminium (1972), 150,000; antimony (1972), 14,000; copper (1972), 150,000; lead (1972), 110,000; manganese, 1m.; zinc, (1972), 120,000. Other minerals produced: barite, bismuth, gold, graphite, gypsum, mercury, molybdenum, silver.

INDUSTRY. 'Cottage' industry is very old in the economy and persists into the 20th century. Modern industrial development began with the manufacture of cotton textiles, and the establishment of some silk filatures, steel plants, flour-mills and match factories. The first 5-year plan gave priority to the development of heavy industry, but since the withdrawal of Soviet aid and the failure of the 'Great Leap Forward' a more modest emphasis has been placed on it. Expanding sectors of manufacture are: steel, chemicals, cement, agricultural implements, plastics and lorries.

In 1970 a policy of establishing small-scale local industries was introduced.

Industrial production claimed for 1959, in 1m. metric tons: Coal, 347.8; pig-iron, 20.5; cement, 12.27; paper, 1.7; timber, 41.2m. cu. metres; electricity (1960), 55,000m. kwh.; cotton yarn, 8.2m. bales; textile fabrics (in 1m. metres): cotton, 7,500; woollen, 23.59; silk, over 190.

23m. metric tons of steel were produced in 1972, 21m. in 1971. Between 10m. and 12m. metric tons of chemical fertilizer were produced in 1972.

Western estimates for 1971 in metric tons: Pig-iron, 22m.; aluminium, 110,000; cement, 20m.; chemical fertilizers, 16.8m.

The average annual wage of non-agricultural workers was 650 yuan in 1971.

ELECTRICITY. In 1973 coal provided 90% of China's energy, although there is a large hydro-electric potential in the centre and south of the country. Generating is not centralized; local units range between 30 and 60 mw of output. Estimated output in 1965, 36,000–40,000 kwh.

COMMERCE. Foreign trade is conducted through national corporations under the Ministry of Foreign Trade. In some countries with which China is not in diplomatic relations trade is handled by offices of the China Council for the Promotion of International Trade, a non-governmental body in which the corporations are represented.

Imports include grain, cotton, rubber, fertilizers, metals and machinery; exports: agricultural products, textiles, wolfram and antimony.

Estimated total trade for 1973: US$8,000m.

Owing to the Soviet-Chinese dissensions, trade between the two countries declined (to 42m. roubles in 1970. Cf. 5,129m. roubles in 1957) and 80% of China's trade is now with non-Communist countries. However, a Sino-Soviet trade agreement was signed in 1970 and renewed in 1971 and trade increased to 210.6m. roubles in 1972. Japan is China's biggest trading partner (total trade, 1972, US$1,100m.), UK fifth after Hong Kong, France and West Germany. Trade with USA amounted to nearly US$700m. in 1973.

Total trade between UK and China (British Board of Trade returns, in £1,000 sterling):

Imports to UK	32,727	33,538	31,671	35,588	47,834
Exports and re-exports from UK	54,490	44,586	28,352	31,644	84,802

More than 95% of UK imports from China are free of quota restrictions.

COMMUNICATIONS. Map of the principal roads, all railways and airlines will be found in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1956.

SHIPPING. In 1973 the China Ocean Shipping Company operated a fleet of about 200 ships.

The major ports are at Tientsin, Shanghai, Tsingtao, Dairen and Canton. Most ports have a draught limitation of 35 ft.

Inland waterways total about 150,000 km, of which 40,000 are navigable for steamers.

ROADS. According to an official report there were almost 300,000 km of 'predominantly all-weather' roads and 500,000 km of 'secondary' roads in 1969. Highways are well graded but mostly unmetalled. In 1969 there were some 409,000 lorries, 60,000 cars and 30,000 buses.

In 1959 road haulage carried 155m. tons of freight.

RAILWAYS. Chinese railway history begins in 1876, when the Woosung (Shanghai) line was opened. According to official statistics from Peking, there were, on 1 July 1950, 21,740 km of railway lines in service. It is probable that some 40,000 km are now open to traffic.

The principal railways are:

(1) The great north-south trunk lines: (a) Peking-Canton Railway (over 2,300 km), via Chengchow-Wuhan-Chuchow-Hengyang.

(b) Tientsin-Shanghai Railway (1,500 km), via Pukow and Nanking.

(c) Paochi-Chungking Railway, via Chengtu (1,174 km). Chungking with the east-west route from Hengyang to the Vietnam border, and to Kunming, connecting there with the Yünnan Railway to the Vietnam border. Two further lines connect Paochi (and ultimately Hanoi).

(2) Great east-west trunk lines: (a) Lung-Hai Railway; Lienyun-Hsuchow-Chengchow (on the Peking-Canton line)-Sian-Paochi-Tientsin-Lanchow (1,500 km). (b) Lanchow-Sinkiang Railway: Lanchow-Yumen-Hami-Turfan-Urumchi (1,800 km); (c) Shanghai-Yuyikuan (Vietnam border) via Hangchow, Nanchang, Hengyang (on the Peking-Canton line), Kweilin, Liuchow and Nanning. (d) Peking-Lanchow via Tsining (from which a branch connects with the lines through Mongolia to the Trans-Siberian Railway), Tatung (from which a branch serves the province of Shansi), Paotow and Yinchuan (Ninghsia).

Branches link coastal areas (e.g., Fukien province) and smaller inland centres with the main parts of the system. Surveys have been made for a new 500-km railway, linking the trunk line with the oilfield of Karamai in Sinkiang.

(3) The Manchurian system: (a) Chinese Eastern (Changchun) Railway (2,370 km), from Manchouli on the Soviet border through northern Inner Mongolia and Manchuria via Tsitsihar, Harbin and Mutankiang to the Soviet border near Vladivostok. (b) South Manchuria Railway (705 km, 1120 km with branches), Changchun-Shenyang (formerly Mukden)-Dairen. (c) Peking-Shenyang Railway, with branches in Manchuria (854 km, 1,350 km with branches).

Branches give connexions with outlying parts of Manchuria and Inner Mongolia as well as international links with Korean railways. Chinese railways are all constructed to the standard gauge except for some 600 km of metre gauge in Yünnan. The trans-Mongolian line, which was constructed to the Russian gauge, was converted to standard in 1965. Trunk routes are being converted from single to double track. The mountainous section of route between Paochi and Chengtu is worked by electric traction.

In 1972 the railways carried 620m. tons of freight.

AVIATION. The Civil Aviation Administration of China (CAAC) fleet includes 20 Trident jet airliners, 6 Viscount turbo-props and 5 Il-62s. In 1972 there were some 50 regular internal services linking 70 towns.

CAAC maintains a regular air service to Hanoi, a bi-weekly service to Tirana via Tehrán and Bucharest, and commenced direct flights to Moscow from Peking in Feb. 1974.

Pakistan International Airlines and Air France operate services to Peking and Ehtopian Airlines operates a service to Shanghai. Air services agreements were signed with British Airways, Italy and Greece in 1973.

POST. China has a fairly well-developed telegraph service. Telegraphs connect all the principal cities in the country, and there are lines to all the neighbouring countries. Wireless telegraph stations have been installed at 673 centres. Telephones in use in 1951, 255,000.

Number of post offices of all kinds in 1958 was 67,000.

In 1964 there were some 7m. radio receivers. In 1965 there were 12 main television stations and 30,000 receivers.

BANKING Banking is controlled by the People's Bank which has 30,000 branches. It is both the bank of issue and the principal commercial and domestic bank. It is also the major instrument of economic policy through which enterprises are controlled or supervised by the Government.

There are 2 specialized banks: the Construction Bank and the Bank of Communications, The Bank of China for Foreign Exchange, which has branches abroad (including 1 in London) is an agency of the People's Bank.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The government is promoting the use of the metric system, but throughout the country many local variants of the old Chinese weights and measures are still in use. In July 1959 some old measures were assigned fixed metric equivalents, e.g., 1 shih chin (catty) = 500 grammes (or 1.1 lb.); 1 li (Chinese mile) = 0.5 km; 1 chih (foot) = $\frac{1}{3}$ metre (or 1.1 ft); 1 mou = 6.66 ares (or $\frac{1}{6}$ acre). For the old units see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1954, pp. 877-88.

TAIWAN

The island of Taiwan (Formosa) was ceded to Japan by China by the Treaty of Shimonoseki on 8 May 1895. After the Second World War the island surrendered to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek in Sept. 1945 and was placed under Chinese administration on 25 Oct. 1945. It is controlled by the remnants of the Nationalist Government under Chiang Kai-shek, who, on 1 March 1950, resumed the presidency of the 'Republic of China', and was re-elected for his fifth 6-year presidential term in March 1972. He is concurrently leader of the Kuomintang (Nationalist Party). The Vice-President is Dr Yen Chia-kan. There are 2 other parties: the Young China Party and the China Democratic Socialist Party.

The National Assembly of the Republic of China was elected in 1947. It has 1,435 members. The highest legislative body is the Legislative Yuan (Council) elected in 1948 and now with 442 members. Terms of office in both bodies have been extended indefinitely. New regulations promulgated on 29 June 1972 provide for the augmentation of these bodies by the election of 53 and 51 new members respectively. Elections for the new National Assembly members were held on 23 Dec. 1972. The Kuomintang gained 38 seats. The highest administrative organ is the Executive Yuan. There is also a Provincial Assembly of 73 members elected on 23 Dec. 1972 (the Kuomintang has 59 seats).

State emblem: A 12-pointed white sun in a blue sky.

National flag: The state emblem in the upper left canton of a crimson flag.

National anthem: 'San Min Chu I', words by Dr Sun Yat-sen; tune by Cheng Mao-yun.

By a treaty of 1 Dec. 1954 the USA is pledged to protect Taiwan and the offshore islands.

The People's Republic took over the China seat in the United Nations from the Nationalists on 25 Oct. 1971.

Prime Minister: Chiang Ching-kuo (eldest son of the President). Vice-Premier: Hsu Ching-chung. Foreign Minister: Chen Hiong-fei. Minister of National Defence: Gen. Chen Ta-ching. Minister of the Interior: Lin Chin-sheng. Minister of Finance: K. T. Li. Governor of Taiwan: Hsieh Tung-ming.

AREA AND POPULATION. The island has an area of 13,892 sq. miles (35,981 sq. km). Population (31 Dec. 1972), 15.29m. (8m. males, 7.3m. females), of whom some 2m. are mainland Chinese who came with the Nationalist Government. There are also some 200,000 aborigines. Population density: 424.92 per sq. km.

In 1972 the birth rate was 2.41%; the death rate, 0.47%; rate of growth, 2% per annum (3.5% in 1960).

Taiwan is divided into a special municipality (Taipei, the capital, population 1.83m. in 1971), 4 municipalities (Kaohsiung, Keelung, Taichung, Tainan) and 16 counties (hsien): Changhua, Chiayi, Hsinchu, Hualien, Ilan, Kaohsiung, Miaoli, Nantou, Penghu, Pingtung, Taichung, Tainan, Taipei, Taitung, Taoyuan, Yunlin.

COLOMBIA

República de Colombia

HISTORY. The Vice-royalty of New Granada gained its independence of Spain in 1819, and was officially constituted 17 Dec. 1819, together with the present territories of Panama, Venezuela and Ecuador, as the state of 'Greater Colombia', which continued for about 12 years. It then split up into Venezuela, Ecuador and the republic of New Granada in 1830. The constitution of 22 May 1858 changed New Granada into a confederation of 8 states, under the name of Confederación Granadina. Under the constitution of 8 May 1863 the country was renamed 'Estados Unidos de Colombia', which were 9 in number. The revolution of 1885 led the National Council of Bogotá, composed of 2 delegates from each state, to promulgate the constitution of 5 Aug. 1886, forming the Republic of Colombia, which abolished the sovereignty of the states, converting them into departments, with governors appointed by the President of the Republic, though they retained some of their old rights, such as the management of their own finances. A decree of May 1928 abolished their right to borrow abroad without the sanction of the central government.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The legislative power rests with a Congress of 2 houses, the Senate, of 106 members, and the House of Representatives, of 204 members, both elected for 4 years. In 1968 a congressional committee unanimously approved a constitutional amendment providing for progressive reductions in the membership of Congress to 90 senators and 162 representatives by 1974. Congress meets annually at Bogotá on 20 July. Women were given the vote, which is now open to citizens of either sex, over 21 years of age, on 25 Aug. 1954.

In the elections in mid-March 1968 the Liberal-Conservative alliance obtained 144 seats and the National Popular Alliance 42 seats in the lower house.

The President is elected by direct vote of the people for a term of 4 years, and is not eligible for re-election until 4 years afterwards. Congress elects, for a term of 2 years, one substitute to occupy the presidency in the event of a vacancy during a presidential term. There are 13 Ministries. The Governors of Departments and the Mayor of Bogotá are nominated by the national government.

A National Economic Council, functioning since May 1935, went through several transformations, becoming in 1954 a Directorate of Planning.

National flag: Yellow, blue, red (horizontal).

National anthem: Oh! Gloria inmarcesible (words by R. Núñez; tune by O. Sindici).

DEFENCE. On 17 April 1952 Colombia signed the Military Assistance pact with the USA.

Army. Military service is compulsory between the years of 18 and 30. Service with the colours is for one year. From 30 to 45 years of age the citizens are on the reserved lists, classified in 1st, 2nd and 3rd classes, with the obligation of presenting themselves on being called up. The permanent Army consists of 8 infantry brigades and artillery, cavalry, engineers, motorized troops and the usual services. The peace effective is 50,000 men; the war effective is about 300,000 men. Number of national police, about 35,000.

Colombia was the only Latin American country participating in the Korean war, with a regiment of 1,000 men (three times relieved).

Navy. Colombia has 2 midget submarines; 2 destroyers built in Sweden in 1958; 2 old former US destroyers; 1 destroyer escort; 4 destroyer escort transports; 4 river gunboats; 4 surveying vessels; 8 coastguard patrol vessels; 12 patrol motor launches; 4 oilers; 6 small transports, 8 support ships and service craft, and 13 tugs. Two 1,000-ton diesel-electric powered patrol submarines, 1 being built in West Germany. Personnel, 700 officers and 6,500 men. The Navy has also a battalion of marines with 800 officers and men. There are American and British Naval Missions.

Air Force. Formed in 1922, the Air Force has been independent of the Army and Navy since 1943, when its reorganization began with US assistance. In 1973 it had about 200 aircraft, including a squadron of Mirage 5-COA fighter-bombers, 5-COR reconnaissance aircraft and 5-COD two-seat operational trainers; a bomber group of B-26 piston-engined bombers; a transport group equipped with 2 C-130s, 4 HS 748s, 4 Twin Otters, C-47s and a small number of C-54s, Otter, Beaver and Porter light transports; a presidential F-28 Fellowship jet transport; and a maritime reconnaissance and rescue unit with Catalina flying-boats and helicopters. Many of the transports are flown by the Air Force operated airline SATENA. Thirty Cessna T-41D primary trainer/light transports were delivered in 1968 and were followed by 10 T-37C jet advanced trainers to supplement piston-engined T-34s and T-33A armed jet trainers already in service. Total strength is about 6,000 personnel.

AGRICULTURE. Very little of the country is under cultivation, but much of the soil is fertile and is coming into use as roads improve. The range of climate and crops is extraordinary; the agricultural colleges have different courses for 'cold-climate farming' and 'warm-climate farming'. Some 6m. acres are described as arable, 96m. pasture and 148m. forest.

Colombia is the second largest producer of coffee and ranks first in the output of mild coffee, demand for which is unaffected by over-production in Brazil. Crops are grown by smallholders, and are picked all the year round. Production (1973, in metric tons): Sesame, 25,000; cotton, 330,000; rice, 648,000; barley, 62,000; maize, 500,000; potatoes, 500,000; soybean, 38,000; wheat, 76,000; bananas, 410,000; cacao, 23,900; sugar-cane, 820,000.

The rubber tree grows wild, and its cultivation has begun; output is a few hundred tons. Fibres are being exploited, notably the 'fique' fibre, which furnishes all the country's requirements for sacks and cordage; output about 12,000 tons. Tolú balsam is cultivated, and copaiba trees are tapped but are not cultivated. Tanning is an important industry, 12m. sq. ft of hides being exported in 1965.

Livestock in 1970 was estimated at 6.3m. cattle, 890,523 pigs, 202,126 sheep, 10.5m. poultry.

FISHERY. In Sept. 1963 a Sección de Caza y Pesca was set up in the Ministry of Agriculture. It extended territorial waters to 200 nautical miles. The principal finance companies founded a development company with over 20m. pesos in Aug. 1966 (Consorcio Pesquero Colombiano).

MINING. Colombia is rich in minerals; gold is found chiefly in Antioquia and moderately in Cauca, Caldas, Tolima, Nariño and Chocó; output in 1972, 186,816 fine oz., highest in South America. Foreign concessions produce about 60% of the gold.

Other minerals are silver (70,183 troy oz. in 1972), copper, lead, mercury, manganese, emeralds and platinum (first discovered in Colombia in 1735 and the largest deposit in the world); export of platinum, 1967, 14,214 troy oz. The working of the government-controlled emerald mines has been resumed; the stones are cut in the workshops of the Banco de la República. The chief mines are those of Muzo and Chivor.

The Government holds the monopoly, which is leased to the Banco de la República, for extracting salts from the outstanding Zipaquirá mines (several hundred feet in depth and several hundred square miles in area) and for evaporating many sea salt pans; salt production in 1972 was 348,738 metric tons of land salt from the Zipaquirá mines and 673,964 tons of sea salt from Manaure and Galerazamba on the Caribe coast. Colombia's coal reserves are estimated at 13,200m. metric tons; production (1968) 3.3m. short tons.

Petroleum production in 1972 was 71.7m. bbls (of 42 gallons).

INDUSTRY. Value of industrial output (located mainly in the Departments of Antioquia, Cundinamarca and Valle) by 330,679 production workers in 4,553 establishments in 1971 was 68,466m. pesos. There are 69 reassembly plants, apart from the motor industry. At the end of 1965 the 101 firms with more than 50% US control equalled an investment of US$510m.; they employed over 29,000 Colombians.

POWER. Capacity of electric power (1971) is 2,317,000 kw. Electric power produced in 1971, 8,607,000 kwh. There is increasing utilization of natural gas.

In Oct. 1954 the Department of Valle del Cauca established a local power corporation closely modelled on the Tennessee Valley Authority.

TOURISM. Foreign visitors totalled 197,503 in 1971.

TRADE UNIONS. The Left-wing Colombian Federation of Labour (CTC) had, in 1947, 109,000 members out of a total of 165,000 organized workers. In 1946 there were established an association of trade unions, Unión de Trabajadores Colombianos. In May 1963, 8.6% of the 449,000 workmen in Bogotá were unemployed.

COMMERCE. For the 'Charter of Quito' trading agreement in 1948 between Colombia, Ecuador, Panama and Venezuela, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1956, p. 882. Colombia's entry into the Latin American Free Trade Area (ALALC) was ratified on 29 Sept. 1961. A fresh impulse to this effort was given by the Bases for an Immediate Action Programme under the 'Charter of Bogotá' signed by Colombia, Chile, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela on 16 Aug. 1966.

SHIPPING. Vessels entering Colombian ports in 1972 had a net registered tonnage of 11,606,005. The Colombian merchant fleet in 1966 owned 23 vessels of 187,906 net tons, and leased 20 of 164,360 net tons; in 1965 it carried 1.9m. metric tons. At present a cargo ship of 11,685 tons is being built in Spain.

The Magdalena River is subject to drought, and navigation is always impeded during the dry season, but it is an important artery of passenger and goods traffic. The river is navigable for 900 miles; steamers ascend to La Dorada, 592 miles from Barranquilla. In 1972 they carried 15,362 passengers and 2,709,585 metric tons of cargo.

ROADS. Owing to the mountainous character of the country, the construction of arterial roads and railways is costly and difficult. The overhead ropeway connecting Mariquita with Manizales is the longest in the world (72 km); it carried 2,630 metric tons of freight in 1965. Total length of highways, 45,000 km in 1967, of which 7,200 paved. Of the 2,300-mile Simón Bolívar highway, which runs from Caracas in Venezuela to Guayaquil in Ecuador, the Colombian portion is complete. Buenaventura and Cali are linked by a highway (Carreterra al Mar). Motor vehicles numbered 355,188, of which 268,249 were passenger cars and 86,939 lorries on 30 June 1971.

RAILWAYS. There are 5 divisions of the State Railway, with a total length of 3,431 km in 1971 and a gauge of 3 ft. The Pacific Railway connects Bogotá with the port of Buenaventura. The Atlantic line from Bogotá to Sta. Marta was opened in July 1961. Total railway traffic, 1972, was 4.26m. passengers and 2,730,837 tons of freight.

AVIATION. In civil aviation Colombia ranks perhaps second, after Brazil, among South American countries. There are 426 landing grounds of all kinds. In 1972 the national airlines carried 6,083,946 passengers and 185,685 tons of cargo.

POST. The length of telephone lines in service is 705,852 km (Bogotá only); instruments in use, 1 Jan. 1973, 1,009,791, of which 266,200 in Bogotá. The cable company is government-owned. There are 223 broadcasting stations. Television was established in 1954. Bogotá is now the centre of a wide repeater network.

BANKING. On 23 July 1923 the Banco de la República was inaugurated as a semi-official central bank, with the exclusive privilege of issuing bank-notes in Colombia; its charter, in 1951, was extended to 1973. Its note issues must be covered by a reserve in gold of foreign exchange of 25% of their value.

There are 26 domestic commercial banks of importance and 5 foreign banks (English, Canadian, American, French and Franco-Italian); but a high percentage of all commercial bank deposits are with the 4 largest domestic banks, which have branches throughout the country. In Nov. 1950 they were permitted to accept savings deposits, hitherto a government monopoly.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system was introduced in 1857, but in ordinary commerce Spanish weights and measures are generally used; according to new definitions by the Ministry of Development, e.g., botella (750 grammes), galón (5 botellas), vara (70 cm), arroba (25 lb., of 500 grammes; 4 arrobas = 1 quintal).

COSTA RICA

República de Costa Rica

HISTORY. The republic of Costa Rica (the 'Rich Coast') has been independent since 1821, although it formed, from 1824 to 1838, part of the Confederation of Central America.

AREA AND POPULATION. The area is estimated at 50,900 sq. km (19,653 sq. miles). The population at the census of 1 April 1963 was 1,336,274, compared with 800,875 shown in the 1950 census.

Official estimate of population for 1 Jan. 1973 (1·86m.) was as follows:

Province		Central Cantons
San José	664,965	San José	221,425
Alajuela	335,879	Alajuela	86,444
Cartago	214,415	Cartago	62,666
Heredia	116,434	Heredia	34,544
Guanacaste	207,441	Liberia	18,648
Puntarenas	230,595	Puntarenas	76,013
Limón	97,316	Limón	39,837

VITAL STATISTICS for calendar years:

	Marriages	Births	Deaths	Immigration	Emigration
1969	9,866	57,984	11,599	172,750	173,181
1970	11,024	57,757	11,504	217,975	212,948
1971	11,418	56,338	10,575	252,494	249,324

Crude birth rate, 1971, was 31·5 per 1,000 population; crude death rate, 5·9s infantile death rate, 56·4 per 1,000 live births; crude marriage rate, 6·4 per 1,000 population. Males exceeded females by 9,673.

The population of European descent, many of them of pure Spanish blood, dwell mostly around the capital of the republic, San José, and in the principal towns of the provinces. Limón, on the Caribbean coast, and Puntarenas, on the Pacific coast, are the chief commercial ports. The United Fruit Company, who in 1941 abandoned their banana plantations on the Atlantic coast in favour of large new plantations on the Pacific coast, have constructed ports at Quepos and Golfito. The Standard Fruit Co. and others have cleared land since 1958 in the Atlantic coast area and now have 2,325 acres producing some 4·2m. stems a year. There are some 15,000 West Indians, mostly in Limón province. The indigenous Indian population is dwindling and is now estimated at 1,200.

Spanish is the language of the country.

Voot, W., The Population of Costa Rica and its Natural Resources. Washington, D.C., 1946

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The constitution, promulgated on 7 Dec. 1871, has been modified very frequently, last in 1949. The constitution forbids the establishment or maintenance of an army. The legislative power is normally vested in a single chamber called the Legislative Assembly, which since 1962 consists of 57 deputies, 1 for every 25,214 inhabitants, elected for 4 years. The President is elected for 4 years; the candidate receiving the largest vote, provided it is over 40% of the total, is declared elected, but a second ballot is required if no candidate gets 40% of the total. By the election law of 18 Jan. 1946 all citizens who are 20 years of age are entitled to vote; married men and teachers, from the age of 18. Women over 21 were enfranchised in 1949. Elections are normally held on the first Sunday in February. Voting for President, Deputies and Municipal Councillors is secret and compulsory for all men under 70 years of age. Independent non-party candidates are barred from the ballot.

President: David Oduber Quirós, elected 3 Feb. 1974 and assumed office 8 May 1974.

Elections for Congress took place on 12 Feb. 1970; National Unification Party won 22, Liberation Party 32, others 3 seats.

The administration is normally carried on by 11 ministers, appointed by the President. The powers of the President are limited by the constitution, which leaves him the power to appoint and remove at will members of his cabinet. All other public appointments are made jointly in the names of the President and of the minister in charge of the department concerned.

National flag: Blue, white, red (horizontal).

National anthem: Noble patria, tu hermosa bandera (words by J. M. Zeledón, 1903; tune by M. M. Gutiérrez, 1851).

Zeledón, M. T., Lecciones de Ciencia Constitucional y Constitución política de la República de Costa Rica. San José, 1945

RELIGION. Roman Catholicism is the religion of the State, which contributes to its maintenance but controls the Church Patronage and insists on lay instruction in history, economics and similar subjects; there is entire religious liberty under the constitution, but religious appeals are forbidden in current political discussions. The Archbishop of Costa Rica has 4 bishops at Alajuela, Limón, San Isidro el General and Tilarán.

Protestants number about 40,000.

EDUCATION. Costa Rica has a very low illiteracy rate. Elementary instruction is compulsory and free; secondary education (since 1949) is also free. Elementary schools are provided and maintained by local school councils, while the national government pays the teachers, besides making subventions in aid of local funds. In 1972 there were 2,706 public primary schools with 12,711 teachers and administrative staff and 374,269 enrolled pupils; there were 159 public and private secondary schools with 97,953 pupils. The University of Costa Rica, founded in San José in 1843, has 1,195 professors in 13 faculties and 20,914 students. A medical school was opened in 1961. The budget for 1971 provides ₡250m. colones for public education. Since 1944 English has been taught in all secondary schools.

CINEMAS (1969). Cinemas numbered 132, with seating capacity of 90,000.

NEWSPAPERS (1973). There were 4 daily newspapers all published in San José.

SOCIAL WELFARE. The labour code of 1943 provides considerable protection for the workers, while a system of social insurance against sickness covering 130,024 workers in 1965, old age and death covering 68,949, is gradually being extended throughout the country.

JUSTICE. Justice is administered by the Supreme Court, 4 appeal courts and the Court of Cassation. There are also subordinate courts in the separate provinces and local justices throughout the republic. Capital punishment may not be inflicted.

FINANCE. Currency. A dual exchange rate was introduced in July 1971. The official rate in Nov. 1973 was ₡6.62 (buying) and ₡6.68 (selling) = US$1. The free market rate is ₡8.54 (buying) and ₡8.60 (selling) = US$1. The official rate is used for all imports on an essential list and by the Government and autonomous institutions. The free rate is for all other transactions.

The currency is chiefly notes. The Banco Central in 1951 printed and placed in circulation new notes for 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500 and 1,000 colones, replacing old notes previously issued by the Banco Nacional. Silver coins of 1 colon, 50 centimos and 25 centimos were in 1935 replaced by coins (2 and 1 colones and 50 and 25 centimos) made up of 3 parts copper and 1 part nickel, and given the same value as the subsidiary silver currency. There are copper coins (and chromium stainless steel coins) of 10 and 5 centimos.

Budget. The revenue and expenditure (in 1,000 colones) have been as follows ($1 = 6.63 colones) for calendar years:

	1967	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972
Revenue	695,459	808,284	945,706	1,071,329	1,210,119	1,390,523
Expenditure	747,598	785,689	889,426	974,837	1,242,897	1,414,312

The income-tax law of 10 March 1972 raised the maximum rate to 50% for personal incomes of 350,000 colones and over, and to 40% for corporate incomes of 1m. colones and over.

Central government debt on 31 Dec. 1972 was 2,628m. colones. Debt service required 214.5m. colones in 1973.

DEFENCE. The army was abolished in 1948, and replaced by a Civil Guard reputed to be 1,200 strong. There has never been compulsory military service or training.

The republic has also 1 motor launch on the Atlantic coast and 1 on the Pacific coast for revenue purposes, a tug and smaller craft.

AGRICULTURE. Agriculture is the principal industry. The cultivated area is about 1m. acres; grass lands cover 1.8m. acres; forests and woodlands, 9,855,000 acres. There are thousands of square miles of public lands that have never been cleared, on which can be found quantities of rosewood, cedar, mahogany and other cabinet woods. The principal agricultural products are coffee, bananas, sugar and cattle. Coffee normally accounts for about half the country's foreign-exchange earnings. Cocoa, maize, sugar, tobacco, rice and potatoes are commonly cultivated. The distillation of spirits is a government monopoly.

Coffee production in 1972-73 was 1.74m. quintals. Sugar production (1971-72) 3.9m. quintals.

Dairy-farming and cattle-raising are substantial pursuits. In 1970 cattle numbered 1.5m. and pigs 197,770.

Costa Rica is the seat of the Inter-American Institute of Agricultural Sciences, with headquarters at Turrialba.

MINING. Gold output is about 3,000 troy oz. per year. Salt production from sea water is about 10,000 tons annually. Haematite ore was discovered on the Nicoya Peninsula late in 1960 and sulphur near San Carlos in 1966. The United Nations have offered US$1m. towards a 3-year mining survey.

INDUSTRY. A Ministry of Industry was formed in 1961, but industry is still on a small scale, though the Industrial Development and Protection Law of 1959 affords several facilities and advantages. Electricity, derived from water power in the highlands, is increasingly used as motive power. Output, 1971, was 1,207m. kwh. Main manufactured goods are foodstuffs, textiles, fertilizers, pharmaceuticals, furniture, cement, tyres, canning, clothing, plastic goods, plywood and electrical equipment.

Industrial production was valued at 1.328m. colones in 1971, compared with 422m. in 1958.

TOURISM. There was a total of 170,396 visitors in 1971.

LABOUR. As Costa Rica is still essentially an agricultural country, the organization of labour has made progress only in the larger centres of population, and even there it is not a strong movement. There are two main trade unions, Rerum Novarum (anti-Communist) and Confederación General de Trabajadores Costarricenses (Communist). It is estimated that they have under 10,000 members each. In addition there were (1963) 284 other trade unions and 34 employers' organizations.

COMMERCE. The value of imports into and exports from Costa Rica in 5 years was as follows in US$ (6.63 colones = US$1):

¹ Estimate.

The value (in US$1m.) of the principal imports in 1972 were: Manufactures, 131.3; machinery, including transport equipment, 116.3; chemicals, 60.6; food-stuffs, 35.9; fuel and mineral oils, 20.

Chief exports (in US$1m.) in 1972 were: Coffee, 77.8 (mostly to West Germany and USA); bananas, 85.2m. (virtually all to USA); cocoa, 3; sugar, 9; manufactured goods and other products, 104.

Imports from US were valued at $122.8m. in 1972 and $114m. in 1971. Exports to US in 1972, $109.8m. and 1971, $91.1m.

Total trade between UK and Costa Rica (British Board of Trade returns, in £1,000 sterling):

	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	365	367	343	384	771
Exports and re-exports from UK	5,776	4,745	5,274	6,905	7,257

SHIPPING. In 1968, 1,126 ships entered and cleared the ports of the republic (Puerto Limón, Puntarenas and Golfito); combined cargo, 1,647,022 metric tons.

RAILWAYS. Two nationalized railway systems, totalling 427 miles (3 ft 6 in. gauge), connect San José with Limón, the Atlantic port (Costa Rica Railway Company), and San José with Puntarenas, the Pacific port (Ferrocarril Eléctrico al Pacífico).

ROADS. About 3,250 km of all-weather motor roads are open. On the Costa Rica section of the Inter-American highway it is possible to motor to Panama during the dry season. The Pan-American Highway into Nicaragua is metalled for most of the way and there is now a good highway open to, near, Puntarenas. Motor vehicles, 1970, numbered 77,297.

AVIATION. Passenger movement in and out of Costa Rica is almost entirely by air via the local company, LACSA, PANAM and TACA. LACSA links San José by daily services with all the more important towns. The international airport at Juan Santamaría was opened in June 1955.

POST. A telephone service covering (1972) 67,639 subscribers operates in and between San José and 6 other provincial centres; it has been transferred to a government Instituto Costarricense de Electricidad, which is installing a nationwide automatic system, and will eventually control all telecommunications.

The commercial wireless telegraph stations are operated by Cía Radiográfica Internacional de Costa Rica. The stations are located at Cartago, Limón, Puntarenas, Quepos and Golfito. The Government has 19 wireless telegraph stations in its local network. The principal or central station at San José also maintains international radio-telegraph circuits to Nicaragua, Honduras, San Salvador and Mexico. The Government has 202 telegraph offices and 88 official telephone stations. The official list of broadcasting stations shows 28 long-wave stations and 7 short-wave stations. Television was inaugurated in May 1960; there are 4 stations.

BANKING. By a law passed on 28 Jan. 1950 a Central Bank was established for the organization and direction of the national monetary system and of dealings in foreign exchange, the promotion of facilities for credit and the supervision of all banking operations in the country. The bank has a board of 7 directors appointed by the Government, including ex officio the Minister of Finance and the Planning Office Director. On 31 Dec. 1972 it had foreign exchange of US$43.3m., compared with US$37.5m. in Dec. 1971; circulating media on 31 Dec. 1969 totalled 975.6m. colones.

In June 1948 the 3 small commercial banks were compulsorily nationalized; they held deposits of 1,005.3m. colones at 31 Aug. 1970 (962.1m. at 31 Dec. 1970).

The National Insurance Institute (Instituto Nacional de Seguros) is a Government organization, created in 1924, which has a monopoly of new insurance business.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system is legally established; but in the country districts the following old Spanish weights and measures are found: libra = 1.014 lb. avoirdupois; arroba = 25.35 lb. avoirdupois; quintal = 101.40 avoirdupois, and fanega = 11 Imperial bushels.

On 15 Jan. 1921 the republic adopted as its standard time that of the meridian 90° west of Greenwich, 6 hours behind GMT.

CUBA

República de Cuba

HISTORY. Cuba, except for the brief British occupancy in 1762–63, remained a Spanish possession from its discovery by Columbus in 1492 until 10 Dec. 1898, when the sovereignty was relinquished under the terms of the Treaty of Paris, which ended the struggle of the Cubans against Spanish rule. Cuba thus became an independent republic, but the United States stipulated under the 'Platt Amendment' (abrogated by Roosevelt in 1934) that Cuba must enter into no treaty relations with a foreign power, which might endanger its independence. A convention which assembled on 5 Nov. 1900 adopted the first constitution of the republic on 21 Feb. 1901.

The revolutionary movement against the Batista dictatorship, led by Dr Fidel Castro, started on 26 July 1953 (now a national holiday). It achieved power on 1 Jan. 1959 when Batista fled the country.

An invasion force of émigrés and adventurers landed in Cuba on 17 April 1961; the main body was defeated at the Bay of Pigs (Las Villas province) and mopped up by 20 April.

The US Navy blockaded Cuba from 22 Oct. to 22 Nov. 1962.

AREA AND POPULATION. The island of Cuba has an area of 44,206 sq. miles (114,524 sq. km); the Isle of Pines has 1,180 sq. miles, and other islands about 1,350 sq. miles. Estimated population in 1972 was 9·17m.

The area, population and density of population of the 6 provinces were as follows (1953 census, 1966 estimate):

Province	Area (sq. miles)	Population (28 Jun. 1953)	Population (Dec. 1966)	Population per sq. mile
Pinar del Rio	5,211	448,422	588,000	106·3
Havana	3,173	1,538,803	2,088,000	642·0
Matanzas	3,259	395,780	463,000	146·0
Las Villas	8,264	1,030,162	1,235,000	118·0
Camagüey	10,169	618,256	826,000	77·4
Oriente	14,128	1,797,608	2,600,000	173·1
Total	44,206	5,829,029	7,800,000	167·9

Crude birth rate, 1964, 33·9; crude death rate (1962), 7 per 1,000; infant mortality (1962), 3 per 1,000.

The chief towns (with population, 1960) are: Havana, the capital, 787,765; Marianao, 229,576; Holguín, 226,779; Camagüey, 191,379; Santiago de Cuba, 166,384; Santa Clara, 142,176; Guantánamo, 124,685; Matanzas, 82,619; Cienfuegos, 99,530. Urban population is now (1965) 57·7% compared with 51·4% in 1953.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The constitution has been suspended since Jan. 1959.

Since the last representative in Cuba of the King of Spain, Gen. Don Adolfo Jiménez Castellanos, handed over the island on 1 Jan. 1899 the following have been at the head of the administration:

President: Dr Manuel Urrutia, assumed power on 1 Jan. 1959 after Gen. Batista had fled the country. He resigned on 17 July 1959 and Dr Osvaldo Dorticós Torrado was elected by the Cabinet to take his place.

Prime Minister and First Secretary of the Cuban Communist Party (PCC): Dr Fidel Castro Ruz.

Minister for Foreign Affairs: Carlos Rafael Rodríguez.

The President appoints the Executive Committee, which consists of a Premier, the First Deputy Premier, and 7 other Deputy Premiers.

Dr Castro on 2 Dec. 1961 proclaimed 'a Marxist-Leninist programme adapted to the precise objective conditions existing in our country'. The provisional Organizaciones Revolucionarias Integradas (ORI) were established as an intermediate stage towards a single (communist) party, and gave way to the Partido Unido de la Revolución Socialista (PURS). This brought together the Partido Socialista Popular, Movimiento de 26 Julio and (Students') Directorio Revolucionario. The PURS in turn became (3 Oct. 1965) the Partido Comunista de Cuba. The Communist Party had been outlawed by Batista in 1954, but legally reinstated after the revolution.

National flag: 3 blue, 2 white stripes (horizontal); a white 5-pointed star in a red triangle at the hoist.

National anthem: Al combate corred bayameses (words and tune by P. Figueredo, 1868).

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. The country is divided into 6 provinces and 126 municipalities. Local Government is the responsibility of the JUCEI (Junta de Control, Ejecución e Inspección).

RELIGION. There is no state Church, though Roman Catholics predominate. There is a bishop of the American Episcopal Church in Havana; there are large congregations of Methodists in Havana and in the provinces. Protestants numbered 265,000 in 1962; they have been organized as the Cuban Council of Evangelical Churches. Dr Castro has promised that the State will not interfere with the freedom of religion.

EDUCATION. Education is compulsory (between the ages of 6 and 14) and free, and now available everywhere. The 1953 census showed that 22.8% of all those over 10 years of age were illiterate. It is claimed that the Year of Education (1961), in which higher-education students went out to all parts of the country, reduced this to 3.9%. In 1964 illiteracy was officially declared to have been completely eliminated.

In 1969-70 the 3 universities had 30,708 students. Primary schools had 1,560,193 pupils; general secondary schools, 160,857 pupils; technical schools, 42,507 pupils; teachers' colleges, 24,442 students; other schools (e.g., for fishermen), 17,862 pupils; adult education classes, 404,149 pupils. In 1962-63 a system of 'popular teachers' was introduced, who teach in primary schools while in training; they numbered 11,985 in March 1964. The 1965 education budget was $212.3m.

The Camilo Cienfuegos school city in the Sierra Maestra was designed for 12,000 boys and 8,000 girls by 1970 (1965: 4,000, total).

CINEMAS (1960). There are 454 cinemas with seating capacity of 402,000.

NEWSPAPERS (1965). The government-controlled press includes 3 morning and 1 evening newspapers in Havana; total circulation, 605,000.

HEALTH (1964). There were 4,855 posts for doctors, 154 hospitals with 47,861 beds. The 1965 health budget was $140.5m.

Free medical services are provided by the state polyclinics, though some doctors still have private practices. All serious tropical diseases are effectively kept under control, and virtually all children under the age of 15 have been vaccinated against poliomyelitis.

JUSTICE. There is a Supreme Court in Havana and 7 courts of appeal (one in each provincial capital and one in Holguín). The provinces are divided into judicial districts, with courts for civil and criminal actions, with municipal courts for minor offences. The civil code guaranteed aliens the same property and personal rights as are enjoyed by nationals.

The 1959 Agrarian Reform Law and the Urban Reform Law passed on 14 Oct. 1960 have placed certain restrictions on both. Revolutionary Summary Tribunals will have wide powers.

FINANCE. Currency. The Cuban peso has been tied to the French franc since early 1972. In March 1974, the sterling-peso rate was £1 = 1.92 pesos. The gold content is 0.888671 gramme of fine gold, thus 1 troy oz. of fine gold = 35 pesos. The law of 7 Nov. 1914, established that the monetary unit was a gold peso (equal to the US gold dollar) of 1.6718 grammes (1.5046 grammes fine) divided into 100 centavos. The old gold pesos and all US currency are no longer legal tender.

Copper-nickel coins of 40, 20, 5 and 1 cent are issued. Notes are for 100, 50, 20, 10, 5 and 1 peso.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure (in 1m. pesos) for calendar years balanced as follows: 1963, 2,903.6; 1964, 2,399; 1965, 2,536.

The 1965 expenditure included (in 1m. pesos): Agriculture, forestry and fishery, 367.9; industry, 194.4; commerce, 14.2; communications, 12.9; transport, 41.6; basic community services, 128.7; education, 219; central, provincial and local administration, 143.8; labour, 173.8; industries, 194.4.

During 1960 long-term loans at low interest were negotiated with the following countries (expressed in US$1m.): USSR, 100; China, 60; Czechoslovakia, 40; Romania, 15; Hungary, 15; Poland, 12; German Democratic Republic, 10; Bulgaria, 5. The USSR is now subsidizing Cuba by permitting the accumulation in Soviet-Cuban trade of deficits which by 1965 exceeded US$600m.

DEFENCE. The chief of the armed forces is Comandante Fidel Castro, and his brother Cdte. Raúl Castro Ruz, Vice-Premier and Minister of Defence.

On 13 Nov. 1963 conscription was introduced for all men between the ages of 17 and 45 (3 years); women of the 17-35 age groups may volunteer (for 2 years).

Army. The strength was about 90,000 officers and men in 1973. Reserves are estimated at 90,000.

The Army is organized in 15 infantry brigades, 2 armoured brigades, 8 independent battalions. It has over 600 Russian-built tanks. Para-military forces total 13,000 and the People's Militia, 200,000.

Navy. The Navy consists of 3 old former US patrol frigates, 2 escort vessels, 20 missile boats, 18 patrol vessels, 24 torpedo boats, 14 motor launches and 20 coast-guard vessels. Its strength is 600 officers and 5,400 men. The USA is still in possession of the Guantánamo naval base, but the revolutionary government refused to accept the nominal rent of US$5,000 per annum.

Air Force. The Air Force has been extensively re-equipped with aircraft supplied by USSR and in 1973 had a strength of some 12,000 officers and men and 225 combat aircraft. Interceptor and ground-attack squadrons fly MiG-21, MiG-19, MiG-17 and MiG-15 jet fighters. There is a squadron of Il-14 twin-engined transports; and Mi-4 helicopters, Zlin 326 piston-engined trainers and MiG-15UTI jet trainers. Many An-2M biplanes are operated by the Air Force, mainly on agricultural duties. Soviet-built surface-to-air ('Guideline') and coastal defence ('Samlet') missiles are in service.

ECONOMY. The Cuban economy is now centrally planned. Since July 1972 Cuba has been a member of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (COMECON) and, since Jan. 1974, of the two COMECON international banks. Industrial development has been slow and few output figures in absolute terms have been published since 1968. Cuba has very large reserves of nickel and a guaranteed market in the USSR; output is currently some 36,000 tons per annum but it is to be increased to 60,000 tons. Sugar remains the mainstay of the economy. Production in 1973 was 5.4m. tons (1972: 4.4m. tons). Investment in this and other agricultural sectors (rice, coffee, and dairy products) has recently been relatively high but output generally has failed to respond. Some items of food and clothing are rationed.

AGRICULTURE. In May 1959 all land over 30 caballerías was nationalized and has since been turned into state farms. In Oct. 1963 private holdings were reduced to a maximum of 5 caballerías (approximately 67 hectares). By 1960, 764 co-operative farms had been formed, and by late 1966 almost 65% of farm land was state-owned; the balance being in private hands.

In 1963 the total cultivated land included 432,461 hectares under the Credit and Services Co-operative, and 509 people's farms (3,820,112 hectares).

The staple products are tobacco and sugar, of which latter Cuba is the world's second largest producer; with its by-products it furnishes nearly 80% by value of the national exports. The 1972-73 crop was 5.4m. tons. There are 152 mills, including 40 of the largest, which were taken over from US interests, and which represent 39% of total capacity. Coffee, cotton, maize, rice and potatoes are grown.

In 1971 production of important crops was (in 1,000 metric tons): Sugar, 5,950 tobacco, 40; rice, 452; maize, 125; coffee (1970), 27,500.

Tobacco is grown mainly in the Vuelta-Abajo district, near Pinar del Río. Coffee is grown chiefly in the province of Oriente.

Output of henequén fibre in 1964 was 233,919 tons. A fast-growing fibre, kenaf, originally from India, soft in texture, is replacing jute for sacking; the tobacco industry uses majagua, another local fibre, while a third fibre, yarey, from palms is also used. 77,000 metric tons of potatoes were produced in 1970. A nitrate plant has been built at Nuevitas and a large British-built urea plant at Cienfuegos. The principal fruits exported are pineapples, citrus fruit, tomatoes and pimientos. Pángola is an increasingly important forage crop (15,000 caballerías in 1960). A rice cultivation plan began in 1967 in the south of Havana province. Cultivation is highly mechanized and the area so far sown produces two crops a year.

Despite the devastation caused by hurricane Flora in Oct. 1963, citrus fruit production, 112,000 tons in 1964, was some 11.4% above 1963. In 1967 production was 167,000 metric tons.

In 1962, 2,105 caballerías were allocated to cotton; cotton produced, 1964, was 2,653 tons against 13,000 tons in 1962.

In 1967 the livestock included 7m. head of cattle (6.4m. in 1963); 1.8m. hogs; 500,000 horses; 235,000 sheep, 162,000 goats (1958).

FORESTRY. Cuba has extensive forest lands. These forests contain valuable cabinet woods, such as mahogany and cedar, besides dye-woods, fibres, gums, resins and oils. Cedar is used locally for cigar-boxes, and mahogany is exported. During the re-forestation campaign of 1959-60, 34,000 eucalyptus saplings were planted over 1,120 caballerías. Cedars, mahogany, majagua, teca, etc., are also being raised and planted out. Between 1960 and 1963 plantings included (in hectares): Pine, 9,947·81; eucalyptus, 52,699·43; majagua preciosa, 34,432·06; casuarina, 9,615·61.

MINING. Iron ore abounds, with deposits estimated at 3,500m. tons, of which 90% were held as reserves by American steel interests but are now controlled by the Cuban Mining Institute; output (metric tons), wrought iron (1971), 111,107; steel (1971), 110,803.

Output of copper (1970) was 400 metric tons; chromite (1971), 13,885 metric tons. Other minerals are nickel (1972: 32,000 tons nickel content), cobalt, silica and barytes. Gold and silver are also worked. Cuba has a small output of petroleum (1971: 4·3m. metric tons). Salt output from the solar evaporation of sea water was 103,316 metric tons in 1971.

All mineral resources were nationalized in 1960.

INDUSTRY. Production in 1971 was: Rayon yarn, 34 metric tons; wheat flour, 175,000 metric tons; gasoline, 594,474 metric tons; kerosene, 439,303 metric tons; 251,223 tyres; 191,798 tubes; shoes, 18·6m. pairs (1963: 18·7m.); paint, 48,258 hectolitres; soft drinks, 957,000 hectolitres; cigarettes, 11,697,000; fertilizers, 565,291 metric tons.

ELECTRICITY (1971). Installed capacity was 1,350 mw. Production in 1963 was 2,259m. kwh.

TRADE UNIONS. All trade unions are government-controlled.

COMMERCE. Official Cuban statistics of imports and exports (including bullion and specie) for calendar years (in 1m. pesos):

	1967	1968	1969	1970	1971 ¹
Imports (c.i.f.)	999·1	1,102·3	1,221·7	1,311·0	1,385·3
Exports (f.o.b.)	705·0	651·4	671·2	1,046·3	858·5

Cuba's principal exports are sugar, minerals and tobacco, which in 1971 were planned to furnish 77%, 6% and 4% respectively by value. The main imports from non-Communist countries are chemicals and engineering and electrical machinery and transport equipment.

Sugar accounts for approximately 80% of the exports. In 1973 over 2m. tons were sold in free world markets, the balance going mainly to Eastern Europe under long-term guaranteed price contracts. Tobacco, fish and nickel are the other major exports. Most trade is with Eastern Europe, particularly with the USSR which supplies approximately 50% of total Cuban imports.

Total trade (in US$1m.): Imports, 1969, 1,167; 1970, 1,300. Exports, 1969, 663; 1970, 1,043.

In Dec. 1972, a series of major agreements was concluded with the USSR, postponing repayment of accumulated debt (estimated at over $3,000m.) until 1986, when payments will be spread over 25 years without additional interest. The agreements cover a further loan of 300m. roubles (approximately US$350m.) for industrial development, and guaranteed prices for Cuban sugar and nickel.

Total trade between Cuba and UK (British Board of Trade returns) in £1,000 sterling:

Imports to UK	6,874	5,410	5,702	5,557	5,039	13,250
Exports and re-exports from UK	12,490	13,232	20,559	26,450	16,732	17,538

SHIPPING. The coastline is 2,170 miles long and has 15 fine harbours. The merchant marine, in 1973, consisted of 53 sea-going vessels with a deadweight of over 208,314 tons.

RAILWAYS. There are 3,139 miles of public railway (mainly 4 ft 8½ in. gauge) owned by the National Railways (Ferrocarriles Nacionales de Cuba) formed on nationalization in 1960. In addition, the large sugar estates have 6,867 miles of lines connecting them with the main lines.

ROADS. There are 8,291 miles of highways open to traffic, including the Central Highway, traversing the island for 760 miles from Pinar del Río to Santiago. On 31 Dec. 1958 passenger automobiles numbered 143,828; hire cars, 29,710; coaches and buses, 4,306; lorries, 42,480; others, 12,987.

AVIATION. The state airline CUBANA operates all internal services, and from Havana to Mexico City and Prague and also to Lima, Guyana, Trinidad and East Germany. The other regular foreign services are Soviet, Czech and Spanish.

POST. There were (1938) 634 post and 358 telegraph offices and 150 radio and radio-telegraph stations (1940), of which 14 were operated by the Government. There are 3,545 miles of public and 8,902 miles of private telegraph wires. Cuba has 103 broadcasting stations and 2 television stations. Wireless receiving sets, 1958, numbered 900,000; television sets, 300,000. The national telephone system (1972) had 274,949 instruments.

BANKING. On 23 Dec. 1948 the president signed the law creating a central bank (with capital of $10m.) and which began operating on 27 April 1950.

On 14 Oct. 1960 all banks were nationalized, except the Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Nova Scotia, which were bought out later. All banking is now carried out by the National Bank of Cuba, through its 250 agencies. In 1964, 1.6m. small savings accounts totalled $738m.

All insurance business was nationalized in Jan. 1964.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system of weights and measures is legally compulsory, but the American and old Spanish systems are much used. The sugar industry uses the Spanish long ton (1.03 metric tons) and short ton (0.92 metric ton). Cuba sugar sack = 329.59 lb. or 149.49 kg. Land is measured in caballerías (of 13.4 hectares or 33 acres).

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Ceskoslovenská Socialistická Republika

HISTORY. The Czechoslovak State came into existence on 28 Oct. 1918, when the Czech Národní výbor (National Committee) took over the government of the Czech lands upon the dissolution of Austria-Hungary. Two days later the Slovak National Council manifested desire to unite politically with the Czechs. On 14 Nov. 1918 the first Czechoslovak National Assembly declared the Czechoslovak State to be a republic with T. G. Masaryk as President (1918–35).

The Treaty of St Germain-en-Laye (1919) recognized the Czechoslovak Republic, consisting of the Czech lands (Bohemia, Moravia, part of Silesia) and Slovakia. To these lands were added as a trust, the autonomous province of Subcarpathian Ruthenia.

This territory was broken up for the benefit of Germany, Poland and Hungary by the Munich agreement (29 Sept. 1938) between UK, France, Germany and Italy.

In March 1939 the German-sponsored Slovak government proclaimed Slovakia independent, and Germany incorporated the Czech lands into the Reich as the 'Protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia'. A government-in-exile, headed by Dr Beneš, was set up in London in July 1940.

Liberation by the Soviet Army and US Forces was completed by May 1945.

Territories taken by Germans, Poles and Hungarians were restored to Czechoslovak sovereignty. Subcarpathian Ruthenia was transferred to the USSR.

Elections were held in May 1946, at which the Communist Party obtained about 38% of the votes.

A coalition government under a Communist Prime Minister, Klement Gottwald, remained in power until 20 Feb. 1948, when 12 of the non-Communist ministers resigned in protest against infiltration of Communists into the police.

In Feb. a predominantly Communist government was formed by Gottwald. In May elections resulted in an 89% majority for the government and President Beneš resigned.

In the first months of 1968 mounting pressure for liberalization culminated in the overthrow of the Stalinist President and Party Secretary, Antonín Novotný, and his associates. Under a new leadership the Communist Party introduced in April 1968 an 'Action Programme' of far-reaching political and economic reforms.

Soviet pressure to abandon this programme was exerted between May and Aug. at a number of talks with the Czechoslovak leadership (at Moscow, Prague, Čierna-nad-Tisou and Bratislava). Finally, Warsaw Pact forces (Soviet, Polish, Hungarian and Bulgarian) occupied Czechoslovakia on 21 Aug. The enforced Moscow agreement of 26 Aug. bound the Czechoslovak government to a policy of 'normalization' (i.e., abandonment of most reforms) and to the stationing of Soviet forces on Czechoslovak soil. This situation was confirmed by the Czechoslovak-Soviet 'Status of Forces Agreement' of 16 Oct. In 1969 and 1970 Soviet pressure led to extensive changes in the Party and in the Federal and republican governments. In Oct. 1969 Czechoslovakia repudiated its condemnation of the Warsaw Pact invasion.

A Czechoslovak-Soviet 20-year Treaty of Friendship, Co-operation and Mutual Assistance was signed in May 1970.

On 11 Dec. 1973 West Germany and Czechoslovakia signed a treaty normalizing relations and annulling the Munich agreement of 1938.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. For details of previous constitutions, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1968-69, pp. 927-28.

Since 1 Jan. 1969 Czechoslovakia has been a federal socialist republic consisting of two nations of equal rights: the Czech Socialist Republic (the Czech lands, previously Bohemia, Moravia and part of Silesia), and the Slovak Socialist Republic (Slovakia). Each Republic is governed by a National Council, which delegates to an overall Federal Assembly responsibility for constitutional and foreign affairs, defence and important economic decisions. Centralized Federal responsibility was increased by a constitutional amendment of Dec. 1970 to include several further spheres of administration, mainly economic. The Federal Assembly consists of the Chamber of Nations, which has 75 Czech and 75 Slovak delegates elected by their respective National Councils, and the Chamber of the People, which has 200 deputies elected by national suffrage.

The previous constitution (1960) remains in force where not specifically superseded, but since 1971 deputies are elected for a 5-year term so as to coincide with Communist Party congresses. Minimum age of voters is 18, of deputies, 21 years. The last elections to the superseded National Assembly were held in 1964; elections to the new Federal Assembly were postponed to 1971. By a law of 1968 more than one candidate was to be allowed to stand in each constituency, but this was repealed in 1971 and at the elections of 26 and 27 Nov. the number of candidates was the same as the number of seats. The electorate was 10,253,796, of whom 99.45% voted. Less than 1% of the votes were against the candidates.

President of the Republic: Gen. Ludvík Svoboda (born 1896), elected on 30 March 1968 (re-elected 22 March 1973), following the enforced resignation of President Novotný. President of the Federal Assembly: Alois Indra.

The de facto primary source of power is the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia, of which the Communist Party of Slovakia (First Secretary: Josef Lenárt) is a constituent part. Communists head the National Front, which incorporates the remaining political parties (Czechoslovak Socialist Party, People's Party) and the trade unions and youth organizations. Communist Party membership was 1,689,207 in 1967. In the course of extensive purges in 1970, 67,147 members were expelled, 259,670 had their membership cancelled and some further 150,000 resigned. In 1971 the Party had some 1.2m. members. The day after the Warsaw Pact occupation (21 Aug. 1968) the Communist Party met in a secret Congress and elected a new Central Committee and Presidium. This Congress was subsequently annulled. In March 1974 the Presidium consisted of Gustáv Husák (General Secretary); Vasil Bil'ak; Peter Colotka (Deputy Prime Minister); Alois Indra; Antonín Kapek; Josef Kempný; Josef Korčák (Deputy Prime Minister); Josef Lenárt; Karel Hoffman (Chairman, Central Council of Trade Unions); Lubomír Štrougal (Prime Minister); Ludvík Svoboda.

In March 1974 members of the government not mentioned above included: (Deputy Prime Ministers) Vlastimír Ehrenberger; Jan Gregor; František Hamouz; Václav Hůla (Chairman, State Planning Committee); Karol Laco; Matej Lučán; Rudolf Rohlíček; Jindřich Zahradník; (other ministers) Andrej Barčák (Foreign Trade); Martin Džur (Defence); Josef Machačka (Chairman, Czechoslovak Control Committee); Bohuslav Chňoupek (Foreign); Leopold Lér (Finance); Michal Štancel' (Labour); Jaromír Obzina (Interior).

The Czech Prime Minister is Josef Korčák; the Slovak, Peter Colotka.

National flag: White and red (horizontal), with a blue triangle of full depth at the hoist, point to the fly.

National anthem: Kde domov můj (words by J. K. Tyl; tune by F. J. Škroup, 1834); combined with, Nad Tatru sa blýska (words by J. Matuška, 1844).

AREA AND POPULATION. At the census of 1 Dec. 1970 the population was 14,361,557 (4,543,092 in Slovakia; 7.4m. females; 62% urban). Population in 1972 was 14.5m. There are 12 administrative regions, one of which is the capital, Prague (Praha) and one the capital of Slovakia, Bratislava.

Judges in local and district courts are elected by universal suffrage, those in regional courts by the regional local authority and the bench of the Supreme Court by the Federal Assembly.

The Army is organized in 10 divisions (5 tank and 5 motorized divisions and 1 airborne brigade). The regular army had, in 1973, a total strength of about 150,000 men and 3,400 tanks, mainly T-54s with some T-55s.

Six fighter regiments (each 3 squadrons of 14 aircraft) are equipped with MiG-19 and -21 jets, and there are 4 regiments of Su-7 and MiG-15 ground attack aircraft. The security forces and frontier guards are organized in regiments and brigades respectively; total strength, 40,000.

The Warsaw Pact invasion of Aug. 1968 brought an estimated 500,000 occupation troops into the country. By early 1970 this number had been reduced to 80,000 Soviet troops, the presence of which is legalized by the Czech-Soviet 'Status of Forces' Agreement of Oct. 1968.

In Feb. 1969 the government announced an increase in defence capacity, and Czechoslovakia resumed participation in Warsaw Pact meetings.

PLANNING. For details of the first three 5-year plans see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1964-65, p. 922. The fourth 5-year plan ran from 1966 to 1970. It was 'on the whole fulfilled'. Economic innovations introduced in the period 1965-68 have been substantially vitiated since the Soviet intervention of 1968, and the economy has reverted to a model closer to the traditional communist centrally planned type.

The fifth 5-year plan for 1971-75 envisages an increase of 34-36% in industrial, (principally chemical, engineering and power) and of 14% in agricultural, production.

AGRICULTURE. In 1972 there were 7.07m. hectares of agricultural land (5m. hectares arable, 1m. meadow, 0.8m. pasture). The area occupied by private plots (maximum size 1 hectare) was 275,000 hectares in 1973 and 636,000 hectares in 1972.

In 1973 there were 5,251 collective farms (10,816 in 1960) with 4,027,237 hectares of land, and 317 state farms and 39,285 other state establishments with 2,101,979 hectares. Crop production in 1972 (in 1,000 metric tons): Wheat, 4,017; rye, 454; barley, 2,651; oats, 726; maize, 642 potatoes, 5,058; sugar-beet, 6,884.

Livestock. In Jan. 1973 the number of livestock was: Cattle, 4.47m. (including 1.9m. milch cows); horses, 100,000; pigs, 6m.; sheep, 889,000; poultry, 39.2m.

In 1972 production of meat was 1,369,706 metric tons (live weight); milk, 4,967m. litres; 4,120m. eggs. In 1972 there were 236,175 tractors (in 15-h.p. units).

FORESTRY. Czechoslovakia is a richly wooded country, and the timber industry is important. Forest area in 1972 was 4,468,000 hectares (50% spruce, 16% beech and pine, 7% oak). The area reafforested in 1972 was 46,091 hectares. The timber yield was 15.4m. cu. metres in 1972.

MINING. Czechoslovakia is not rich in minerals. Hard and soft coal reserves are ample (chief coalfields: Most, Chomutov, Kladno, Ostrava and Sokolov), and there is also iron ore, graphite, copper, lead, uranium, glass sand and salt. Production in 1972 (in metric tons): Iron ore, 1.6m.; coal, 28m.; lignite and brown coal, 86m.

INDUSTRY. Industrialization is well developed and antedates the Communist régime. All industry is nationalized.

Output in 1972 (in 1,000 metric tons): Pig-iron, 8,360; crude steel, 12,727; coke, 10,679; crude oil, 191; rolled-steel products, 8,711; cement, 8,045; paper, 627; sulphuric acid, 1,176; nitrogenous fertilizers, 344; phosphate fertilizers, 334; sugar, 16,296; beer, 22.5m. hectolitres; cars, 154,454.

Textile production (in 1m. metres) in 1972: Cotton, 537; linen, 75.8; woollen, 55.2. Leather shoes, 60.5m. pairs.

Production of electricity in 1972: 51,402m. kwh.

There are 2 oil pipelines from the USSR, one to Bratislava and one to Záluží (near Most). The natural gas pipeline from USSR which supplies East and West Germany, Austria and Italy as well as Czechoslovakia came into use in 1973.

LABOUR. There is a shortage of labour in some sectors of the economy (especially in agriculture) and, since the birthrate is low, solutions are being sought in a more efficient utilization of human resources.

The total labour force in 1972 was 7,179,000 (47.4% female), of which 2.8m. worked in industry, 1.2m. in agriculture and forestry, 0.6m. in building and 0.5m. in transport and communications.

A 5-day 42-hour week with 4 weeks annual holiday is standard. Average monthly wage in 1972: Kčs. 2,048.

COMMERCE. Total trade (in Kčs. 1m.) for calendar years:

	1967	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972
Imports	19,296	22,155	23,718	26,605	28,870	30,912
Exports	20,622	21,638	23,900	27,305	30,095	32,588

In 1972, 69% of foreign trade was with Communist countries (34% with USSR). The Czech Soviet trade agreement for 1971-75 envisages an increase of 43% in Czech exports and of 39% in imports. In 1971 Czechoslovakia imported from the USSR goods valued at Kčs. 9,780m. and exported to the USSR goods valued at Kčs. 9,529m.; followed by East Germany (imports, 3,578m.; exports, 3,285m.) and Poland (imports, 1,925m.; exports, 2,507m.). UK is Czechoslovakia's third biggest non-Communist trade partner after West Germany and Austria.

Major exports in 1972 (percentage of total): Machinery, 49.4; industrial consumer goods, 18.7; raw materials and fuel, 17.2. Imports: Machinery, 33.8; raw materials and fuel, 45.2; chemical products, 8.7.

Foreign trade corporations (independent legal entities with their own capital run by state-appointed managers) handle all import-export business. They are members of the Chamber of Commerce. Enterprises must obtain agreement from the Ministry of Foreign Trade before trading with foreign firms. The 1971-75 plan envisages a greater degree of integration with the economies of other Comecon countries.

UK-Czechoslovak trade is conducted according to a 4-year agreement (1972-74). Under this a Joint Commission was set up.

Total trade between UK and Czechoslovakia for calendar years (in £1,000 sterling, British Board of Trade returns):

	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973

The central bank and bank of issue is the State Bank (Státní Banka), which controls foreign exchange reserves, and is a savings bank and a commercial credit bank to enterprises, except foreign trade enterprises. These are financed by the Commercial Bank (Obchodní Banka) which carries out all foreign trade transactions. The Trade Bank (Živnostenská Banka) provides banking services for private foreign clients, and maintains branches abroad.

DAHOMEY

République du Dahomey

AREA AND POPULATION. The area is 112,600 sq. km, and the population, in 1965, 2.37m. The seat of government is Porto Novo (74,500 inhabitants); the chief port and business centre is Cotonou (111,000); other important towns are Abomey (42,100), Ouidah (19,600) and Parakou (16,300).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The Republic of Dahomey became independent on 1 Aug. 1960, after having been a territory of French West Africa from 1904. The Republic was admitted to the UN on 20 Sept. 1960.

In the fifth coup since independence Maj. Kerekou took over the government on 26 Oct. 1972.

President, Prime Minister, Minister of Planning and Defence: Maj. Mattieu Kerekou.

Minister of Foreign Affairs: Maj. Michel Aladaye.

EDUCATION. There were, in 1964–65, 77,800 pupils in public primary schools, 52,900 in private primary schools, 5,230 in public secondary schools, 6,064 in private secondary schools in 1969 and, in 1963–64, 1,050 in technical schools.

PLANNING. The main objectives of the 5-year (1966–70) development plan are to foster rural development, mainly by increasing the output of export crops (oil palm, groundnuts, coconuts, cotton and coffee) and food crops (vegetables and rice), and to develop infrastructure and food processing. The earlier (1962–65) plan was over-ambitious and had to be abandoned.

AGRICULTURE. The population is mainly agricultural, growing maize (224,800 metric tons in 1968), millet (73,000 tons in 1964) and groundnuts (31,000 tons in 1964). In 1963 there were 346,000 cattle, 771,000 sheep and goats, 272,000 pigs, 3,000 horses, 1,000 donkeys. The forests contain oil palms, which have been profitably utilized. These furnish the chief exports—kernels and oil. Cotton cultivation has been successfully introduced in the north; coffee cultivation has given good results in the southern districts.

TRADE. Imports in 1968, 12,208m. francs CFA; exports, 5,508m. francs CFA. The principal imports in 1963 (in metric tons): Cement, 66,438; petroleum, 43,682; sugar, 8,070; rice, 4,304. The principal exports were: Palm-kernels (50,558), palm-oil (9,256), decorticated groundnuts (6,593).

There were 13,000 private cars in 1971.

Railways (metre-gauge) connect Cotonou with Parakou (438 km); Pahou-Segboroué on Lake Aheme (34 km); Cotonou-Pobé (107 km).

There were, in 1956, 68 post offices and (1971) 6,494 telephones. A telegraph line connects Cotonou with Abomey, Togo, Niger and Senegal.

In 1971, 755 vessels of 2,076,000 net tons entered the port of Cotonou.

In 1970, 15,697 passengers and 799 metric tons of freight and 129 metric tons of mail were dealt with at Cotonou airport.

DENMARK

Kongeriget Danmark

REIGNING QUEEN. Margrethe II, born 16 April 1940; married 10 June 1967 to Prince Henrik, born Count de Monpezat; offspring: Crown Prince Frederik, born 26 May 1968; Prince Joachim, born 7 June 1969. She succeeded to the throne on the death of her father, King Frederik IX, on 14 Jan. 1972.

Mother of the Queen: Queen Ingrid, born Princess of Sweden, 28 March 1910.

Sisters of the Queen: Princess Benedikte, born 29 April 1944 (married 3 Feb. 1968 to Prince Richard of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg); Princess Anne-Marie, born 30 Aug. 1946 (married 18 Sept. 1964 to King Constantine of Greece).

Uncle of the Queen: Prince Knud, born 27 July 1900; married 8 Sept. 1933 to Princess Caroline-Mathilde of Denmark, his cousin; offspring: Princess Elisabeth, born 8 May 1935; Prince Ingolf, since 1968 Count of Rosenborg, born 17 Feb. 1940; Prince Christian, since 1971 Count of Rosenborg, born 22 Oct. 1942.

The crown of Denmark was elective from the earliest times. In 1448 after the death of the last male descendant of Swein Estridsen the Danish Diet elected to the throne Christian I, Count of Oldenburg, in whose family the royal dignity remained for more than 4 centuries, although the crown was not rendered hereditary by right till 1660. The direct male line of the house of Oldenburg became extinct with King Frederik VII on 15 Nov. 1863. In view of the death of the king, without direct heirs, the Great Powers signed a treaty at London on 8 May 1852, by the terms of which the succession to the crown of Denmark was made over to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, and to the direct male descendants of his union with the Princess Louise of Hesse-Cassel, niece of King Christian VIII of Denmark. In accordance with this treaty, a law concerning the succession to the Danish crown was adopted by the Diet, and obtained the royal sanction 31 July 1853. Linked to the constitution of 5 June 1953, a new law of succession, dated 27 March 1953, has come into force, which restricts the right of succession to the descendants of King Christian X and Queen Alexandrine, and admits the sovereign's daughters to the line of succession, ranking after the sovereign's sons.

Queen Margrethe II has a civil list of 8,666,000 kroner. Annuities to other members of the royal house amount to 2.12m. kroner.

Subjoined is a list of the kings of Denmark, with the dates of their accession, from the time of election of Christian I of Oldenburg:

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The present constitution of Denmark is founded upon the 'Grundlov' (charter) of 5 June 1953.

The legislative power lies with the Queen and the Folketing (Diet) jointly. The executive power is vested in the Queen, who exercises her authority through the ministers. The judicial power is with the courts. The Queen must be a member of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church, the official Church of the State. The Queen cannot assume major international obligations without the consent of the Folketing. The Folketing consists of one chamber. All men and women of Danish nationality of more than 20 years of age and permanently resident in Denmark possess the franchise and are eligible for election to the Folketing, which is at present composed of 179 members; 135 members are elected by the method of proportional representation in 17 districts. In order to attain an equal representation of the different parties, 40 tillægsmandater (additional seats) are divided among such parties which have not obtained sufficient returns at the district elections. Two members are elected for the Faroe Islands and 2 for Greenland. The term of the legislature is 4 years, but a general election may be called at any time.

The Folketing must meet every year on the first Tuesday in October. Besides its legislative functions, it appoints every 6 years judges who, together with the ordinary members of the Supreme Court (Højesteret), form the Rigsret, a tribunal which can alone try parliamentary impeachments. The ministers have free access to the house, but can vote only if they are members.

Folketing, elected 5 Dec. 1973: 46 Social Democrats, 20 Radical Left, 16 Conservatives, 11 Socialist People's Party, 22 Liberals, 14 Centre Democrats, 5 Single-Tax Party, 7 Christian People's Party, 6 Communists, 28 Progress Party, 2 Faroe Islands and 2 Greenland representatives; total 179.

The executive (called the State Council (Statsraadet) when acting with the Queen presiding) is a minority Liberal Democratic government, composed in Dec. 1973, as follows:

Prime Minister: Poul Hartling.

Minister for Foreign Affairs: Ove Guldberg. Finance: Anders Andersen. Economy and Trade: Poul N. Andersen. Labour and Housing: Johan Philipsen. Agriculture and Fisheries: Niels A. Kofoed. Environment and Greenland: Holger

Hansen. Justice and Cultural Affairs: Nathalie Lind. Education: Tove Nielsen. Defence: Erling Brøndum. Interior and Social Affairs: Jacob Sørensen. Ecclesiastical Affairs and Public Works: Kresten Damsgaard.

The ministers are individually and collectively responsible for their acts, and if impeached and found guilty, cannot be pardoned without the consent of the Folketing.

In 1948 a separate legislature (Lagting) and executive (Landsstyre) were established for the Faroe Islands, to deal with specified local matters.

The Constitution of 1953 gave Greenland equal status with the other parts of the Kingdom.

National flag: White cross on red (Dannebrog).

National anthems: Kong Kristian stod ved højen Mast (words by J. Ewald, 1778; tune by J. E. Hartmann, 1780) and Der er et yndigt land.

The Constitution of the Kingdom of Denmark Act and the Succession to the Throne Act. Copenhagen, 1953

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. For administrative purposes Denmark is divided into 277 municipalities (kommuner); each of them has a district council of between 5 and 25 members, headed by an elected mayor. Copenhagen forms a district by itself and is governed by a city council of 55 members, elected every 4 years, and an executive (magistraten), consisting of the chief burgomaster (overborgmesteren), 5 burgomasters and 5 aldermen, appointed by the city council for 8 years. There are 14 counties (amtskommuner), each of which is administered by a county council (amtsråd) of between 13 and 31 members, headed by an elected mayor. All councils are elected directly by universal suffrage and proportional representation for 4-year terms.

The counties and Copenhagen are superintended by the ministry of interior affairs. The municipalities are superintended by 14 local supervision committees, headed by a County Prefect (amtmand) who is a civil servant appointed by the Queen.

AREA AND POPULATION. According to the census held on 9 Nov. 1970 the area of Denmark proper was 43,069 sq. km (16,629 sq. miles) and the population 4,937,579. Estimate, Jan. 1973: 5,007,538.

EDUCATION. Education has been compulsory since 1814. The compulsory school age is from 7 to 16. There are no fees in public schools.

In the year 1971-72, 2,274 primary and lower secondary schools had 522,065 pupils in grades 1-7 and 173,593 pupils in grades 8-10 and employed 46,767 teachers. 103 upper secondary schools had 34,886 pupils and 4,632 teachers. Forms 8, 9 and 10 of the lower secondary schools are either voluntary non-examination forms or examination forms in the réal department terminating with the Réal Examination. About 10% of the total number of schools are private, and they are inspected either by the municipal authorities or by the State.

SOCIAL WELFARE. The main body of Danish social welfare legislation is consolidated in 10 acts concerning (1) health insurance, (2) daily cash benefits,

(3) disablement pensions, (4) old-age pensions, (5) widows pensions, (6) employment injuries insurance, (7) employment services and unemployment insurance, (8) social assistance including assistance to handicapped, (9) rehabilitation, (10) family allowances, and (11) child and juvenile guidance.

Health insurance, covering the entire population, provides free medical care, substantial subsidies for certain essential medicines together with some dental care and a funeral allowance. Hospitals are primarily municipal and the hospital treatment is normally free. Wage-earners are granted daily sickness allowances, others can have limited daily sickness allowances. Daily cash benefits are granted in the case of temporary incapacity for work because of illness, injury or child-birth to all persons who earn an income derived from personal work. The benefit is paid at the rate of 90% of the average weekly earnings. There is a maximum rate of 698 kroner a week.

Disablement and old-age pensions cover the entire population. Entitlement to benefits at the full rates is subject to the condition that the beneficiary has been ordinarily resident in Denmark for a number of years (40). For a shorter period of residence, the benefits are reduced proportionally. The basic amount of the old-age pension in 1973 was 15,960 kroner. Various supplementary allowances, depending on age and income, may be payable with the basic amount. Persons over 67 years of age are entitled to the basic amount. The pensions to a married couple are calculated and paid to the husband and the wife separately. Invalidity pension is payable, having regard to the degree of disability, at a rate of up to 22,692 kroner to a single person. The rate of the widow's pension corresponds more or less to that of the old-age pension. Invalidity and widow's pensions may be subject to income regulation.

Employment injuries insurance provides for disablement or survivors' pensions and funeral allowances. The scheme covers practically all employees.

Employment services are provided by regional public employment agencies. The insurance against unemployment provides daily allowances. The unemployment insurance funds have a membership of about 842,500.

The Care of Invalidity and Old-Age Pensioners' Act deals with the care of the aged and the sick (old people homes and nursing homes). The National Assistance Act and the Rehabilitation Act deal with care, rehabilitation and welfare facilities for handicapped.

The Care of Children and Young Persons Act deals with the care of children, including placement of children and juveniles in foster homes or institutional care. Institutions for day-time care of children and some other benefits for children are provided for under this act.

Total social expenditure, including hospital and health services, amounted in the financial year 1971-72 to 17,894m. kroner.

JUSTICE. The lowest courts of justice are organized in 84 tribunals (underretter), where minor cases are dealt with by a single judge. The tribunals at Copenhagen have 30 judges, Aarhus 12, Odense 9, Aalborg 8, and the other tribunals have 1 to 4. Cases of greater consequence are dealt with by the superior courts (Landsretterne); these courts are also courts of appeal for the above-named minor cases. Of superior courts there are two: Østre Landsret in Copenhagen with 36 judges, Vestre Landsret in Viborg with 20 judges. From these an appeal lies to the Supreme Court (Højesteret) in Copenhagen, composed of 15 judges. Judges under 70 years of age can be removed only by judicial sentence.

In 1971, 9,797 men and 744 women were convicted of crimes and delicts, fines not included. On 31 Dec. 1971, 1,733 men and 20 women were in the state prisons.

FINANCE. Currency. The monetary unit is the krone of 100 øre. In 1931 Denmark went off the gold standard, as established in 1873. £1 = 17.95 kroner, US$ = 7.5 kroner.

Small change: 5-kroner pieces of copper-nickel, 1-kroner pieces of copper-nickel or copper-aluminium-nickel; 25-øre and 10-øre pieces of copper-nickel, and 5-øre pieces of copper-tin-zinc.

Budget. The budget (Finanslovsforslag) must be laid before the Folketing not later than 4 months before the beginning of a new fiscal year. The annual financial accounts (Statsregnskab) must be examined by 5 revisers, elected by the Folketing. Their report is submitted to the Folketing.

The following shows the actual revenue and expenditure for 4 fiscal years ending 31 March and the budget for 1 year (in 1,000 kroner):

Current revenue	28,236,084	37,536,961	40,685,660	47,288,302	53,499,532
Current expenditure	28,182,548	34,114,089	39,551,275	45,159,301	49,470,439

Receipts and expenditures of special government funds and expenditures on public works are included.

The 1973-74 budget envisages revenue of 26,435m. kroner from income and property taxes and 24,099m. from consumer taxes (gross).

The central government debt on 31 March 1972 amounted to 87m. kroner.

DEFENCE. The Danish military defence is organized in accordance with the Defence Act of 1969 (amended April 1973).

In accordance with the new act the Chief of Defence has full command of the three services: the Army, the Navy and the Air Force. The Chief of Defence, the Chief of Defence Staff and the Commanders-in-Chief of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force and part of their staffs, are integrated in the Defence Command.

The Minister of Defence is assisted by a Defence Council consisting of the Chief of Defence, the Chief of Defence Staff, the Chief of Danish Operational Forces, and the Commanders-in-Chief of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force.

The Constitution of 1849 declared it the duty of every fit man to contribute to the national defence, and this provision is still in force. According to the Personnel Act, 1969, the military personnel comprises officers, n.c.o.s and privates. Private personnel are provided by enlistment and by recruiting of volunteers. Selection of conscripts take place at the age of 18½ years, and the conscripts are normally called up for 9 months service 1-1½ years later. Afterwards conscripts may be recalled for refresher training or musters.

Army. The Army comprises field army formations and the local defence forces. The field army formations are organized in an operationally balanced covering force and in reserve units. The covering force number about 13,000 men and comprises a standing force, and a supplementary force consisting of men newly released from service. The standing force number about 8,500 men organized in standing brigade units, headquarters units and support units. The brigade units are organized in 5 armoured infantry brigades. The field army is equipped with 200 medium battle tanks and about 650 armoured personnel carriers as well as artillery including 72 self-propelled howitzers. The local defence units consist of about 24,000 men organized in 21 infantry battalions and 7 artillery battalions. The men of the latest annual service groups form the troops of the line, while those of the previous years form the local defence, the reserve and the reserve for the Home Guard. The mobilization units of the field army and the local defence force will total about 65,000 men.

Navy. The Navy comprises the fleet and coast-defence. It includes 6 diesel powered coastal submarines, 6 frigates (4 for fishery protection with helicopter), 4 ocean minelayers, 4 corvettes (coastal escorts), 16 torpedo boats (fast patrol boats), 3 coastal minelayers, 9 seaward defence craft, 26 patrol craft, 8 coastal minesweepers, 4 inshore minesweepers, 2 depot ships, 2 oilers, 5 icebreakers and the royal yacht. Eight gas turbine and diesel powered guided missile armed patrol vessels of 240 tons displacement, of German design, are under construction in the royal dockyard, Copenhagen.

The coast defence includes several permanent fortifications. Naval personnel total 7,500 officers and men, with a reserve of 4,500 in the Naval Home Guard.

The Naval Home Guard consists of 15 coast guard cutters and about 4,200 volunteers. There are 5 icebreakers under Government control.

Air Force. Following 1970 reorganization of the defence forces, the Royal Danish Air Force has Air Tactical and Air Materiel Commands, plus a missile-armed Air Defence Group under Tactical Command. Training is administered by air staff from RDAF HQ, with initial grading on Chipmunks in Denmark, followed by basic aircrew training on T-37 and T-38 jet aircraft in the USA. The Air Force is committed to NATO. Total peacetime strength is about 9,500 personnel. There are 3 fighter-bomber squadrons, of which 2 have F-100D/F Super Sabres and the other Swedish-built Saab F-35 Drakens, 2 all-weather fighter squadrons (F-104G Starfighters), a reconnaissance squadron (RF-35 Drakens), 1 transport squadron (C-54s and C-47s, with 3 C-130H Hercules due for delivery in 1975) and 1 search and rescue squadron (S-61 helicopters), plus training and general purpose units. Four air defence squadrons have Nike-Hercules surface-to-air missiles; another 4 have Hawk surface-to-air missiles. Total strength about 9,700.

The Air Force Home Guard consists of about 11,500 volunteers.

In 1965, 14% of the population lived on agriculture, forestry and fishery, 26% on industries and handicrafts, 8% on construction, 12% on commerce, etc., 7% on transportation and communication, and 16% on administration, professional services, etc., while 13% received old-age pensions or had private means.

On 5 June 1953 Greenland became an integral part of the Danish Realm with the same rights as other counties in Denmark and with a democratically elected council (landsråd).

A Danish-American agreement for the common defence of Greenland was signed on 27 April 1951.

Until the beginning of this century, the hunting of land and sea mammals, especially seals, was the main occupation of the population; now fishing is most important. Fish-processing industries, construction and trade are also important occupations.

Coal production ceased in 1972. A deposit of the valuable mineral cryolite is being mined at Ivigtut. The interest of oil and mining companies in obtaining licences and concessions in and offshore Greenland has grown considerably during the last years and in Jan. 1971 the Danish company Greenex A/S was granted a concession for lead and zinc near Umanak and a mine is now under construction, and production is expected in 1973. Oil concessions may be granted in 1974 for west coast areas.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

República Dominicana

HISTORY. On 5 Dec. 1492 Columbus discovered the island of Santo Domingo, which he called La Española; for a time it was called Hispaniola. The city of Santo Domingo, founded by his brother, Bartholomew, in 1496, is the oldest city in the Americas. The western third of the island—now the Republic of Haiti—was later occupied and colonized by the French, to whom the Spanish colony of Santo Domingo was also ceded in 1795. In 1808 the Dominican population, under the command of Gen. Juan Sánchez Ramírez, routed an important French military force commanded by Gen. Ferrand, at the famous battle of Palo Hincado. This battle was the beginning of the end for French rule in Santo Domingo and culminated in the successful siege of the capital. Eventually, with the aid of a British naval squadron, the French were forced to capitulate and the colony returned again to Spanish rule, from which it declared its independence in 1821. It was invaded and held by the Haitians from 1822 to 1844, when they were expelled, and the Dominican Republic was founded and a constitution adopted. Great Britain, in 1850, was the first country to recognize the Dominican Republic. The country was occupied by American Marines from 1916 until 1924. In 1936 the name of the capital city was changed from Santo Domingo to Ciudad Trujillo; and back again in 1961.

National flag: Blue, red; quartered by a white cross.

National anthem: Quisqueyanos valientes, alzemos (words by E. Prud'homme; tune by J. Reyes, 1883).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. A new constitution was promulgated on 28 Nov. 1966.

The President is elected for 4 years, by direct vote. In case of death, resignation or disability, he is succeeded by the Vice-president. There are 12 secretaries of state, a judicial adviser with secretary-of-state rank and 2 ministers without portfolio in charge of departments. Citizens are entitled to vote at the age of 18, or less when married.

Recent Presidents have been: Gen. Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina, 1930-38, 1942-52 (assassinated 30 May 1961); Héctor Bienvenido Trujillo Molina, 1952-60; Dr Joaquín Balaguer, 4 Aug. 1960-62; Lic. Rafael Bonnelly, 18 Jan. 1962; Professor Juan Bosch, 27 Feb.-25 Sept. 1963 (deposed); Dr Héctor García Godoy, 3 Sept. 1965-1 July 1966.

President: Joaquín Balaguer (elected 1966 and re-elected 1970).

Foreign Minister: Dr Jaime Manuel Fernández.

The country's first free elections for nearly 40 years were held in Dec. 1962 when Juan Bosch was elected President with a clear majority, after which a new Constitution was approved on 29 April 1963. Bosch was overthrown by a military coup d'état in Sept. 1963 and the declared aim of the Constitutionalist side in the Civil War of April-Sept. 1965 was the restoration of Bosch as President and a return to the 1963 Constitution.

On 30 April 1965 USA landed a force of 23,000 Marines and Army, later assisted by Organization of American States contributions. The capital remained divided between these forces and various rival factions of nationals. A provisional government was eventually installed on 3 Sept. 1965.

Until elections on 1 June 1966 there was government by decree. The voting on 16 May 1970 was 607,717 votes for Dr Joaquín Balaguer (Reformist Party) of a total of 1,111,853 votes counted.

AREA AND POPULATION. The Dominican Republic occupies the eastern portion (about two-thirds) of the island of Hispaniola, Quisqueya or Santo Domingo, the western division forming the Republic of Haiti. It consists of the National District (containing the capital, Santo Domingo), and 25 provinces. Area is 48,442 sq. km (18,700 sq. miles) with 870 miles of coastline, 193 miles of frontier line with Haiti (marked out in 1936).

The judicial power resides in the Supreme Court of Justice, the courts of appeal, the courts of first instance, the communal courts and other tribunals created by special laws, such as the land courts. The Supreme Court consists of a president and 8 judges chosen by the Senate, and the procurator-general, appointed by the executive; it supervises the lower courts. Each province forms a judicial district, as does the Distrito Nacional, and each has its own procurator fiscal and court of first instance; these districts are subdivided, in all, into 72 municipalities and 18 municipal districts, each with one or more local justices. The death penalty was abolished in 1924, but is imposed in war-time for treason or espionage.

FINANCE. Currency. In Oct. 1947 the peso oro, equal to the USA dollar, was formally made the unit of currency, replacing the USA gold dollar, which had been the standard since 1 July 1897. On 31 July 1969 the Banco Central held gold and foreign exchange worth US$28m.

ECUADOR

República del Ecuador

HISTORY. The Spaniards under Francisco Pizarro founded a colony after their victory at Cajamarca (16 Nov. 1532). Their rule was first challenged by the rising of 10 Aug. 1809. Marshal Sucre defeated the Spaniards at Pichincha in 1821, and in 1822 Bolívar persuaded the new republic to join the federation of Gran Colombia. The Presidency of Quito became the Republic of Ecuador by amicable secession 13 May 1830.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. Following a military coup d'état on 11 July 1963, the constitution of 1946 was suspended. The military junta was overthrown on 31 March 1966. President Yerovi appointed a civilian cabinet and civilian governors of provinces.

A Constituent Assembly was elected on 16 Oct. 1966. It elected Dr Arosemena Gómez as interim president and drafted a new constitution which was published on 25 May 1967. Elections for the Presidency and Congress were held on 2 June 1968.

On 22 June 1970 President José María Velasco Ibarra assumed dictatorial powers, following months of strife between student and security forces. On 15 Feb. 1972 President Ibarra was deposed. A National Military Government under Brig.-Gen. Guillermo Rodríguez Lara was formed and the 1945 Constitution reintroduced.

National flag: Yellow (2), blue (1), red (1), horizontal.

National anthem: Salve, on patria! (words by J. L. Mera; tune by A. Neumann, 1866).

The following is a list of the presidents and provisional executives since 1940, with the date on which they took office:

Carlos Alberto Arroyo del Río, elected 12 Jan. 1940; resigned 30 May 1944.

Dr José María Velasco Ibarra, 1 Sept. 1968–72 (deposed).

Minister for Foreign Affairs: Antonio José Lucio Paredes.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. The country is divided politically into 20 provinces; 4 of them comprise the 'Región Oriental' and one the Archipelago of Galápagos, officially called 'Colón', situated in the Pacific Ocean about 600 miles to the west of Ecuador and comprising 15 islands. The provinces are administered by governors, appointed by the Government; their sub-divisions, or cantons, by political chiefs and elected cantonal councillors; and the parishes by political lieutenants. The Galápagos Archipelago is administered by the Ministry of National Defence.

AREA AND POPULATION. Ecuador is bounded on the north by Colombia, on the east and south by Peru, on the west by the Pacific Ocean. The frontier with Peru has long been a source of dispute between the two countries. The latest delimitation of it was in the treaty of Rio, 29 Jan. 1942, when, after being invaded by Peru, Ecuador ceded the latter over half her Amazonian territories. Ecuador unilaterally denounced this treaty in Sept. 1961. See map in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1942. No definite figure of the area of the country can yet be given, as a portion of the frontier has not been delimited. One estimate shows 455,454 sq. km, including the Archipelago of Colón (the Galápagos Islands) with 7,430 sq. km. The United Nations Statistical Office excludes the 'Región Oriental' and the Galápagos Islands and gives the settled portion of Ecuador as 270,670 sq. km (104,505 sq. miles).

Ecuador has 3 distinct zones: the Sierra or uplands of the Andes, consisting of high mountain ridges with valleys, with 2–57m. of the population and high-priced farming land; the Costa, the coastal plain between the Andes and the Pacific, with 2–02m., whose permanent plantations furnish bananas, cacao, coffee, sugar-cane and many other crops; the Oriente, the upper Amazon basin on the east, consisting of tropical jungles threaded by large rivers.

The population is predominantly of Amerindians, with small proportions of people of European or African descent. The official language is Spanish. The Amerindians of the highlands speak mainly the Quechua language; in the Oriental Region various tribes have languages of their own.

Ecuador's first census of population was taken on 29 Nov. 1950; it showed a total of 3,202,757 (1,594,803 males and 1,607,954 females). The census was hampered by strong opposition from the Indian villages. The working population was given as 1,236,590, of which two-thirds were agricultural. Estimated population in 1970, 6·09m.

The population (estimate at 25 Nov. 1967) was distributed by provinces (capitals in brackets):

There are 97 cantons, 169 urban parishes and 626 rural parishes. The chief towns (population estimate, 1971) are the capital, Quito (551,163), Guayaquil (835,812).

Vital statistics for calendar years: Births, (1964), 219,137, (1965) 226,436, (1966) 220,930; deaths, (1964) 58,989, (1965) 60,202, (1966) 59,618,

RELIGION. The state recognizes no religion and grants freedom of worship to all. Civil registration of births, deaths and marriages is obligatory. Divorce is permitted. Illegitimate children have the same rights as legitimate ones with respect to education and inheritance.

The Catholic Church has 1 cardinal, 3 archbishops and 18 bishops. A modus vivendi was concluded with the Holy See on 24 July 1937, governing the relations between the Catholic Church and the state. Protestants numbered 19,200 in 1966.

EDUCATION. Primary education is free and in principle obligatory. Private schools, both primary and secondary, are under some state supervision. There were (1968-69) 7,472 primary schools with 975,480 pupils; 720 secondary schools with 194,682 pupils and 10 universities with 31,330 students. SOCIAL WELFARE. From 1 May 1964 social benefits are extended to professional men, artisans and domestic workers; and to agricultural workers from 1 May 1965. The Ministry of Social Welfare and Labour was in 1967 divided into the Ministries of Social Welfare and of Public Health.

JUSTICE. The Supreme Court in Quito is the highest tribunal and consists of 5 justices and the Minister Fiscal. Of the 15 superior courts, 4 are composed of 6 judges and 11 of 3 judges each. There are numerous lower courts. The popular jury was abolished in 1928, and criminal cases are heard before a 'special jury' consisting of 1 judge and 3 members of the Ecuadorean bar, appointed annually by the superior courts. Capital punishment and all forms of torture are prohibited under the constitution, as are imprisonment for debt and contracts involving personal servitude or slavery. Substantial amendments expediting judicial procedure were introduced in 1936, and salaries for all judicial officials replaced remuneration by fees.

FINANCE. Currency. The monetary unit is the sucre, divided into 100 centavos. In circulation are a pure nickel 1-sucre and copper-nickel and copper-zinc 50-, 20-, 10- and 5-centavo pieces. The currency consists mainly of the notes of the Central Bank in denominations of 5, 10, 20, 50, 100, 500 and 1,000 sucres. In Aug. 1970 the US$1 stood at 25 sucres and (Jan. 1973) the £ at 57.75 sucres in the official exchange.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure for calendar years, in 1m. sucres (18.18 sucres = US$1, official rate), balanced as follows: 1973, 8,700; 1974, 11,200.

DEFENCE. Military service is selective, with a 2-year period of conscription. The country is divided into 4 military zones, with headquarters at Quito, Guayaquil, Cuenca and Pastaza.

Army. The Army consists of 11 infantry battalions, 3 artillery groups, 3 mechanized squadrons, 2 sapper battalions, 1 anti-aircraft battalion, 3 signal companies and 10 independent infantry companies. A military academy for cadets and a war academy for officers are maintained at Quito.

Navy. The Navy consists of 4 frigates (comprising 2 British 'Hunt' class escort destroyers acquired in 1955, a US patrol frigate acquired in 1947 and a US destroyer escort transport acquired in 1967), 2 escort vessels, 3 torpedo boats, 2 gunboats, 6 patrol boats, 2 medium landing ships, 1 supply ship, 1 water carrier, 1 survey ship and 3 tugs. Naval personnel totals 3,800.

Air Force. The Air Force, formed with Italian assistance in 1920, was reorganized and re-equipped with US aircraft after Ecuador signed the Rio Pact of Mutual Defence in 1947 but latest equipment acquired from Europe. Current strength of about 3,500 personnel and 60 aircraft includes about 8 Meteor FR9 day reconnaissance fighters, 5 Canberra 6 light bombers, 8 Strikemaster light jet attack and training aircraft, 1 squadron of DC-6B and C-47 piston-engined transports, 3 HS 748 turboprop transports, Alouette III helicopters, and T-28, T-33, T-34 T-41A/D trainers.

AGRICULTURE. Ecuador is divided into two agricultural zones: the coast and lower river valleys, where tropical farming is carried on in an average temperature of from 18° to 25° C.; and the Andean highlands with a temperate climate, adapted to grazing, dairying and the production of cereals, potatoes, pyrethrum and vegetables suitable to temperate climes. Some wheat has to be imported.

124,000 acres of rich virgin land in the Santo Domingo de los Colorados area has been set aside for settlement of smallholders.

Excepting the two agricultural zones and a few arid spots on the Pacific coast, Ecuador is a vast forest. Roughly estimated, 10,000 sq. miles on the Pacific slope extending from the sea to an altitude of 5,000 ft on the Andes, and the Amazon Basin below the same level containing 80,000 sq. miles, nearly all virgin forest, are rich in valuable timber, but much of it is still not commercially accessible.

The staple export products are bananas, cacao and coffee. These make up over 82% of her exports; the value of the bananas being some 46%. The production of wheat is increasing. Sugar is becoming important; some tea is being produced, mostly for export. Main crops, in metric tons:

Cacao	68,506	47,993	Wheat	83,905	94,099
Coffee	67,200	55,893	Cotton	18,369	23,557
Rice	114,552	288,016	Bananas (stems)	88,487,000	118,097,000

Livestock, estimated: Cattle 2.55m.; sheep, 2.2m.; pigs, 2m.

FISHERY. Fisheries and fish product exports were valued at US$9.6m. 1970; of these, shrimps comprised about half.

MINING. A few firms are engaged in stoping mineralized vein material for copper, gold, silver, lead and zinc. Production is small: that of gold continued to decline in 1966, but that of copper rose. Production of crude petroleum in 1973 was 75.2m. US bbls. New drilling along the coast has had some success, but Ecuador has to import some crude oil. Drilling near the river Putumayo started in 1967, and oil is reported to have been found in commercial quantities. Of 53 wells drilled in 1973 only 6 were dry.

The country has some copper, iron and lead. There are coal deposits in the Biblián area, but their exploitation has so far proved uneconomic. Output of sea salt in 1970 was 40,000 metric tons.

INDUSTRY. The Industrial Development Law of 1965 has stimulated the establishment of new industries, including textiles, refrigerators, pharmaceuticals, tinned food, batteries etc. Cement output, 1970, from the country's 3 plants was 458,000 metric tons.

ELECTRICITY. In 1969, total working potential of hydraulic and thermal plants was 269,000 kw. Estimated output in 1969 was 850,000 kwh.

Exports (f.o.b.)	210.7	196.1	232.8	217.0	279.8

Of the total exports in 1969 (and 1970) the largest items were: Bananas, $107.1m. ($122.8m.); coffee, $26.6m. ($50.5m.); cocoa, $24.5m. ($22.3m.). Other exports include sugar, castor-oil seed, pharmaceuticals, toquilla straw ('Panama') hats, balsa wood, rice, pyrethrum and fish products.

USA furnished 35% of imports in 1970 and took 43% of the exports.

Total trade between Ecuador and UK (in £1,000 sterling, British Board of Trade returns):

	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	399	588	711	1,060	2,250
Exports and re-exports from UK	4,154	7,027	6,074	7,399	11,822

SHIPPING. Ecuador has 7 seaports, of which Guayaquil is the chief. The merchant navy comprises 39,964 tons of seagoing and 21,232 tons of river craft. In 1970 ships totalling 8.88m. GRT entered Ecuadorean ports, unloading 1.52m. tons, and loading 1.77m. tons.

There is river communication, improved by dredging, throughout the principal agricultural districts on the low ground to the west of the Cordillera by the rivers Guayas, Daule and Vinces (navigable for 200 miles by river steamers in the rainy season).

ROADS. There are 17,195 km of roads of all types in this mountainous country, but most are narrow and subject to landslides. A trunk highway through the coastal plain is under construction which will link Machala in the extreme south-west with Esmeraldas in the north-west and with Quito and the northern section of the Pan-American Highway.

In 1969 there were 26,091 passenger cars, 26,064 commercial vehicles and 3,673 buses.

RAILWAYS. A railway is open from Durán (opposite Guayaquil) to Quito (288 miles). The Quito-San Lorenzo railway was officially opened in Aug. 1957. The total length of the Ecuadorean State Railways in operation is over 990 km. Modernization of the Durán-Quito section was in progress in 1971.

AVIATION. The following international lines operate: Air France, Avianca, Braniff, Ecuatoriana de Aviación, KLM, Lufthansa, Iberia, LAN Chile, and Aerovías Peruanas. They connect Quito with Panama, Bogotá (Colombia), Guayaquil, New York and Europe. All the leading towns are connected by an almost daily service, but landing fields are small.

POST. Quito is connected by telegraph with Colombia and Peru, and by cable with the rest of the world. The main towns in the country are connected by radio-telephone. There are over 300 radio stations.

In 1971 there were 95,000 telephones in use, 45,000 in Quito and 39,000 in Guayaquil; all were operated by the Government; 98% were automatic. Television was inaugurated in 1960 in Guayaquil, in 1961 in Quito and in 1967 in Cuenca.

BANKING. The Central Bank of Ecuador, at Quito, with a capital of 20m. sucres, is modelled after the Federal Reserve Banks of US: through branches opened in 12 towns it now deals in mortgage bonds. On 31 July 1970 the Central Bank had gold and foreign-exchange reserves worth US$62m. Banks must hold cash equal to 21% of sight, short-term and savings deposits.

All commercial banks must be affiliated to the Central Bank; the commercial banks, 31 Oct. 1967, had capital and reserves of 463m. sucres and total assets of 4,536m. sucres. In circulation, Feb. 1968, 3,188m. sucres.

The Bank of London and Montreal, Ltd, has branches in Quito and Guayaquil.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. By a law of 6 Dec. 1856 the metric system was made the legal standard but the Spanish measures are in general use. The quintal is equivalent to 101.4 lb.

The meridian of Quito has been adopted as the official time.

ARAB REPUBLIC OF EGYPT

HISTORY. On 1 Feb. 1958 President Nasser of Egypt and President Kuwatly of Syria proclaimed in Cairo the union of their countries, under one head of state, with a common legislature, a unified army and one flag.

On 8 March the Kingdom of Yemen federated with the United Arab Republic under the name of the United Arab States.

On 26-28 Sept. 1961 Syria broke away and resumed its independence. President Nasser accepted the situation on 29 Sept.

On 26 Dec. 1961 Egypt also declared the union with Yemen terminated; but in Nov. 1962 concluded a defence pact with the republican régime.

On 13 Aug. 1964 the UAR, Iraq, Kuwait, Jordan and Syria signed a document forming an Arab Common Market, which aims at the free movement of the currency and products of the member countries. The market was to come into being on 1 Jan. 1965, but this has not taken place.

A decision to bring about full political union between Egypt and Libya by 1 Sept. 1973 was announced on 2 Aug. 1972.

In Aug. 1973 it was agreed by Egypt and Libya that the merger should nominally come into force but that each country should remain independent. Total union should take place over a period of time.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The constitution proclaimed by President Nasser on 25 March 1964 is to remain in force until the permanent constitution, to be drawn up by the National Assembly, has been ratified by a plebiscite.

The constitution defines the UAR as 'a democratic socialist state' and the Egyptian people as 'part of the Arab nation'; with Islam as a state religion and Arabic as the official language. The national economy is directed by the state; the 3 sectors of state, co-operative and private ownership are supervised and controlled by the people. 'Freedom of belief is absolute; freedom of the press, printing and publication is guaranteed within the limits of the law'. Public education is free at all stages.

The National Assembly is elected by universal suffrage and has 360 members; the President of the Republic may appoint up to 10 additional members. The President of the Republic is nominated by the National Assembly and confirmed by plebiscite for a 6-year term. He is the supreme commander of the armed forces and presides over the defence council.

President of the Republic: Anwar Sadat (sworn in on 17 Oct. 1970).

On 26 March 1973 President Sadat assumed the post of Prime Minister and announced a new cabinet of 12 members. The former Prime Minister Dr. Aziz Sidky and Sayed Mariei, former political party chairman, became personal assistants to the Prime Minister and members of the cabinet.

The constitution is supplemented by the Charter of 21 May 1962, which sketches the principles and aims of the regime since the overthrow of the monarchy on 23 July 1952; and by the Statute of the Arab Socialist Union of 7 Dec. 1962. This organization has been created as 'the socialist vanguard' for safeguarding and furthering the 'socialist revolution' on all levels of local, district and national administration.

National flag: Red, white, black (horizontal), with 2 green 5-pointed stars in the white stripe.

AREA AND POPULATION. The total area of Egypt is about 386,198 sq. miles (1m. sq. km), but the cultivated and settled area, that is, the Nile valley, delta and oases, covers only about 13,500 sq. miles (35,500 sq. km). Canals, roads, date plantations, etc., cover 1,900 sq. miles; 2,850 sq. miles constitute the surface of the Nile, marshes and lakes. Egypt is divided into two districts—'Wagh-el-Bahari', Lower Egypt, and 'El-Saïd', Upper Egypt.

In accordance with the armistice concluded with Israel on 24 Feb. 1949 the Egyptian Forces hold a coastal strip in south-west Palestine, covering an area of 258 sq. km and including the town of Gaza and the railway junction of Rafah.

The following table gives the area of the settled land surface, and the results of the census taken in 1966:

There are in Egypt large numbers of native Christians connected with the various Oriental Churches; of these, the largest and most influential are the Copts, who adopted Christianity in the 1st century. Their head is the Coptic Patriarch. There are 25 metropolitans and bishops in Egypt; 4 metropolitans for Ethiopia, Jerusalem, Khartoum and Omdurman, and 12 bishops in Ethiopia. Priests must be married before ordination, but celibacy is imposed on monks and high dignitaries. The Copts use the Diocletian (or Martyrs') calendar, which begins in A.D. 284.

EDUCATION. Education was made compulsory for all children between the ages of 6 and 12 in 1933; primary education (6 years) was made free in 1944, secondary and technical education in 1950. Compulsory education is provided in primary schools (6 years).

HEALTH. In 1966 there were about 6,000 doctors and (1970) 70,932 hospital beds.

JUSTICE. The national courts, established in 1883, consist of 165 summary tribunals and of 14 judicial delegations, each presided over by a single judge, with civil jurisdiction in matters up to £E250 in value, and criminal jurisdiction in offences punishable by fine or by imprisonment up to 3 years (i.e., police offences and misdemeanours), except in cases relating to the trafficking in narcotics, where the period rises up to perpetual hard labour and a fine not exceeding £E10,000. There are also 19 central tribunals, each of the chambers of which is also (since 1959) presided over by a single judge; and 5 courts of appeal each consisting of 3 judges. Civil cases not within the competence of the summary tribunals are heard in first instance by the central tribunals, with an appeal to one of the courts of appeal. The central tribunals also hear civil and criminal appeals from the summary tribunals. Serious crimes, trafficking in narcotics and Press offences are tried at the central tribunals by 3 judges of the court of appeal sitting as an assize court, assizes being held monthly.

In 1931 a court of cassation above the courts of appeal was set up. It is composed of a president, 4 deputy presidents and 36 judges and divided into 3 chambers, one for criminal, one for civil and commercial and one for personal law.

There is also an administrative court, created in 1946 at the Conseil d'Etat; it is composed of 3 judges, or of 5 in cases when the validity of administrative regulations is contested.

All religious courts, Moslem as well as non-Moslem, were abolished by decree of 21 Sept. 1955, effective from Jan. 1956.

FINANCE. Currency. By decree of 18 Oct. 1916 (20 Zi-El-Higga 1934), the monetary unit of Egypt is the gold Egyptian pound of 100 piastres of 1,000 millièmes. Coins in circulation are 20, 10, 5, 2 piastres (silver); 2, 1 piastre, 5 millièmes, 1 millième (bronze). Gold coins are no longer in circulation. Silver coin is legal tender only up to £E2, and bronze coins up to 10 piastres. The Treasury issues 5- and 10-piastre currency notes. Bank-notes are issued by the National Bank in denominations of 5, 10, 25 and 50 piastres, £E1, 5 and 10.

Budget. Ordinary revenue and expenditure for fiscal years ending 30 June, in £E1,000:

	1965-66	1966-67	1967-68	1968-69	1969-70 ¹
Revenue	1,205,000	1,309,200	1,176,000		1,661,855
Expenditures	1,206,018	1,316,225	1,217,000	..	1,661,855

DEFENCE. At the outbreak of the 4th Arab-Israeli war the total strength of the defence forces was about 298,000. There was also a national guard of about 100,000.

Army. Service in the Army is compulsory for all male citizens at the age of 18. The Army comprised (Oct. 1973) 2 armoured divisions, 3 mechanized infantry divisions, 5 infantry divisions, 2 independent armoured and 2 independent brigades, a parachute brigade an airborne brigade, 6 artillery brigades and 20 commando battalions. Its tank strength (Oct. 1973) was about 2,000. Total strength is about 260,000 men; reserves totalled, 500,000.

Navy. There are 12 submarines, 5 destroyers, 4 old frigates, 1 corvette (ex-fleet minesweeper), 6 fleet minesweepers, 4 coastal minesweepers, 2 inshore minesweepers, 36 torpedo boats, 18 missile boats, 12 submarine chasers, 14 landing craft and 4 tugs. Naval personnel in 1973: 14,500 officers and men.

Air Force. The Air Force is equipped largely with aircraft of Soviet design and has a strength of about 25,000 personnel and at least 600 combat and transport aircraft. About 20 Tu-16 twin-jet strategic bombers, equipped to carry 'Kelt' air-to-surface missiles and bearing UAR insignia, are believed to be flown mainly by Soviet crews. The main strike force consists of about 120 Su-7B an variable-geometry Su-20 supersonic fighter-bombers. Other fighter divisions are equipped with more than 200 MiG-21s and 200 MiG-17s, operating in conjunction with many 'Guideline', 'Goa' and 'Gainful' missile batteries. Transport units have an estimated 20 An-12 turboprop heavy freighters, 30 Il-14 twin-engined transports, a few An-24s and up to 200 Mi-4, Mi-6, Mi-8 and Sea King/Commando helicopters. Training units are equipped with Yak-11 and Yak-18 piston-engined trainers, locally-built Hispano HA-200 and Czech-built L-29 Delfin jet trainers and single seat and two-seat versions of the MiG-15. Strong Soviet air force units are based in Egypt.

PLANNING. A 'permanent council of national production' was established in 1952.

The 10-year development plan 1973-83 envisages an initial investment by the public and private sectors of £E8,400m.

In 1961-62 a number of sweeping socialist measures were carried out, which contributed largely to the Syrian defection in Sept. 1961. In addition to the nationalization of banks, insurance companies, etc. (see below under BANKING), about 1,000 private businessmen had their property confiscated by Jan. 1962. In 1963 complete nationalization was enforced of all cotton exporting and ginning firms, pharmaceutical factories and some 400 other companies in which the state had previously held a half-share. Share owners were compensated by government bonds redeemable over 15 years at 4% interest.

AGRICULTURE. Rain seldom falls in Upper Egypt, and only at irregular intervals in Cairo, where the average for the year is no more than 1.2 in. At Alexandria the average is 8 in.

The cultivated area of Egypt proper was estimated in 1970 at 10.75m. feddâns (1 feddân = 1.038 acres), and of this 4,835,000 feddâns were under winter crops, 5,053,000 under summer crops and 618,000 under Nile crops.

The Agricultural Reform Decree of Sept. 1952 limits agricultural ownership to 200 feddâns, reduced to 100 feddâns in July 1961. Foreigners were debarred in 1963 from owning any land. Holdings in excess of this limit will be redistributed; compensation, equivalent to 10 times the rental value of the land, will take the form of 3% (from 1958: 1½%) bonds redeemable within 30 years (from 1958: 40 years). All national waqfs are to be dissolved.

Irrigation occupies a predominant place in the economic development of the country. The Aswân reservoir can now hold up to 5,500m. cu. metres of water, and the Gebel Aulia reservoir, completed in 1937, holds 2,000m. cu. metres. Barrages have been erected at Esna, Nag' Hammâdi, Asyût and Zifta, and at the bifurcation of the Nile below Cairo. Nag' Hammâdi barrage, completed in 1930, ensures full basin supplies even in low flood to Girga province, and will facilitate perennial irrigation when basin lands are converted. Asyût barrage, having been remodelled, will meet the greater demands of the area it now commands. The Esna barrage now secures basin irrigation to lands in Qena province. New barrages (Mohamed Ali barrages) have been completed at the bifurcation of the Nile below Cairo to replace the existing structures which, built in 1861, are now unable to meet the conditions following the increase in summer supplies, the reclamation of large areas of waste lands and the earlier watering of food crops.

On 8 Nov. 1959 the United Arab Republic and Sudan concluded agreements on the sharing of the Nile waters (after construction of the Aswân High Dam), and trade, payments and Customs dues. The agreement provides that from the time the High Dam starts to store water (15 May 1964) Sudan will be entitled to 18,500m. cu. metres of the total annual flow, instead of 4,000m., and Egypt to 55,500m., compared with the present 48,000m. Egypt is to pay £E15m. to meet the cost of providing new homes and lands for between 60,000 and 70,000 Sudanese living in Wadi Halfa and other areas which will be inundated by the waters.

The area and production of raw cotton for crop years ending 31 Aug. were:

	Area in 1,000 feddâns	Crop in 1,000 qantârs		Area in 1,000 feddâns	Crop in 1,000 qantârs
1959	1,760	10,175	1963	1,627	8,334

1962	1,657	8,479	1970	1,627	8,914

In 1970 the area and yield (both in 1,000) of wheat were, 1,305 feddâns and 10,109 ardebs; barley, 83 feddâns and 694 ardebs; beans, 330 feddâns and 1,790 ardebs; lentils, 47 feddâns and 208 ardebs; onions, 34 feddâns and 9,707 qantârs; maize, 351 feddâns and 17,096 ardebs; millet, 465 feddâns and 6,243 ardebs; sugar-cane, 186 feddâns and 154,333 qantârs.

The rice crop (in 1m. metric tons): 1.7 in 1962, 2.6 in 1970.

Livestock, 1970: 1.63m. cows, 2m. buffaloes, 2,066,000 sheep, 1,155,000 goats, 127,000 camels and 15,000 pigs.

FISHERIES. The catch of the Egyptian sea, Nile and lake fisheries in 1957 amounted to 102,600 metric tons. In 1952 there were 48,947 men and 16,347 boys engaged in fishing and 11,739 boats used for fishing.

MINING. Production (in metric tons):

Phosphate rock	1,441,000	660,000	584,000	Salt, marine	622,000	385,000	376,000

Petroleum in commercial quantities was first discovered at Gemsah in 1908. Production is now obtained from fields at Ras Gharib, Asl, Sudr, Ghardaka, Ras Matarma, Firan, Balaim and Abu Kodis. Operations are carried on by Anglo-Egyptian Oilfields. A US company is jointly concerned in production in the Asl and Sudr fields.

In Sept. 1963 oil concessions were granted to Phillips Petroleum (37,500 sq. miles between Rosetta and the Libyan frontier) and Ente Nazionale Idrocarburi (in the Delta and along the Gulf of Suez); in Oct. 1963 the American International Oil Co. received a 30-year concession to explore 28,000 sq. miles south of Cairo and west of the Nile.

There are 4 oil refineries, at Suez (2), Mostorod and Alexandria. Crude oil production (in 1,000 cu. metres) was 2,613 in 1952; 9,890 in 1968; 14,245 in 1969; 16,388 in 1970.

INDUSTRY. The census of industrial production (1966) showed 875,000 persons engaged in 4,000 industrial establishments employing 10 or more persons. Total value of industrial production in 1963 was £E952.6m.

Production in 1962 of pig-iron was 99,770 metric tons; of steel ingots and castings, 149,655 metric tons.

Electricity generated in 1969 was 7,316m. kw.

TOURISM. In 1971, 428,000 foreigners visited Egypt.

LABOUR. A comprehensive labour code was issued in April 1959. It applies to all categories of workers, including agricultural workers, encourages the formation of trade unions, organizes conciliation and arbitration procedures (strikes and lock-outs being forbidden) and provides for an 8-hour working day and paid holidays.

In 1959 a Labour Stability and Social Insurance Code revised the legislation of 1955 and set up a Social Insurance Institution with regional and local branch offices. It covers employment injuries, old age, invalidity benefits.

Trade unions were first recognized in 1942. In 1952 the acts concerning trade unions, individual contracts, and conciliation and arbitration were recast. Employment exchanges and unemployment statistics were introduced in 1953. Social insurance was enacted in 1955.

COMMERCE. Imports and exports for 6 years (in £E1,000):

SHIPPING. The Egyptian merchant navy in 1966 consisted of 37 steamers of 291,000 tons and 2 sailing ships of 930 tons each.

In 1959, excluding warships and vessels requisitioned by the military authorities, 38,998 steamers of 249,217 NRT entered at, and 38,993 steamers of 249,073 NRT departed from, all the Egyptian ports.

Suez Canal. The Suez Canal was opened for navigation on 17 Nov. 1869. By the convention of Constantinople of 29 Oct. 1888 the canal is open to vessels of all nations and is free from blockade, except in time of war, but the UAR Government does not allow Israeli ships to use the canal. It is 101 miles long (excluding 7 miles of approach channels to the harbours), connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea. Its minimum width is 197 ft at a depth of 33 ft, and its depth permits the passage of vessels up to 38 ft draught; this was to have been widened and deepened with the help of a Kuwait loan, so as to enable the Canal to take tankers of 110,000 tons by 1972.

On 26 July 1956 President Nasser proclaimed the nationalization of the Suez Canal Company, the concession of which was to expire on 17 Nov. 1968. The shareholders of the Suez Canal Company received £28m. compensation; the final instalment was paid in Jan. 1963. The Company, now the Suez Financial Company, continues as an investment trust.

On 22 Dec. 1959 the World Bank granted Egypt a loan of US$56.5m. for the deepening, widening and general improvement of the Canal and Port Said harbour. The interest of the loan is 6%; amortization will extend over 15 years.

The number and net tonnage of vessels that have passed through the Suez Canal (including warships), and the transit receipts (in £Elm.), have been as follows:

	No. of transits	Suez net tonnage	Receipts		No. of transits	Suez net tonnage	Receipts
1961	18,148	187,059,000	52	1964	19,943	227,991,000	78
1963	19,146	210,498,000	71	1966	21,250	274,466,000	..

Vessels passing through the Suez Canal in 1965 included 3,693 British, 2,273 Liberian, 2,110 Norwegian, 1,331 Greek, 1,307 Italian, 1,186 French, 1,216 USSR, 967 USA, 944 German, 931 Dutch, 600 Panamanian, 493 Swedish, 458 Danish, 139 UAR.

The number of passengers who went through the canal was, in 1952, 571,416; 1955, 520,774; 1956 (Jan.-Oct.), 319,798; 1957 (April-Dec.), 188,361; 1958, 342,404; 1961, 323,000; 1962, 270,000; 1963, 298,000; 1964, 270,000; 1965, 286,000.

The total rates payable by all ships were raised as from 29 June 1964 so as to provide an extra $3.45m. revenue.

During the war with Israel in June 1967 the UAR blocked the Canal, which has since been unusable.

RAILWAYS. In 1969 there were 4,510 km of state railways. The state railways have a gauge of 4 ft 8½ in. inside rails, except that to the Western Oases, which is 2 ft 5½ in.

In 1968 the railways ran 5,512m. passenger-km and 3,000m. ton-km.

ROADS. Egypt had 22,142 km of macadamized surface roads in 1969. Motor vehicles, as at 31 Dec. 1959: 57,296 private cars, 10,143 taxis, 16,225 trucks, 3,894 buses.

AVIATION. There are 5 international aerodromes: Cairo, Alexandria, Luxor, Aswan and Mersa Matruh. The national airline 'The United Arab Airlines' has a fleet of 20 aircraft. The UAA operates scheduled flights connecting Cairo with Athens, Rome, Frankfurt, Geneva, Zürich, London, Khartoum, Asmara, Aden, Jeddah, Doha, Dharan, Kuwait, Beirut, Jerusalem, Baghdad and Tripoli. In addition, the United Arab Airlines operates scheduled flights on a widespread domestic network connecting Cairo with Port Said, Mersa Matruh, Assiout, Luxor, Aswân.

In 1966 United Arab Airlines flew 733m. passenger-km and 6.96m. ton-km.

POST. The telephone service was taken over by the Egyptian Government in April 1918. In 1958-59 the state telegraphs had a length of 15,381 km of wire, and telephones, 1,076,159 km. There were, in 1963, 1,319 government and 1,378 private post offices. Number of telephones in 1969, 365,000. Number of wireless licences in 1964, 864,000.

The internal telecommunications system is owned and operated by the Telecommunications Organization. Government landlines connect with those of the Gaza sector and the Sudan.

BANKING. On 18 Aug. 1960 a Central Bank of Egypt was established by decree. It manages the note issue, the Government's banking operations and the control of commercial banks. At the same date the National Bank founded in 1898 ceased to be the central bank and became a purely commercial bank. The position of the bank in June 1967 was (in £E1m.): Foreign assets and gold, 37·6; government securities and treasury bills, 40·5; notes issued, 441; advances and bills discounted, 270·6; clearing and other accounts, 35·4. Liabilities, government deposits, 4·5; bankers' deposits, 124·5; other deposits, 153·1; clearing and other accounts, 118·7.

In 1901 a post office savings bank was opened; on 31 Dec. 1959 the total deposits amounted to £E38·6m.

Commercial banks in Egypt numbered 27 in Dec. 1959, including 16 Egyptian joint-stock companies (of which by far the most important are Bank Misr and Bank of Alexandria), the rest being branches of foreign banks. On 15 Jan. 1957 all English and French banks and insurance companies were nationalized. All banks and insurance companies must now be limited-liability companies with a paid-up capital of not less than £E500,000 for banks and £E100,000 for insurance companies; all shareholders, directors and managers must be Egyptian nationals.

The Bank el Goumhouria subsequently took over the Ottoman Bank and the Ionian Bank; the Bank of Cairo took control of the Crédit Lyonnais and the Comptoir National d'Escompte de Paris; the Bank of Alexandria was established to take over the 40 branches of Barclays Bank International, and the Banque de l'Union Commerciale took over the Crédit d'Orient.

Other banks in Egypt include the Crédit Foncier Egyptien (founded in 1880) and the Land Bank of Egypt (1905), both for mortgage lending, the Crédit Agricole et Coopératif (1931), the Crédit Hypothécaire d'Egypte (1932) and the Industrial Bank (1949). The National Bank and the Bank Misr were nationalized on 11 Feb. 1960.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. In 1951 the metric system was made official with the exception of the feddân and its subdivisions.

CAPACITY. Kadah = 1/96th ardeb = 3·63 pints. Rob = 4 kadahs = 1·815 gallons. Keila = 8 kadahs = 3·63 gallons. Ardeb = 96 kadahs = 43·555 gallons, or 5·44439 bu., or 198 cu. decimetres.

WEIGHTS. Rotl = 144 dirhems = 0·9905 lb. Oke = 400 dirhems = 2·75137 lb. Qantâr or 100 rotls or 36 okes = 99·0493 lb. 1 Qantâr of unginned cotton = 315 lb. 1 Qantâr of ginned cotton = 99·05 lb. The approximate weight of the ardeb is as follows: Wheat, 150 kg; beans, 155 kg; barley, 120 kg; maize, 140 kg; cotton seed, 121 kg.

SURFACE. Feddân, the unit of measure for land = 4,200·8 sq. metres = 7,468·148 sq. pics = 1·03805 acres. 1 sq. pic = 6·0547 sq. ft = 0·5625 sq. metre.

EL SALVADOR

República de El Salvador

HISTORY. In 1839 the Central American Federation, which had comprised the states of Guatemala, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica, was dissolved, and El Salvador declared itself formally an independent republic in 1841. There have since been a number of attempts to restore some looser form of Central American unity, the latest being the founding in 1951 of the Organization of Central American States (with Secretariat in San Salvador) and the Central American Common Market.

AREA AND POPULATION. El Salvador is the smallest and most densely populated of the Central American states. Its area (including 247 sq. km of inland lakes) is estimated at 21,393 sq. km (8,236 sq. miles), with population (census 1 May 1961) of 2,510,984 (estimate, 1972, 3,685,000). The capital is San Salvador (380,000 inhabitants in 1972).

The republic is divided into 14 departments, each under an appointed governor. Their areas (in sq. km) and populations at 31 Dec. 1971 were:

Department	Area	Population	Department	Area	Population
Ahuachapán	1,222.32	177,509	La Paz	1,201.85	187,371
Santa Ana	1,988.26	363,890	Cabañas	1,094.45	134,338
Sonsonate	1,189.28	231,909	San Vicente	1,206.69	155,389

There has been considerable emigration into nearby states. There are no tribal Indians. The language of the country is Spanish.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The latest Constitution was enacted in Jan. 1962, slightly amending that of 1950. The Executive Power is vested in a President elected for a non-renewable term of 5 years, with Ministers and Under-Secretaries appointed by him. The Legislative power is an Assembly of 52 members elected by universal suffrage and proportional representation for a term of 2 years. The judicial power is vested in a Supreme Court, of a President and 9 magistrates elected by the Legislative Assembly for renewable terms of 3 years; and subordinate courts.

A new Partido de Conciliación Nacional won all the seats of a new Assembly elected on 17 Dec. 1961. Its president, Dr Eusebio Córdón, was elected Provisional President of the Republic when it promulgated the new Constitution on 25 Jan. 1962. In Presidential elections on 29 April, Col. J. A. Rivera was returned without opposition and held office 1962-67. The elections of 13 March 1966 resulted in 31 Partido de Conciliación Nacional being elected against the opposition Partido Demócrata Cristiano (15) and various minor parties (6).

At the elections held 20 Feb. 1972 Col. Arturo Armando Molina, of the ruling Partido de Conciliación Nacional, was elected President.

President: Col. Arturo Armando Molina, assumed office 1 July 1972 for 5 years.

National flag: Blue, white, blue (horizontal): the white stripe charged with the arms of the republic.

National anthem: Saludemos la patria orgullosos (words by J. J. Cañas; tune by J. Aberle).

RELIGION. The dominant religion is Roman Catholicism. Under the 1962 constitution churches are exempted from the property tax; the Catholic Church is recognized as a legal person, and other churches are entitled to secure similar recognition. There is an archbishop in San Salvador and bishops at Santa Ana, San Miguel, San Vicente, Santiago de María and Usulután.

EDUCATION. Education is free and obligatory. In 1929 the State took over control of all schools, public and private, but the provision that the teaching in government schools must be wholly secular was removed in 1945.

In Dec. 1970 there were 2,892 (2,937 in 1972) primary schools (state, municipal and private), with 531,309 (562,354 in 1972) pupils and 14,193 teachers. Secondary education was given at 860 schools (86,853 pupils). The national university (in 1973) had 21,947 students and the Catholic University had 9,850 students.

CINEMAS (1970). Cinemas numbered 57.

NEWSPAPERS (1970). There are 4 daily newspapers in San Salvador and 1 each in Santa Ana and San Miguel.

SOCIAL WELFARE. The Social Security Institute now administers the sickness, old age and death insurance, covering industrial workers and employees earning up to ₡700 a month. Employees in other private institutions with salaries over this amount are included but are excluded from the medical and hospital benefits.

JUSTICE. Justice is administered by the Supreme Court of Justice, courts of first and second instance, besides minor tribunals. Magistrates of the Supreme Court and courts of second instance are elected by the Legislative Assembly for a renewable 3-year term.

An anti-Communist law, effective 29 Sept. 1962, has made the propagation of totalitarian or Communist doctrines an offence punishable by imprisonment; supplementary offences, contrary to democratic principles, are punished by prison terms of from 3 to 7 years.

FINANCE. Currency. The monetary unit is the colón of 100 centavos. Its exchange value since July 1934 had been kept at 40 cents US, and on 30 June 1942 the bank's gold stock was revalued, making it exactly equal to the exchange value of 40 cents. The country left the gold standard on 9 Oct. 1931. On 20 April 1961 exchange control was introduced to prevent the transfer of capital abroad. This control has since been extended to limit the length of credit on the import of consumer goods. The buying/selling rate for the £ is 6 and 6.06 colones respectively.

The colón is issued in denominations of 1, 2, 5, 10, 25 and 100 colones; 25 and 50 centavos (silver); 1, 2, 3, 5, 10 and 25 centavos (copper-nickel and copper-zinc).

Money in circulation (including sight deposits) was 351.6m. colones on 31 March 1972.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure for fiscal years ending 31 Dec., in 1,000 colones (2.5 colones = US$1):

External debt amounted to 231.7m. colones and internal debt to 97.5m. colones on 31 Dec. 1970.

DEFENCE. The Army is organized in 3 territorial divisions of 5 infantry, 2 artillery and 1 cavalry regiments. Total strength, 4,500 men. There are also the National Guard, the National Police and the Treasury Police.

In Oct. 1954 the US agreed to send a military mission to train the defence forces.

The Navy consists of 2 patrol boats and 3 other small craft. Personnel total 130 officers and men.

The small Air Force, which came into being in the early 1920s, is equipped with aircraft supplied by the USA. They include 4 modernized Cavalier F-51D Mustang piston-engined fighter-bombers, a transport flight equipped with C-47s and a Canadair DC-4M, a single Fairchild Hiller FH-1100 light observation helicopter, and a few Beech T-34 and AT-34 and AT-11 piston-engined trainers.

AGRICULTURE. El Salvador is predominantly agricultural; 32.5% of its total area is used for crops and 30.2% for pasture. Area devoted to coffee is about 308,000 acres, almost entirely owned by nationals.

Rice is important for home consumption; other agricultural products are maize (6m. quintals in 1969-70), cacao, tobacco, indigo, henequén and sugar (3.4m. quintals in 1970-71). A little rubber is exported.

Livestock estimate 1950 showed 114,556 horses, 35,435 mules; and in 1966: 1,288,050 cattle, 1,669,540 pigs, 215,000 sheep, 39,000 goats. Milk production in 1964 was estimated to be 233.4m. litres.

FORESTRY. In the national forests are found dye woods and such woods as mahogany, cedar and walnut. Balsam trees also abound; El Salvador is the world's principal source of this medicinal gum; exports, 1965, 144 metric tons.

MINING. The mineral output of the republic is now negligible, but the Ministry of Public Works has recently started to investigate 2 new silver mines in the department of Morazán. Production of petrol lubricants and other petroleum derivatives during 1970 totalled C$15.8m.

INDUSTRY. Total production was valued at C$550.2m. in 1972, which included: Footwear and clothing, C$61.3m; textiles, C$70.2m.; food, C$157.7m.; chemicals, C$42m.

ELECTRICITY. El Salvador's biggest national enterprise, begun in 1950, is the construction of a 200-ft high dam across the (unnavigable) Lempa River, 35 miles north-east of San Salvador, designed to double the country's electric-power resources, from 31,000 to 78,000 kw. Production in 1971, 735.4m. kwh.; consumption, 637.5m. kwh.

LABOUR. A decree of Aug. 1950 permits the formation of trade unions except among agricultural workers and those engaged in seasonal work such as coffee-milling and sugar-refining; trade-union posts must be filled by natives, not foreigners.

COMMERCE. The imports (including parcels post) and exports have been as follows in calendar years in 1,000 colones (2.5 colones = US$):

Imports	559,800	535,200	537,600	533,900	619,500	691,400
Exports	518,100	531,300	506,200	571,000	569,500	694,000

Of total exports, coffee furnishes about 20% by weight and 51% by value. The coffee is of the 'mild' variety; it is sold in bags of 46 kg, but trade statistics use a bag of 69 kg. Exports in 1966 were 97,000 metric tons (valued at 227m. colones), of which 45% went to West Germany and 43% to USA.

In 1970 US took 122.3m. colones of exports and furnished 157.5m. colones of the imports. The chief imports are normally wheat, flour, fuel-oil, fertilizers, machinery, vehicles and iron and steel manufactures. The other Central American Republics, West Germany, Japan, the Netherlands and the UK are also important trading partners.

Total trade between El Salvador and UK (British Board of Trade returns) for 5 years (in £1,000 sterling):

Imports to UK	172	340	247	1,234	297
Exports and re-exports from UK	1,780	2,338	2,947	3,762	3,393

SHIPPING. The principal ports are La Unión, La Libertad and Acajutla, all on the Pacific. Passengers (and some freight) use the Guatemalan port of Puerto Barrios on the Atlantic, reaching El Salvador by rail or road.

RAILWAYS. A railway connects the port of Acajutla with Santa Ana, Sonsonate and San Salvador, the capital. It links San Salvador with the American-owned International Railways of Central America, which runs from the eastern to the western boundary of El Salvador, and extends into Guatemala City and Puerto Barrios on the north coast and on the Mexican border. Total length of railway open, about 459 miles, all of narrow gauge.

ROADS. In 1971 there were 10,733 km of national roads in the republic, including 1,243 km of paved road; 4,868 km are usable all the year round and 4,622 only in the dry season. Motor vehicles registered, 1969, 63,949.

AVIATION. International air traffic is expanding and in 1972 there were 80 flights a week. There is a modern airport at Ilopango, 5 miles from San Salvador, equipped to handle jet aeroplanes.

POST. The telephone and telegraph systems are government-owned; the radio-telephone systems are partly private, partly government-owned. Telephone instruments, 1971, 40,115. Two radio transmitting and receiving stations at San Salvador maintain communications with Latin America. El Salvador has, 1965, over 500,000 wireless receiving sets. In 1973, there were 3 commercial television channels and 2 educational channels sponsored by the Ministry of Education.

BANKING. There are 6 native commercial banks, including the Banco Salvadoreño (paid-up capital, 6m. colones). The Bank of London and Montreal and the First National City Bank of New York are the only foreign institutions. The Central Reserve Bank of El Salvador, constructed in 1934 out of the Banco Agrícola Comercial, was nationalized on 20 April 1961. Bank deposits, both term and sight, were 567m. colones in 1972. Total gold and dollar reserves of the Banco Central on 30 June 1966 were 136.5m. colones compared with 166.99m. in March 1972. A stock exchange was officially inaugurated in Oct. 1962 with the declared intention of promoting investments in Central America; it began operations on 17 Aug. 1964 with a capital of 100,000 colones subscribed by 360 shareholders. Its activities have been limited.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. On 1 Jan. 1886 the metric system was made obligatory. But other units are still commonly in use, of which the principal are as follows: Libra = 1.014 lb. av.; quintal = 101.4 lb. av.; arroba = 25.35 lb. av.; fanega = 1.5745 bushels.

EQUATORIAL GUINEA

República de Guinea Ecuatorial

HISTORY. The Republic of Equatorial Guinea became independent on 12 Oct. 1968 after having been a Spanish colony (Territorios Españoles del Golfo de Guinea) until 1959. From 1959 to 1963 the territory was made into two Spanish provinces with a status comparable to the metropolitan provinces. From 1964 to 1968 this Equatorial Region became an autonomous entity still retaining the status of two Spanish provinces, but with a certain amount of internal self-government. A cabinet of 8 African members headed by a President of the Government Council was responsible for internal affairs, defence and foreign affairs remaining reserved to a Spanish High Commissioner. Serious political disturbances in Rio Muni occurred in March–April 1969. This led to the partial withdrawal of the Spanish community since when UN agencies have supplied personnel to man hospitals, public utilities and ministries. Agreement for co-operation in education and economic development were signed with Spain in 1971 and 1972. The Republic still depends heavily on Spanish economic aid.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. Following the referendum of 11 Aug. and the elections of 22 and 29 Sept. 1968, Equatorial Guinea has become a sovereign state consisting of two provinces. The Republic is administered by a President who is chief of the armed forces and head of government.

The Assembly consists of 35 representatives (Fernando Poo, 12; Rio Muni, 19; Annobón, 2; Corisco, Elobey Grande, Elobey Chico, 2), elected by universal, direct and secret ballot. The President of the Republic and the Assembly are elected for a 5-year period but the first President was appointed for life on 14 July 1972. There is a cabinet of 9 ministers. A new Constitution was adopted in July 1973.

Life President and Minister of Defence and Foreign Affairs: Francisco Macías Nguema (Fang of Rio Muni).

Vice-President and Minister of Trade: Edmundo Bosio Dioco (Bubi of Fernando Poo).

AREA AND POPULATION. The total area is 28,051 sq. km (9,828 sq. miles). Total population, 245,989 (1960 census); 1968 estimate, 300,000.

The republic consists of 2 provinces: (1) the continental Rio Muni (26,017 sq. km including the adjacent islets of Corisco, Elobey Grande and Elobey Chico which cover 17 sq. km). The administrative and economic capital is Bata (3,548 inhabitants in 1960). Total population was 183,377, including 2,864 Europeans at the census of 1960; 1970 estimate, 290,000; (2) the island of Macías Nguema, formerly Fernando Poo (2,034 sq. km including Pigalu, formerly Annobón, 17 sq. km). The capital is Malabo, formerly Santa Isabel, which is also the capital of the Republic (19,869 inhabitants in 1960). Total population at the census of 1960 was 62,612 (including 1,415 for Pigalu), including 4,220 Europeans; 1968 estimate about 70,000–80,000 with a significant increase of Nigerian plantation workers, but there has been considerable withdrawal of Nigerian workers because of the deterioration of economic conditions since independence. New arrangements were negotiated in 1972 with Nigeria to recruit 15,000 Nigerian field workers for Macías Nguema.

The majority of the Rio Muni population is Fang (Pámues in Spanish). Along the coast and in the islets are the Combes, the Bengas, the Bujebas, etc.

In Macías Nguema the aborigines are called Bubis. They are now a minority (perhaps 15,000). Other ethnic groups are the Fernandinos (descendants of English-speaking Creoles), the Fangs, coast people from Rio Muni and naturalized migrant workers from Nigeria, Cameroun and São Tomé. A fluctuating mass of plantation workers were about twice as numerous as the Equatorial Guineans. Pigalu is peopled by descendants of slaves brought by the Portuguese; they still speak a Portuguese patois. Pidgin English is the lingua franca in Macías Nguema in spite of the official Spanish.

RELIGION. The population of Equatorial Guinea is nominally Roman Catholic (227,517 in 1966) with influential Protestant groups in Santa Isabel and Rio Muni.

EDUCATION. Elementary schools provide compulsory education up to 12 years and primary schools continue it to 14 years. There were in 1966, 147 elementary and 32 primary schools with 21,421 and 1,565 pupils respectively. There were 271 teachers (17 Europeans). Malabo and Bata had a secondary school each, with together 31 teachers and 936 pupils. Malabo had also an 'Escuela Superior provincial' with 100 students and a teacher-training school. Bata had a normal school and a technical secondary school. Less than 50 university students study abroad (mostly in Spain). In 1967 there were only about a dozen university graduates. A technical school is to be built with Spanish aid.

HEALTH. Equatorial Guinea had a fairly adequate health service with 2 large hospitals in Malabo and Bata. With the exception of 3 African doctors in 1967, doctors come from Spain and other countries. A leper hospital exists in Mico-meseng (200 beds with about 300 patients).

FINANCE. The budget for 1969–70 envisaged revenue of 712.5m. pesetas and expenditure of 1,139m. Spanish subsidies normally balance the budget. In July 1973 the Guinean peseta was redesignated the Ekpwele.

DEFENCE. The Guardia Nacional consisted mainly of Fang soldiers with Spanish officers of the Guardia Civil seconded to it. Total strength about 1,000. Since 1969 all Spanish troops have been repatriated.

The Spanish navy usually maintained 1 frigate, 1 corvette and 1 survey ship on the station at Pigalu.

AGRICULTURE AND FORESTRY. The chief products are cocoa (56,400 hectares in 1966), coffee (12,000 hectares) and wood. In 1970–71 production was about 30,000 metric tons of cocoa, most of it high-grade exported to Spain and the US. Coffee, of mediocre quality, is chiefly a Fang product. Production (1968) 8,450 metric tons.

Wood was almost entirely exported from Rio Muni to Spain and West Germany (337,438 metric tons to Spain in 1967). Plantations in the hinterland have been abandoned by their Spanish owners and except for cocoa, commercial agriculture is under serious difficulties because of the departure of Spanish and Portuguese management.

INDUSTRY. Macías Nguema has very few industries. Electricity production in 1967: Fernando Poo, 9.47m. kwh.; Rio Muni, 5.7m. kwh. Rio Muni has no industry except lumbering. In Macías Nguema a fish-processing industry is developing. Hopes based on the 4-year development plan (1964–68) have not materialized. Post-independence political conditions have not been conducive for private investment.

TRADE. In 1965 Equatorial Guinea exported 330,100 metric tons (value, 1,635.6m. pesetas; 1966, 1,817m.), of which 326,000 metric tons to Spain (value, 1,581.6m. pesetas). Because of the withdrawal of Spanish timber companies from Rio Muni wood exports have been nil in recent years. It imported 105,200 metric tons (value, 1,284.3m. pesetas; 1966, 1,278m.), of which 68,800 tons from Spain (value 750.1m. pesetas). Chief exports were: Cocoa, 720,514,700 pesetas; coffee, 348,730,200 pesetas; wood, 308,930,100 pesetas. Chief imports were rice (29,307,300 pesetas) and oil products (27,482,300 pesetas).

SHIPPING. Pigalu is the main port; 663 vessels entered and left in 1967. The other ports are Luba, formerly San Carlos (bananas, cocoa) in Macías Nguema and Bata, Puerto Iradier and Rio Benito (wood) in Rio Muni. A new harbour in Bata is being constructed. In 1966 in the 5 ports 141,600 metric tons were unloaded and 429,000 loaded.

ROADS. Macías Nguema has a good tarmac road network, but Rio Muni has few surfaced roads; the main artery is Rio Benito–Bata–Micomeseng–Ebebiyin.

AVIATION. An international airfield exists in Malabo (28,029 passengers in 1967). Bata has more modest facilities (15,031 passengers in 1967). The line Madrid–Malabo–Bata is subsidized by Spain. Links with Douala (from Santa Isabel) and Libreville (Gabon) exist.

POST. Estimated number of telephones (1969), 1,451.

BANKING. The Banco Central de Guinea Ecuatorial in Malabo was established in 1969 with Spanish technical and financial assistance.

British Ambassador: E. F. Given, CMG (resident in Yaoundé).

US Ambassador: C. Robert Moore (resident in Yaoundé).

ETHIOPIA

HISTORY. The ancient empire of Ethiopia has its legendary origin in the meeting of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. Historically, the empire developed in the centuries before and after the birth of Christ, at Aksum in the north, as a result of Semitic immigration from South Arabia. The immigrants imposed their language and culture on a basic Hamitic stock. Ethiopia's subsequent history is one of sporadic expansion southwards and eastwards, checked from the 16th to early 19th centuries by devastating wars with Moslems and Gallas. Modern Ethiopia dates from the reign of the Emperor Theodore (1855-68).

Menelik II (1889-1913) defeated the Italians in 1896 and thereby safeguarded the empire's independence in the scramble for Africa. By successful campaigns in neighbouring kingdoms within Ethiopia (Jimma, Kaffa, Harar, etc.) he united the country under his rule and created the Empire as it is today.

In 1936 Ethiopia was conquered by the Italians, who were in turn defeated by the Allied forces in 1941 when the Emperor returned.

The former Italian colony of Eritrea, from 1941 under British military administration, was in accordance with a resolution of the General Assembly of the United Nations, dated 2 Dec. 1950, handed over to Ethiopia on 15 Sept. 1952. Eritrea thereby became an autonomous unit within the federation of Ethiopia and Eritrea, under the Ethiopian Crown. This federation became a unitary state on 14 Nov. 1962 when Eritrea was fully integrated with Ethiopia.

EMPEROR. Hailé Selassié I, born 23 July 1892; crowned King (Negus), on 7 Oct. 1928, proclaimed Emperor, after the death of the Empress Zauditu, on 2 April 1930, and crowned on 2 Nov. 1930. He married in 1911 Menen, who died on 15 Feb. 1962. There are a son and a daughter surviving. On 25 Jan. 1931 the eldest son, Asfa Wossen, was proclaimed Crown Prince and heir to the throne. On 14 April 1974 the Emperor named his grandson, Prince Zare Yacob as Crown Prince in place of Prince Asfa Wossen.

National flag: Green, yellow, red (horizontal).

National anthem: Ityopya hoy dass yiballish (tune by M. K. Nalbandian, 1925).

GOVERNMENT. The Empire is governed by a Council of Ministers, responsible to the Emperor, and a parliament consisting of a Senate and a Chamber of Deputies. The Chamber of Deputies consists of 250 members; the number of Senators must not exceed half the number of Deputies.

In 1955 a new constitution was promulgated. This provides for universal suffrage for men and women over 21 years old, for greater fiscal control by the Chamber and for a limited degree of ministerial responsibility to parliament. Elections were held in 1957, 1961, 1965, 1969 and 1973.

Prime Minister and Foreign Affairs: Lij Endalakatchew Makonnen.

AREA AND POPULATION. The total area of the Empire is approximately 395,000 sq. miles or 1m. sq. km (Ethiopia 350,000, Eritrea, 45,000).

The official estimate of the population in 1971 was 24,319,000.

The most important race of Ethiopia, the Amhara, inhabit the central Ethiopian highlands. To the north of them are the Tigréans, akin to the Amhara and belonging to the same Christian church, but speaking a different, though related, language. Both these races are of mixed Hamitic and Semitic origin, and further mixed by inter-marriage with Galla and other races. The Gallas, some of whom are Christian, some Moslem and some pagan, comprise more than one-half of the entire population, and are a pastoral and agricultural people of Hamitic origin. Ogaden, Issa and other Somalis inhabit Harar province, the Somaliland plateau and the south-east. These and most of the Afar are Moslem. There are also Sidamo, Nilotic and Nilo-Hamitic tribes in the south-west, and the Falashas (of Jewish religion) north of Lake Tana.

Addis Ababa, the capital, has 795,900 inhabitants, Asmara (capital of Eritrea), 178,537; Dire Dawa, 50,733; Harar, 42,771; Dessie, 40,619; Gondar, 30,734; Jimma, 30,580.

The country is divided into 14 provinces (taqlai-gizat), each under a Governor-General, under the administrative control of the Minister of the Interior. Each province is divided into about 7 sub-provinces (awradja-gizat) under a Governor, 87 in 1962. All revenues collected in the provinces are under the control of the Minister of Finance.

The most populous provinces are Shoa (5·05m.), Harar (3,341,700), Wollo (3,119,700) and Tigré (2,307,300). All figures are estimates.

RELIGION. Since the conversion of the Amharas to Christianity in the 4th century they have retained their connexion with the Alexandrian Church through the Abuna, or Metropolitan, who was always an Egyptian Copt, and who was appointed and consecrated by the Coptic Patriarch of Alexandria. Both the Egyptian and Ethiopian Coptic Churches are monophysite, rejecting the decrees of the Council of Chalcedon (A.D. 451). After the restoration of the Emperor relations between the Ethiopian and Egyptian churches were strained until the summer of 1948, when an agreement was reached which envisaged the appointment of an Ethiopian Archbishop, and in Jan. 1951 Abuna Basilios (who died in 1970) was elected Archbishop of Ethiopia. A further agreement in 1959 made the Ethiopian Church autocephalous, and Basilios assumed the rank of Patriarch, with seniority immediately after the Patriarch of Alexandria. Abuna Theophilos was elected to the Patriarchate by an electoral college representing clergy, laity and Government and consecrated by the Ethiopian Archbishops in May 1971. The clergy is very numerous and the Church holds a considerable proportion of the land. Christianity is predominant in the following provinces in the north: Tigré, Begemdir, Gojjam, Shoa. Wollo province in the north-east is half Christian, half Moslem. In the southern half of the country the provinces of Harar and Arussi have Moslem majorities, while all the other southern provinces have considerable Moslem minorities. In addition, the province of Gamu Gofa on the Kenya border and parts of Sidamo and Arussi have considerable pagan elements. Eritrea is half Moslem and half Christian. Each province now forms a diocese.

Islam is widely practised in the south and east of the Empire. Moslem minorities are found in Addis Ababa and in other commercial centres. The rite is mainly shafeitic. Harar is the most important Moslem centre. There are mosques and government schools for Moslems in most towns.

EDUCATION. In the academic year 1970-71 there were more than 2,000 primary, secondary and church schools providing education for 790,812 pupils. Higher education is co-ordinated under the Hailé Selassié I University, chartered in 1961. The University College, the Engineering, Building and Theological Colleges are in Addis Ababa, the Agricultural College in Harar and the Public Health College in Gondar. It is intended to develop these provincial colleges into universities in their own right. The University of Asmara has 1,500 students. Altogether they provide tuition for about 5,000 students.

The main language of instruction from the secondary level upwards is English.

CINEMAS (1973). There were 9 cinemas in Addis Ababa and 7 in Asmara, with seating capacities of about 5,000 in each city, and about a dozen smaller cinemas in the provinces.

NEWSPAPERS. In Addis Ababa there is 1 English, 1 French and 1 Amharic dailies, and in Asmara 2 Italian dailies, 1 part-Tigrinya, part-Arabic, and 1 Amharic weekly. All the papers are government-controlled and have small circulations, varying between 2,000 and 20,000.

JUSTICE. The legal system is said to be based on the Justinian Code. A new penal code came into force in 1958. Codes of criminal procedure, civil, commercial and maritime codes have since been promulgated.

The extra-territorial rights formerly enjoyed by foreigners have been abolished, but any person accused in an Ethiopian court has the right to have his case transferred to the High Court, provided he asks for this before any evidence has been taken in the court of first instance.

Provincial and district courts have been established, and High Court judges visit the provincial courts on circuit. The Supreme Imperial Court at Addis Ababa is presided over by the Chief Justice.

Police. In 1948 the regular police force of the capital and some provincial cities was amalgamated with the irregular territorial forces under the provincial governors-general. The total force now numbers about 32,000 officers and other ranks.

FINANCE. Currency. The Ethiopian dollar, divided into 100 cents, is the unit of currency; it is based on 5.52 grains of fine gold. It consists of notes of $1, 5, 10, 20, 50, 100 and 500 denominations, and bronze 1-, 5-, 10- and 25-cent coins. Currency is issued by the National Bank, and, as at 30 June 1973, was notes, E$304.8m.; coins, E$51.1m. The note issue, under the Banking Proclamation of 1963, must be backed by gold and foreign securities in the international reserve fund to at least 25% of its value. At 30 June 1973, the fund stood at E$321.4m. The Ethiopian dollar = 44 cents US; E$5.03 = £1 sterling (on 1 Sept. 1973).

Budget. Revenue and expenditure estimates for financial years (ended 7 July) were as follows (in E$1m.):

	1969-70	1970-71	1971-72	1972-73	1973-74
Revenue	602	609.7	714.9	732	832.2
Expenditure	631	648.1	732.9	757	857.2

Of the estimated revenue in 1972-73, E$186m. is expected to come from customs duties and taxes, E$182.8m. from indirect taxes, E$158.1m. from direct taxes and E$97.9m. from external assistance. Of the expenditure, E$95.7m. is to be allocated to defence, E$114.5m. to education and culture and E$158.9m. to social services. The deficit is to be covered by external assistance E$65.8m. and domestic bank borrowing E$25m.

DEFENCE. Army. The Army, trained by British officers from 1947 to 1951, comprises 4 divisions, each nominally of three 3-battalion brigades, supporting arms and services. There is a mechanized brigade included in one of the divisions, which includes 1 tank battalion and 2 APC battalions. Four artillery battalions, 5 anti-aircraft batteries, 2 combat engineer battalions, an airborne infantry battalion and ancillary service make up the ground forces to a total of 41,000.

An American military advisory and administrative group, established since 1954, is working down to divisional level. Ethiopian officers are trained at the Hailé Selassié I Military Academy, Harar, and at the Hailé Selassié I Military Training Centre, Holletta, near Addis Ababa.

Navy. The Imperial Navy, with headquarters at Addis Ababa, consists of a training ship (1,768 tons; ex-US seaplane tender), 1 coastal minesweeper, 5 patrol craft (ex-US coast-guard motor boats), 4 harbour defence craft and 4 small landing craft. The Naval Academy is at Massawa. Personnel, 1973, totalled 1,380 officers and men.

Air Force. The Imperial Air Force, trained originally by Swedish and American personnel, has its headquarters at Debre Zeit, near Addis Ababa. It comprises a training school and a central workshop, and about 140 aircraft. There are 1 bomber, 1 ground-attack, 2 day-fighter/ground-attack and 1 fighter/reconnaissance combat squadrons, equipped with Canberras, F-5s, F-86s and T-28Ds, and 1 transport squadron equipped with jet-augmented C-119Ks, C-54s, C-47s and Doves. Training aircraft include T-33 jet advanced trainers and piston-engined T-28s and Saab-91s. A few Agusta-Bell 204, Alouette II and III, and Mi-8 helicopters are in service. Personnel, 330 officers and 1,790 men.

The frontier guard patrols the Somalia border, and commando police units are being employed to assist the Army and police in border patrols and anti-terrorist operations in Eritrea. Total paramilitary force, 20,000.

PLANNING. The second 5-year plan (1962-67) which envisaged a total expenditure of E$1,451m., including E$376m. for industrial development, was claimed to have been fulfilled to 95%. The third 5-year plan (1969-73, which has been extended to 1974) involving a total expenditure of E$2,865m. (of which E$565m. for industry and E$624m. for transport and communications) hopes to achieve a growth rate of 6% per annum.

AGRICULTURE. Coffee is by far the most important source of rural income. Harari coffee (long berry Mocha) is cultivated in the east; Abyssinian coffee is produced in Kaffa and the surrounding provinces, much of it growing wild.

Teff (Eragrostis abyssinica) is the principal food grain, followed by barley, wheat, maize and durra. Pulses and oilseeds are imported for local consumption and export. Cane sugar is an important crop.

Livestock: 12.2m. sheep, 26m. cattle, 11.1m. goats; smaller numbers of donkeys, horses, mules and camels. Hides and skins and butter (ghee) are important for home consumption and export. Sheep, cattle and chickens (44.5m.) are the main providers of meat. Sea fishing is being developed at Massawa and Assab and there are plans to develop inland fishing.

MINING. Ethiopia has little proved mineral wealth. Salt (227,500 tons in 1968-69) is produced mainly in Eritrea, while a placer goldmine is worked by the Government at Adola in the south. Gold production, in 1968-69, was 1,222,700 grammes. Small quantities of other minerals are produced including platinum. The potash deposits in the Dankali salt plains in the north-east part of the country were investigated by 2 US companies in 1966-70 but no exploitation has taken place. Japanese interests are engaged in the exploration of significant copper deposits near Asmara. A natural gas-strike was made offshore near Massawa in Dec. 1969, but it was not exploited. Encouraging traces of gas and oil have been found in S.E. Ethiopia and exploration has been intensified by US concerns.

INDUSTRY. The most important products of the small but growing industries are cotton yarn and fabrics, cement, sugar, salt, cigarettes, canned foodstuffs, building materials, footwear, pharmaceuticals, tyres and paint. Most industry is centred around Addis Ababa and Asmara.

Foreign investment is encouraged by 5-year tax holiday for new investment greater than E$200,000; expansion of existing plant and investments of less than E$200,000 are given a 3-year tax holiday. Imports for processing are duty free.

A Russian built state-owned oil refinery at Assab came on stream in 1967 with a capacity of 600,000 tons of crude.

Installed electricity generating power of the Ethiopian Electric Light and Power Authority was 158 mw in 1971 and is expected to reach 260 mw by 1973. Production in 1971 totalled 331m. kwh.

COMMERCE. Coffee is by far the most important export, followed by pulses, oilseeds, hides and skins. Imports are textiles, foodstuffs, vehicles, machinery, manufactured goods and petroleum products. Coffee exports, 1971, were 80,820 metric tons.

Imports and exports (in £1m. sterling) for 6 years (ending 9 Dec.):

Exports and re-exports from UK	5,214	4,978	4,834	6,736	5,620	6,980

ROADS. Loans totalling E$83.75m. have been made between 1951 and 1968 by the International Bank and the International Development Agency for 3 programmes for improving and extending the road system. A fourth programme began in 1968 and is being financed by E$190m. in foreign loans and should be completed in 1972. This will concentrate on the construction of feeder roads. The Imperial Highway Authority now maintains some 7,600 km of roads and is engaged in constructing another 850 km of all-weather roads. Chief motor roads: Massawa-Asmara-Sudan; Asmara-Dessie-Addis Ababa; Asmara-Gondar-Addis Ababa; Addis Ababa-Jimma; Addis Ababa-Lekemti; Addis Ababa-Nazareth; Dire-Dawa-Hargeisa; Dessie-Assab; Addis Ababa-Adola. SHIPPING. A state shipping line was established in 1964. In May 1973 it owned 4 cargo vessels and 2 tankers.

RAILWAYS. The Franco-Ethiopian Railway Co., owned by the 2 governments, operates the line from Djibouti to Addis Ababa. The line is of metre gauge, with a total length of 486½ miles. Trains run three times weekly in each direction, covering the distance in one night and one day. The railway carried 397,852 tons of freight and 361,120 passengers in 1971-72. The Northern Railway of Ethiopia from Massawa to Asmara and Agordat (191 miles, 95-cm gauge) is owned and operated by the Ethiopian Government. It carried 164,400 tons of freight and 262,000 passengers in 1969-70.

AVIATION. Ethiopian Air Lines, formed in 1946, provides services to Cairo, Athens, Frankfurt, London, Khartoum, Lagos, Accra, Rome, Nairobi, Entebbe, Dar es Salaam, Djibouti, Aden, Paris, Duala, Taiz, Jedda, Peking and Delhi, in addition to internal services. The following airlines operate through Asmara and Addis Ababa: Alitalia, East African Airways, Air India, Lufthansa, Egyptair, Yemen Airlines, Saudi Arabia Airlines and Sudan Airways. Air-France, British Airways and Air Djibouti operate through Addis Ababa only.

POST. The postal system serves 301 offices in the Empire, mainly by air-mail. All the main centres are connected with Addis Ababa by telephone or radio telegraph. International telephone services are available at certain hours to most countries in Europe, North America and India. Number of telephones (1971), 50,518 and 194 telex subscribers.

BROADCASTING. The Ethiopian Broadcasting Service makes sound broadcasts on the medium and short waves in English, Amharic and in the vernacular languages spoken within the country. Radio Voice of the Gospel, owned by the Lutheran World Federation, broadcasts from Addis Ababa to large audiences in Africa, Asia and the Middle East. Television was introduced in 1964 and programmes broadcast from Addis Ababa for a radius of about 100 miles to the south and south-east of the capital.

BANKING. The State Bank was renamed the National Bank of Ethiopia in Oct. 1963, when its commercial activities were transferred to the newly established Commercial Bank of Ethiopia. At the same time another new bank, the Investment Bank of Ethiopia, was set up with a capital of E$10m., of which the Government held the majority of shares. In Sept. 1965 it became the Ethiopian Investment Corporation, which is a substantial shareholder in a number of industrial and other ventures. The Investment Corporation has now been merged with the Development Bank of Ethiopia and the two are now known as 'The Agricultural and Industrial Development Bank, SC'.

Two Italian banks have subsidiaries in Asmara, and one has a subsidiary in Addis Ababa. The Addis Ababa Bank Share Co. is connected with National & Grindlays Bank Ltd.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system of weights and measures is officially in use. Traditional weights and measures vary considerably in the various provinces: the principal ones are: Frasilla = approximately 37½ lb.; gasha, the principal unit of land measure, which is normally about 100 acres but can vary between 80 and 300 acres, depending on the quality of the land.

FINLAND

Suomen Tasavalta—Republiken Finland

HISTORY. Since the Middle Ages Finland was a part of the realm of Sweden. In the 18th century parts of south-eastern Finland were conquered by Russia, and the rest of the country was ceded to Russia by the peace treaty of Hamina in 1809. Finland became an autonomous grand-duchy which retained its previous laws and institutions under its Grand Duke, the Emperor of Russia. After the Russian revolution Finland declared itself independent on 6 Dec. 1917. The country was freed from Russian troops in a war from Jan. to May 1918, in which, simultaneously, domestic groups advocating a socialist system of government were defeated.

On 30 Nov. 1939 Soviet troops invaded Finland, after Finland had rejected territorial concessions demanded by the USSR. These, however, had to be made in the peace treaty of 12 March 1940, amounting to 32,806 sq. km and including the Carelian Isthmus, Viipuri and the shores of Lake Ladoga.

When the German attack on the USSR was launched in June 1941 Finland again became involved in the war against the USSR. On 19 Sept. 1944 an armistice was signed in Moscow. Finland agreed to cede to Russia the Petsamo area in addition to cessions made in 1940 (total 42,934 sq. km) and to lease to Russia for 50 years the Porkkala headland to be used as a military base. Further, Finland undertook to pay 300m. gold dollars in reparations within 6 years (later extended to 8 years). The peace treaty was signed in Paris on 10 Feb. 1947. The payment of reparations was completed on 19 Sept. 1952. The military base of Porkkala was returned to Finland on 26 Jan. 1956.

A treaty of friendship, co-operation and mutual assistance between Finland and the USSR was concluded in Moscow on 6 April 1948 for 10 years, extended on 19 Sept. 1955 to cover a period of 20 years and extended on 19 July 1970 for a further period of 20 years.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. Finland is a republic according to the Constitution of 17 July 1919.

Parliament consists of one chamber of 200 members chosen by direct and proportional election, in which all Finnish citizens (men or women) who have reached their 20th year have the vote. The country is divided into 15 electoral districts with a representation proportional to their population. Every citizen entitled to vote is eligible for Parliament, which is elected for 4 years, but can be dissolved sooner by the President.

The President is elected for 6 years by a college of 300 electors, elected by the votes of the citizens in the same way as the members of Parliament.

President of Finland: Dr Urho Kekkonen (elected 15 Feb. 1956, re-elected 15 Feb. 1962, 15 Feb. 1968 and extended to Mar. 1978 on 17–18 Jan. 1973).

State of Parties (Jan. 1973) for Parliament elected on 1–2 Jan. 1972: National Coalition, 32; Liberals, 6; Swedish Party, 10 (including 1 for Coalition of Åland); Centre, 35; Smallholders, 5; Social Democratic Party, 56; Democratic League, 37; Christian League 4; People's Unity Party, 13; Independent, 2.

The Council of State (Cabinet), appointed by the President in Feb. 1972, was composed as follows:

Prime Minister: Kalevi Sorsa (SDP).

Foreign Affairs: Ahti Karjalainen (Deputy Prime Minister). Justice: Matti Louekoski. Interior: Heikki Tuominen. Defence: Kristian Gestrin. Finance: Johannes Virolainen, Esko Niskanen. Agriculture: Heimo Linna. Communications: Pekka Tarjanne. Trade and Industry: Jan-Magnus Jansson, Jermu Laine. Labour: Valde Nevalainen. Social Affairs: Seija Karkinen, Pentti Pekkarinen. Education: Ulf Sundqvist, Marjatta Väänänen.

National flag: Blue cross on white.

National anthem: Maamme; Swedish: Vårt land (words by J. L. Runeberg, 1843; tune by F. Pacius, 1848).

Finnish and Swedish are the official languages of Finland.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. For administrative purposes Finland is divided into 12 provinces (lääni, Sw.: län). The administration of each province is entrusted to a governor (maaherra, Sw.: landshövding) appointed by the President. He directs the activities of the provincial office (lääninhallitus, Sw.: länsstyrelse) and of local sheriffs (nimismies, Sw.: länsman). In 1972 the number of sheriff districts was 237.

The unit of local government is the commune. Main fields of communal activities are local planning, roads and harbours, sanitary services, education, health services and social aid. The communes raise taxes independent from state taxation. Three different kinds of communes are distinguished, of which two are urban (kaupunki and kauppala, Sw.: stad and köping) and one rural. In 1973 there were 483 communes, of which 82 belonged to the urban classes. In all communes communal councils are elected for terms of 4 years; all inhabitants (men and women) of the commune who have reached their 20th year are entitled to vote and eligible. The executive power is in each commune vested in a board which consists of members elected by the council and one or a few chief officials of the commune. Several communes often form an association for the administration of some common institution, e.g., a hospital or a vocational school.

The autonomous county (landskap) of Åland has a county council (landsting) of one chamber, elected according to rules corresponding to those for parliamentary elections. In addition to its provincial governor it has a county board with executive power in matters within the field of the autonomy of the county.

FRANCE

République Française

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The constitution of the Fifth Republic, superseding that of 1946, came into force on 4 Oct. 1958.

A referendum held in the French Republic and the overseas departments and territories on 28 Sept. 1958 approved the constitution drawn up by a committee which General de Gaulle had appointed in June. Apart from French Guinea, which voted over 90% against the constitution and for independence, the final result for metropolitan France, Algeria, the overseas departments and territories, and from French citizens living abroad or in trusteeship territories was as follows: Electorate, 45,840,642; voters, 36,893,979; valid votes, 36,486,251; Yes, 31,066,502; No, 5,419,749.

The Constitution consists of a preamble, dealing with the Rights of Man, and 92 articles. Emphasis is placed on the rôle of the President of the Republic. 'He sees that the Constitution is respected; he ensures, through his arbitration, the regular functioning of public powers as well as the continuity of the state. He is the guarantor of national independence' (Art. 5). He nominates and dismisses the Prime Minister and the other members of the government (Art. 8). He can dissolve the National Assembly after consultation with the Prime Minister and the presidents of the assemblies (Art. 12). He appoints to all military and civil offices of the Republic (Art. 13). 'When the institutions of the Republic, the independence of the Nation, the integrity of its territory or the fulfilment of its international commitments are threatened with immediate and grave danger, and when the regular functioning of constitutional public powers is interrupted, the President of the Republic takes the measures demanded by the circumstances, after official consultation with the Prime Minister, the presidents of the assemblies and the Constitutional Council' (Art. 16).

Under the revised article 6 of the constitution (6 Nov. 1962) the President of the Republic is now elected by direct universal suffrage. His term of office is 7 years.

'The government determines and conducts the policy of the nation' (Art. 20); 'the government may ask parliament for authority to take, by decrees and within a limited period, such measures as are normally within the province of the law' (Art. 38). Ministers must not be members of parliament (Art. 23). Votes of censure can only be carried by a majority of the members constituting the Assembly (Art. 49). The 2 ordinary sessions in autumn and spring are curtailed to a total of 5 months (Art. 28).

The 'Council of the Republic' has been re-named 'Senate'.

The 'Economic Council' has been re-named 'Economic and Social Council'.

The 'Constitutional Council' has to uphold the fairness of the elections and to act as a guardian of the constitution. It is composed of 9 members, 3 of whom are nominated by the President of the Republic, 3 by the President of the National Assembly and 3 by the President of the Senate. In addition, past Presidents of the Republic are, by right, members of the Constitutional Council (Art. 56).

National flag: Blue, white, red (vertical).

National anthem: La Marseillaise (words and tune by C. Rouget de Lisle, 1792).

The Senate is composed of 283 members representing Metropolitan Departments, 7 Overseas Departments, 6 Oversea Territories, 6 Frenchmen residing outside France.

The elections for the National Assembly took place on 11 March 1973.

Georges Pompidou who was elected President of France on 15 June 1969 died on 2 April 1974.

The interim President, Alain Poher announced on 5 April 1974 that elections for a new President would take place on 5 May and if no candidate obtained a majority a further ballot between the two leading contenders would take place on 19 May.

The Cabinet, appointed on 1 March 1974, was composed as follows:

Prime Minister: Pierre Messmer.

Justice: Jean Taittinger. Foreign Affairs: Michel Jobert. Interior: Jacques Chirac. Defence: Robert Galley. Finance: Valéry Giscard d'Estaing. Education: Joseph Fontanet. Planning, Equipment, Tourism and Transport: Oliver Guichard. Culture and Environment: Alain Peyrefitte. Agriculture: Raymond Marcelin. Health: Michel Poniatowski. Posts and Telecommunications: Jean Royer. Industry and Commerce: Yves Guena. Information: Jean-Phillippe Lecat. Relations with Parliament: Hubert Germain. Labour, Employment and Population: Georges Gorse.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. For administrative purposes metropolitan France is divided into 95 departments. As from 1 Jan. 1947 the former colonies of Martinique, Guadeloupe, Réunion and Guyane have been given the status of overseas departments. On 10 July 1964 the departments of Seine and Seine-et-Oise were reorganized in 7 departments (Paris, Yvelines, Essonne, Hauts-de-Seine, Seine-Saint-Denis, Val-de-Marne, Val d'Oise). Since 1960, the departments have been re-grouped into 22 programme regions (or regional constituencies for operation to serve in effect as background for national development work, for planning and for budgetary policy).

The unit of local government is the commune, the size and population of which vary very much. There were, in 1968, in the 95 metropolitan departments, 37,708 communes. Most of them (33,315) had less than 1,500 inhabitants, and 24,007 had even less than 500; while 334 communes had more than 20,000 inhabitants. A law of 16 July 1971 causes the smallest administrative area, roughly equivalent to parish (communes), either to merge or to re-group themselves into combined administrative units of 'communes' or into urban communities. The local affairs of the commune are under a Municipal Council, composed of from 10 to 36 members, elected by universal suffrage, and by the scrutin de liste for 6 years by French citizens of 21 years or over after 6 months' residence.

Each Municipal Council elects a mayor, who is both the representative of the commune and the agent of the central government. He is the head of the local police and, with his assistants, acts under the orders of the prefect.

In Paris the Municipal Council is composed of 90 members. The 20 arrondissements into which the city is subdivided have been grouped in 9 sectors, each of which has its own mayor.

The next unit is the canton (3,209 in 1968), which is composed of an average of 12 communes, although some of the largest communes are, on the contrary, divided into several cantons.

The district, or arrondissement (322 in 1968), has an elected conseil d'arrondissement, with as many members as there were cantons, its chief function being to allot among the communes their respective parts in the direct taxes assigned to each arrondissement by the Council General.

RELIGION. No religion is officially recognized by the State. Under the law promulgated on 9 Dec. 1905, which separated Church and State, the adherents of all creeds are authorized to form associations for public worship (associations culturelles). The law of 2 Jan. 1907 provided that, failing associations culturelles, the buildings for public worship, together with their furniture, would continue at the disposition of the ministers of religion and the worshippers for the exercise of their religion; but in each case there was required an administrative act drawn up by the préfet as regards buildings belonging to the State or the departments, and by the maire as regards buildings belonging to the communes.

There are 17 archbishops and 68 bishops of the Roman Catholic Church, with 51,000 clergy of various grades. The Protestants of the Augsburg confession are, in their religious affairs, governed by a General Consistory, while the Reformed Church is under a Council of Administration, the seat of which is in Paris. In 1962 communicant Protestants numbered 722,453.

EDUCATION. The primary, secondary and higher state schools constitute the 'Université de France'. The Supreme Council of 84 members has deliberative, administrative and judiciary functions, and a Consultative Committee advise respecting the working of the school system, but the inspectors-general are in direct communication with the Minister. For local education administration France is divided into 25 academic areas, each of which has an Academic Council whose members include a certain number elected by the professors or teachers. The Academic Council deals with all grades of education. Each is under a Rector, and each is provided with academy inspectors, 1 for each department.

By decree of 6 Jan. 1959 the whole system of public instruction has been reorganized and the structure of the Ministry of National Education has consequently been modified. The educational stages are as follows:

1. Non-compulsory pre-school instruction for children aged 2-5, to be given in infant schools or infant classes attached to primary schools.

2. Compulsory elementary instruction for children aged 6-11, to be given in primary schools and certain classes of the lycées. It consists of 3 courses: preparatory (1 year), elementary (2 years), intermediary (2 years). Physically or mentally handicapped children are cared for in special institutions or special classes of primary schools.

3. Enseignement du Second Degré, for pupils aged 11-18:

(a) Enseignement du 1^{er} cycle du Second Degré: 4 years of study in the Lycées, Collèges d'Enseignement Secondaire or Collèges d'Enseignement Général.

(b) Enseignement du Second Cycle:

Long, général or professionnel provided by the lycées and leading to the baccalauréat or to the baccalauréat de technicien after 3 years.

Court, professional courses of 3, 2 and 1 year are taught in the Collèges d'enseignement technique, or the specialized sections of the lycées, CES or CEG.

In addition students are also prepared for the Sections de Techniciens Supérieurs and the preparatory classes of the Grandes Écoles.

The following table shows the various types of schools, their numbers and the numbers of enrolled pupils:

Higher Instruction is supplied by the State in the universities and in special schools, and by private individuals in the free faculties and schools. The law of 12 July 1875 provided for higher education free of charge. This law was modified by that of 18 March 1880, which granted the state faculties the exclusive right to confer degrees. A decree of 28 Dec. 1885 created a general council of the faculties, and the creation of universities, each consisting of several faculties, was accomplished in 1897, in virtue of the law of 10 July 1896.

The law of 12 Nov. 1968 laying down future guide-lines for higher education redefined the activities and working of universities. Bringing several disciplines together, units for teaching and research (U.E.R. – Unités d'Enseignement et de Recherche) are being formed which decide their own teaching activities, research programmes and procedures for checking the level of knowledge gained, but control would be on a national level for matters concerning national degree qualifications.

The following table shows the year of foundation and the total number of students of the universities in 1972-73:

The other higher institutions under the Ministry of Public Instruction are the Collège de France (founded by Francis I in 1530), which has courses of study bearing on various subjects (literature and language, archaeology, mathematical, natural science, psychology and social science, political economy, etc.); the Museum of Natural History, giving instruction in science and natural history; the École Pratique des Hautes Études (history and philology, mathematical and physico-chemical sciences, natural science, theology, economics and social science), having its seat at the Sorbonne; the École Normale Supérieure, which prepares teachers for secondary education and, since 1904, follows the curricula of the Sorbonne without special teachers of its own; the École des Chartes, which trains archivists and paleographers; the École des Langues Orientales vivantes; the École du Louvre, devoted to art and archaeology; the Bureau des Longitudes, the central meteorological bureau; the Observatoire de Paris; and the French Schools at Athens, Rome, Cairo and South-East Asia.

Outside Paris there are 12 observatories (Meudon, Besançon, Bordeaux, etc.). The observatory at Nice belongs to the University of Paris.

There are free faculties in Paris (the Catholic Institute of Paris comprising theology and literary studies) and in some other major towns.

Professional and Technical Instruction. The principal institutions of higher or technical instruction are: The Grandes Écoles with 82,131 students in 1969-70, the Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers at Paris (with 20 evening courses on the applied sciences and social economy), the École Central des Arts et Manufactures (953 students in 1971-72), the École des Hautes Études Commerciales (803 students in 1972-73), 17 higher schools of commerce (4,461 pupils in 1969-70), under the Ministry of Public Instruction; the National Agronomic Institute at Paris, the veterinary school at Maisons-Alfort, Lyon and Toulouse, a school of forestry at Nancy, Écoles Nationales Supérieures Agronomiques at Grignon, Rennes, Montpellier, Nancy and Toulouse, 98 schools of agriculture, etc., under the Ministry of Agriculture; the École Supérieure de Guerre, the École Polytechnique, the military school at Coëtquidan (formerly St Cyr), the École d'Artillerie at Fontainebleau, the École de Cavalerie at Saumur and other schools under the Ministry of War; the Naval School at Brest under the Ministry of Marine; the School of Mines at Paris, the School of Civil Engineering at Paris, the School of Mines at St Etienne and the Schools of Miners at Alès and Douai with other schools under the Ministry of Public Works; the École Nationale Supérieure des Beaux Arts, the École Nationale Supérieure des Arts Décoratifs and the Conservatoire de Musique et de Déclamation under the Department of Fine Arts, which is attached to the Ministry of Cultural Affairs. In the provinces there are national schools of fine arts, and schools of music, and several municipal schools, as well as free subventional schools, etc.

CINEMAS (1972). There were 4,168 cinemas with a seating capacity of 1,974,648.

NEWSPAPERS (1972). There were 12 daily newspapers in Paris (France-soir have ing a circulation of 1.03m.) and 13 newspapers in the provinces with a circulation of more than 200,000 each and 8 with a circulation of between 100,000 and 200,000. The combined daily circulation of the 155 daily papers was 13m. in 1971.

HEALTH. At the end of 1972 there were 68,778 physicians, 26,599 pharmacists and 24,098 dentists practising. There were 1,870 public hospitals (492,041 beds), 135 public mental hospitals (120,000 beds), 1,935 private hospitals (100,232 beds) and 158 private mental homes (10,236 beds) at the end of 1971.

SOCIAL WELFARE. An order of 4 Oct. 1945 laid down the framework of a comprehensive plan of Social Security and created a single organization which superseded the various laws relating to social insurance, workmen's compensation, health insurance, family allowances, etc. All previous matters relating to Social Security are dealt with in the Social Security Code, 1956; this has been revised several times, and finally by orders laid down on 21 Aug. 1967, which were ratified on 31 July 1968. The Social Security general scheme covers all wage-earning workers in industry and commerce that are not covered by a special scheme of their own.

Contributions. All wage-earning workers or those of equivalent status are insured regardless of the amount or the nature of the salary or earnings. The funds for the general scheme are raised mainly from professional contributions, these being fixed within the limits of a ceiling (assessed at 24,480 francs per annum on 1 Jan. 1973) and calculated as a percentage of the salaries. The calculation of the contributions payable for family allowances, old age and industrial injuries relates only to this amount; on the other hand, the amount payable for sickness, maternity expenses, disability and death is calculated partly within the limit of the 'ceiling' and partly on the whole salary. These contributions are the responsibility of both employer and employee, except in the case of family allowances or industrial injuries, where they are the sole responsibility of the employer.

Self-employed Workers. From 17 Jan. 1948 allowances and old-age pensions were paid to self-employed workers by independent insurance funds set up within their own profession, trade or business. Schemes of compulsory insurance for sickness were instituted in 1961 for farmers and in 1966, with modifications in 1970, for other non-wage-earning workers.

Social Insurance. The orders laid down in Aug. 1967 ensure that the whole population can benefit from the Social Security Scheme; at present all elderly persons who have been engaged in the professions, as well as the surviving spouse, are entitled to claim an old-age benefit; 98% of the population, both working and retired, are covered by a compulsory scheme of insurance for sickness, the remaining 2% who are not covered by a compulsory insurance scheme have been able to participate in a voluntary scheme since 1967; the whole population benefit from the legislation regarding family allowances.

Sickness Insurance refunds the costs of treatment required by the insured, of the needs of his wife, of children under 16 and a half who are in his care and not earning, under 18 who are apprenticed, under 20 who are still studying or who cannot work on account of some chronic illness or infirmity, as well as relations, older or younger or of similar age living under the same roof who are engaged exclusively in domestic duties and in the education of at least 2 children under 14. The general principles relating to medical care consist of: a free choice by the patient of his doctor, his pharmaceutical chemist, his place of treatment, etc.; the medical practitioner is granted freedom of prescription. Reimbursement is not as a rule made in full; the insured person usually pays between 10% and 30% of the legal rate except in cases of exemption. The insured who is recognized as medically unfit for work receives daily allowances equal to half of the wage which has been used to calculate the contributions, or to two-thirds of this if the person has 3 or more children. These allowances may be paid for 3 years, plus one additional year if the insured undergoes re-adaptation treatment or takes up fresh vocational training.

Maternity Insurance covers the costs of medical treatment relating to the pregnancy, confinement and lying-in period; the beneficiaries being the insured person or the spouse. The daily allowances are equal to 90% of the salary on which contributions were calculated.

Insurance for Invalids is divided into 3 categories: (1) those who are capable of working; (2) those who cannot work; (3) those who, in addition, are in need of the help of another person. According to the category, the pension rate varies from 30 to 50% of the average salary for the last 10 years, with a minimum additional allowance for home help of 11,465.10 francs per year for the third category.

Old-age Pensions for workers were introduced in 1910 and revised in 1930, 1935, 1941 and 1945 and are now fixed by the Social Security Code of 28 Jan. 1972. After 1975 people who have paid insurance for at least $37\frac{1}{2}$ years (150 quarters) will receive at 60 a pension equal to 25% of basic annual salary, to be increased by 1.25% of the basic salary for every quarter that realization is deferred; thus at 65 the pension will be equal to 50% of basic salary. People who have paid insurance for less than $37\frac{1}{2}$ years but not less than 15 years can expect a pension equal to as many $1/150$ ths of the full pension as their quarterly payments justify. In 1974 the maximum retainable number of years insurance is 36, and a pension at 65, after a maximum period of insurance, will be equal to 48% of basic annual salary. In the event of death of the insured person, the husband or wife of the deceased person receives half the pension received by the latter. Compulsory supplementary schemes ensure for those to whom they apply benefits additional to the old-age pensions.

Family Allowances. The system comprises: (a) Family allowances proper, equivalent to 22% of the basic monthly salary (4.90 francs) for 2 dependent children, 37% for the third and fourth child, and 33% for the fifth and each subsequent child; a supplement equivalent to 9% of the basic monthly salary for the second and each subsequent dependent child more than 10 years old and 16% for each dependent child over 15 years. (b) Single wage-earner allowance (when the wife does not work), according to the number of dependent children. (c) Housewife allowance (when an employer's or self-employed person's wife does not work), according to the number of dependent children and the amount of net annual taxable income. (d) Maintenance grant for children under 3 years for families who do not receive either of the above grants, and to individual recipients whose resources are less than a maximum which varies according to the number of dependent children. (e) Antenatal grants. (f) Maternity grant equal to 260% of basic salary. (g) Allowance for supervision. (h) Allowance for specialized education of crippled minors. (i) Allowance for orphans. (j) Allowance for handicapped minors. (k) Allowance for opening of school term. (l) Allowance for accommodation, under certain circumstances (since July 1972 older persons and young workers enjoy equal benefit from the accommodation allowance). The allowance for single wage (b) allowance for the mother in the home (c) and the allowance for expenses respecting supervision have been subjected to an annual ceiling of resources. The regional abatements have been abolished since 1 Jan. 1973 and the amount is from now on identical over the whole territory.

Workmen's Compensation. The law passed by the National Assembly on 30 Oct 1946 supersedes the Act of 9 April 1898 and forms part of the Social Security Code. It is administered by the Social Security Organization. Employers are invited to take preventive measures. The application of these measures is supervised by consulting engineers (assessors) of the local funds dealing with sickness insurance, who may compel employers who do not respect these measures to make additional contributions; they may, in like manner, grant rebates to employers who have in operation suitable preventive measures. The injured person receives free treatment, the insurance fund reimburses the practitioners, hospitals and suppliers chosen freely by the injured. In cases of temporary disablement the daily payments are equal to half the total daily wage received by the injured. In case of permanent disablement the injured person receives a pension, the amount of which varies according to the degree of disablement and the salary received during the past 12 months.

A law promulgated on 11 Oct. 1946 has created a medical labour service of doctors who hold a diploma of 'industrial health specialists'. These doctors are entrusted with the control of hygiene and health matters in all industrial undertakings or groups of undertakings. In addition, it is the duty of this medical service to examine wage-earners when they are engaged, to carry out periodical medical examinations and to ensure the application of the existing rules relating to safety in work.

Unemployment Benefits vary according to circumstances (full or partial unemployment) and means test. Since 1926 unemployment benefits have been paid from public funds. Full unemployment benefit amounts to 8.90 francs per day for the head of the family and 3.60 francs for the spouse or a dependent person. After 3 months the payment is reduced to 8.10 francs.

A collective agreement signed on 31 Dec. 1958 between the national council of employers and certain trade unions has established a system of special allowances for unemployed workers in industry and trade. The costs are shared by employers (0.56%) and employees (0.14%) and the benefits amount to 35% of the wages for 12 months; to be extended for workers of old age and long employment. The system is administered by commissions composed of representatives of employers and employees in equal proportion. A similar agreement of 22 Feb. 1968 extends the system to partial unemployment.

JUSTICE. The French judicial system has been reorganized by a number of ordinances and decrees dated 22 Dec. 1958.

Before this reform, the lowest courts were those of the Justices of Peace (juges de paix), 1 in each canton, who tried less important civil cases. The Tribunals of First Instance (Tribunaux de Première Instance or Tribunaux Civils), 1 in each arrondissement, dealt with more important civil cases and served as Tribunals of Appeal for the Justices of Peace, when their decisions were susceptible of appeal.

Since 2 March 1959, 469 tribunaux d'instance (10 in overseas departments), under a single judge each and with increased material and territorial jurisdiction, have replaced the cantonal justices of the peace; and 181 tribunaux de grande instance (6 in overseas departments) have taken the place of the 357 tribunaux de première instance.

The tribunaux de grande instance usually have a collegiate composition, however a law dated 10 July 1970 has allowed them to administer justice under a single judge in some civil cases.

All petty offences (contraventions) are disposed of in the Police Courts (Tribunaux de Police) presided over by a Judge on duty in the tribunal d'instance. The Correctional Courts pronounce upon all graver offences (délits), including cases involving imprisonment up to 5 years. They have no jury, and consist of 3 judges who administer both criminal and civil justice. In all cases of a délit or a crime the preliminary inquiry is made in secrecy by an examining magistrate (juge d'instruction), who either dismisses the case or sends it for trial before a court where a public prosecutor (Procureur) endeavours to prove the charge.

The Conciliation Boards (Conseils des Prud'hommes) composed of an equal number of employers and employees deal with small trade and industrial disputes. Commercial litigation goes to the Commercial Courts (Tribunaux de Commerce) composed of tradesmen and manufacturers elected for 2 years.

When the decisions of any of these Tribunals are susceptible of appeal, the cases go to the Courts of Appeal (Cours d'Appel). There are 31 Courts of Appeal (3 in overseas departments), composed each of a president and a variable number of members.

The Courts of Assizes (Cours d'Assises), composed each of a president, assisted by 2 other magistrates who are members of the Courts of Appeal, and by a jury of 9 people, sit in every département, when called upon to try very important criminal cases. The decisions of the Courts of Appeal and the Courts of Assizes are final; however, the Court of Cassation (Cour de Cassation) has discretion to verify if the law has been correctly interpreted and if the rules of procedure have been followed exactly. The Court of Cassation may annul any judgment, and the cases have to be tried again by a Court of Appeal or a Court of Assizes.

A State Security Court has been established by 2 laws dated 15 Jan. 1963. It is usually composed of 3 civilian judges, including the president, and 2 judges of general or field officer rank, and has jurisdiction to deal with subversion in peace-time.

The French penal institutions have been reorganized by the procedural code which came into force on 2 March 1959 and was modified by a law dated 17 July 1970. They consist of: (1) maisons d'arrêt and de correction, where persons awaiting trial as well as those condemned to short periods of imprisonment are kept; (2) central prisons (maisons centrales) for those sentenced to long imprisonment; (3) special establishments, namely (a) schools for young adults, (b) hostels for old and disabled offenders, (c) hospitals for the sick and psychopaths, (d) institutions for recidivists. Special attention is being paid to classified treatment and the rehabilitation and vocational re-education of prisoners, including work in open-air and semi-free establishments.

Juvenile delinquents go before special judges and courts; they are sent to public or private institutions of supervision and re-education.

On 24 Jan. 1973 the first Ombudsman (médiateur) was appointed for a 6-year period.

The population at 1 Jan. 1972 of all penal establishments was 30,717 men and 951 women.

FINANCE. Currency. A new currency, the 'heavy franc' or 'nouveau franc' (NF) worth 100 'light francs', was introduced on 1 Jan. 1960.

Franc coins are issued for 1, 5, 10 and 20 centimes, $\frac{1}{2}$, 1, 5 and 10 francs; and bank-notes for 5, 10, 50, 100 and 500 francs.

DEFENCE. The President of the Republic exercises command over the Armed Forces. He is assisted by the research organization of the High Council of Defence (Conseil Supérieur de la Défense Nationale) and two Committees (Comité de Défense and Comité de Défense restreint) which formulate directives. The Prime Minister is responsible for the national defence; he exercises his military responsibilities through the General Secretariat of National Defence (SGDN). Under the Prime Minister's authority, the Comité d'Action Scientifique de Défense co-ordinates research.

On 5 July 1969 the Army Ministry was replaced by the Ministry of State for National Defence which is responsible for the Army, Air Force and Navy. In addition to the powers of the Army Ministry, the Ministry of State prepares general directives for negotiations relating to defence. It has SGDN at its disposal for exercising these powers. It is assisted by the Departmental Assistant for Weapons, the Secretary-General for Administration, the Chief of Staff of the Armed Forces and the Chiefs of Staff of the 3 Armed Forces—Army, Navy and Air.

In 1962 the Armed Forces were reorganized in 3 groups: (1) nuclear strategic force; (2) operational forces; (3) home defence forces.

(1) The Nuclear Strategic Force (FNS), which is directly under the President's authority, will comprise three generations: at present, the Mirage IV and the 'A' bomb operated by the Air Force; as from 1971, ground-to-ground strategic ballistic missiles (SSBS); as from 1971, the nuclear submarine missile launcher (SNLE). Each of these weapons systems is intended to exist alongside the preceding one and to supplement it. The strategic nuclear weapons will be supplemented as from 1972 by a tactical nuclear weapons system.

(2) The Land, Sea and Air Forces consist of: (a) 5 mechanized divisions forming the land forces which comprise the First Army. Since 1 Aug. 1969 these have been placed under a single command (3 divisions in metropolitan France—2 in West Germany); 1 division specializing in overseas operations; national reserves in metropolitan France; troops, chiefly marines, stationed overseas and organized in 3 commands in the departments and French overseas territories and 3 inter-service commands in the African states and Madagascar; (b) a naval force of 2 squadrons, comprising aircraft carriers, escorts and amphibious craft; (c) tactical aircraft (Mirage III), helicopters (Frelon), transports (Transall), etc.

(3) Organized in 7 defence zones, 7 military regions and 21 territorial divisions, with co-ordination of the civil and military authorities; also comprising all 3 services.

Army. The Army consists of regular officers and n.c.o.s, long-term n.c.o.s and soldiers, and conscripts serving 12 months.

The peace-time units comprise infantry, armoured troops and cavalry, artillery, engineering, signals, transport, matériel, naval infantry and artillery. In addition, there are the Foreign Legion, mountain and airborne troops and other specialized units.

In 1973 the effective strength of the Army was 332,000 all ranks.

Higher military instruction is provided in 3 stages: the staff school (École d'État-major) for officers of formation staffs; the École Supérieure de Guerre for officers earmarked for the higher command; the Institut des Hautes Études de Défense Nationale where high-ranking officers and civilians study together the problems of national defence.

Light Army Aircraft. Formed in 1952, the Aviation Légère de l'Armée de Terre (ALAT) is a well-equipped force, with more than 100 light aeroplanes and nearly 400 helicopters for observation, reconnaissance, combat area transport, liaison and supply duties.

The Gendarmerie is an integral part of the Army but also co-operates with the civil administration in maintaining public order. Effective strength, 1973, 70,000.

Navy. The Navy is under the supreme direction of the Minister of Defence, being administered by the Chief and Deputy Chiefs of Naval Staff.

All naval aircraft and coastal defences are under the control of the Navy, and have been reorganized in 3 coast 'naval frontier' districts (with headquarters in Cherbourg, Brest and Toulon), in relation to the aircraft attached to the active fleet.

The French Navy is manned partly by conscription but mainly by voluntary enlistment. In 1973 the active personnel was 68,915 officers and men.

The following is a summary of the strength of the fleet at the periods shown:

The command cruiser De Grasse was condemned in 1973.

There are also 3 nuclear-powered ballistic missile submarines of 7,500 tons, 20 diesel-powered submarines, 2 guided-missile frigates of 5,100 tons (destroyer-leader of escort-cruiser type), 1 missile frigate (destroyer leader type) of 4,580 tons, 17 destroyers of 2,750 tons, 27 escorts (frigates), 1 of 3,500 tons and the remainder of 1,290 to 1,750 tons, 2 assault landing ships, 3 missile boats, 14 ocean minesweepers, 5 minehunters, 61 coastal minesweepers (11 used as patrol vessels), 15 inshore minesweepers, 13 survey ships, 14 patrol vessels, 8 motor launches, 5 landing ships, 13 landing craft, 9 depot ships, 10 oilers, 14 transports, 4 sail training vessels and 100 support ships and service craft.

Two more nuclear-powered ballistic-missile submarines, 4 diesel-electric submarines, 5 guided-missile frigates (leaders) and 5 avisos (escorts) are under construction. A helicopter carrier, 1 prototype nuclear-powered fleet (hunter-killer) submarine and 7 escorts are projected.

The naval air arm, known usually as Aéronavale, has 2 squadrons of nationally designed Etendard IV-M transonic fighter-bombers, 1 squadron of Etendard IV-P reconnaissance fighters, 2 squadrons of US-built Crusader all-weather fighters, 3 squadrons of Alizé turboprop anti-submarine aircraft, 5 maritime reconnaissance squadrons with Atlantic and Neptune aircraft and 3 anti-submarine and assault squadrons with Super Frelon and Sikorsky HSS-1 helicopters. Strength is approximately 12,000 personnel and 350 aircraft, of which 200 are combat types.

Air Force. Formed as the Service Aéronautique in April 1910, the Armée de l'Air is organized in 6 major commands. Its bases and installations were regrouped and modernized in 1967. The Commandement des Forces Aériennes Stratégiques (CFAS) commands the nuclear deterrent force. The Commandement de la Force Aérienne Tactique (FATAC) directs the tactical air forces, commands the air force reserve and is responsible for support of the ground forces. Under FATAC the 1st Commandement Aérien Tactique (1^o CATAC) controls tactical air units based in eastern France; the 2nd Commandement Aérien Tactique (2^o CATAC) controls the reserve forces and the air component of the Force d'Intervention. The Commandement du Transport Aérien Militaire (COTAM) is responsible for air transport operations and for the training and transport of airborne forces. The Commandement Air des Forces de Défense Aérienne (CAFDA) controls air defence forces. The Commandement des Écoles de l'Armée de l'Air (CEAA) is responsible for training the personnel for all branches of the Air Force. There is finally a Commandement des Transmissions, with responsibility for communications and electronic warfare.

The home-based French Air Force is divided territorially among 4 metropolitan air regions (Metz, Paris, Bordeaux, Aix-en-Provence); overseas, the air forces are integrated into the local joint-service commands. There are about 43 combat squadrons and 32 transport, helicopter and support squadrons, and the Air Force uses a total of 66 bases.

The strategic, tactical and air defence forces are equipped entirely with jet aircraft. The CFAS received a total of 62 Mirage IV supersonic nuclear bombers which are deployed in 3 wings (each with first-line strength of 3 squadrons of 4 aircraft) supported by 11 C-135F refuelling tanker transports. The 1^o CATAC deploys 8 wings (18 squadrons), consisting of Mirage III-E and 5F ground-attack and III-R reconnaissance fighters, F-100 Super Sabre and Mystère IVA fighter-bombers and a training squadron of Mirage III-Bs. The air defence forces have 4 wings, with 3 squadrons of Super Mystères, 3 squadrons of Mirage III-Cs and 2 squadrons of Vautour fighters. The F-100 and Mystère IVA aircraft are being replaced progressively by Anglo-French single-seat Jaguars; the Mirage F.1 multi-mission fighter has begun re-equipping 6 of the air defence squadrons. The COTRAM is equipped with 4 wings of turboprop Transall C.160, Noratlas and DC-6 transports, supplemented by 2 groups of DC-8, Caravelle, Nord 262, Fan Jet Falcon, Cessna 411 and M.S. 760 Paris aircraft. Other units are equipped with many different types of close-support aircraft, Broussard observation and general-purpose monoplanes, and about 100 Alouette III and Puma helicopters. Training aircraft include Magister jet basic trainers and Mystère IVA, T-33 and Mirage III-B advanced trainers, and two-seat Jaguars.

Total aircraft in service in 1973, more than 2,000, with a first-line strength of 525 aircraft planned for 1975. Total personnel, about 105,000.

PLANNING. The post-war reconstruction and expansion of the French economy began under the guidance of the first 'Monnet plan' (1947-50), named after the then director of the planning office, Jean Monnet. This was followed by the second and third plans (1954-57, 1958-61), an intermediate plan for 1960 and 1961, the fourth plan, 1962-65, fifth plan, 1966-70 and sixth plan, 1971-75.

TRADE UNIONS. The most important trade unions are the Confédération Générale du Travail with a membership of 1m.; the Confédération Française des Travailleurs chrétiens (100,000); Confédération Française Démocratique du Travail with a membership of 500,000; the Confédération Générale du Travail Force Ouvrière with a membership of approximately 400,000. All these figures are estimates, as the French conception of trade-union freedom does not permit the State to demand a list of members from the organizations, and each of the Confédérations tends to claim the highest figure plausible. On the other hand, the number of cards taken out does not necessarily correspond to the number of members, and must be adjusted according to the number of monthly stamps distributed.

Other smaller union organizations are Confédération Générale des Cadres, Confédération Autonome du Travail, Confédération Générale des Syndicats and Fédération de l'Education Nationale.

On 2 Dec. 1945 a law was passed to nationalize the Banque de France and the 4 principal deposit banks—Crédit Lyonnais, Société Générale, Comptoir National d'Escompte and the Banque Nationale pour le Commerce et l'Industrie (the 2 last-named amalgamated on 1 July 1966 as the Banque Nationale de Paris). It also instituted strict Government control over the activities of all other banks and established a new body, the National Credit Council, composed of 35 members appointed by the State, to check the flow of credit in France.

The 12 directors of the nationalized banks are appointed by the State as follows: 3 by the Minister of Finance from persons in commerce, industry or agriculture; 3 by the trade unions, 1 of whom is an employee of the bank; 3 by the Minister of Finance in virtue of their bank experience; 3 representing the Bank of France or other semi-public credit concerns.

The following are the principal banks: Crédit Foncier de France, founded in 1852 (mortgage bank); Crédit Lyonnais, founded in 1863; Société Générale, founded in 1864; Banque Nationale de Paris (nationalized deposit banks); Crédit Industriel et Commercial; Crédit Commercial de France (non-nationalized deposit banks); Banque de Paris et des Pays Bas, and Banque de l'Union Parisienne.

The ordinary savings banks number about 600. In addition, the state savings organization (Caisse nationale d'épargne) is administered by the post office on a giro system. On 31 Dec. 1972 ordinary savings banks had 88,922m. francs in deposits; the state saving banks had 45,385m. francs in deposits.

GERMANY

POST-WAR HISTORY. Since the unconditional surrender of the German armed forces on 8 May 1945 there has been no central authority whose writ runs in the whole of Germany. Consequently no peace treaty has been signed with a government representing the whole of Germany, and the country is virtually partitioned between West Germany (Federal Republic of Germany) and East Germany (German Democratic Republic).

By the Berlin Declaration of 5 June 1945 the governments of the USA, the UK, the USSR and France assumed supreme authority over Germany. Each of the 4 signatories was given a zone of occupation, in which the supreme power was to be exercised by the C.-in-C. in that zone (see map in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1947). Jointly these 4 Cs.-in-C. constituted the Allied Control Council in Berlin, which was to be competent in all 'matters affecting Germany as a whole'. The territory of Greater Berlin, divided into 4 sectors, was to be governed as an entity by the 4 occupying powers.

At the Potsdam Conference (17 July-2 Aug. 1945) the northern part of the Province of East Prussia, including its capital Königsberg (renamed Kaliningrad), was transferred to the Soviet Union, pending final ratification by a peace treaty; and it was agreed that, pending the final peace settlement, Poland should administer those parts of Germany lying east of a line running from the Baltic Sea immediately west of Swinemünde along the river Oder to its confluence with the Western Neisse and thence along the Western Neisse to the Czechoslovak frontier.

The agreements between the war-time allies concerning the occupation zones (12 Sept. 1944) and control of Germany (1 May 1945) were repudiated by the USSR on 27 Nov. 1958.

A Treaty was signed in East Berlin between East and West Germany on 21 Dec. 1972 agreeing the basis of relations between the two countries.

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Bundesrepublik Deutschland

The Federal Republic of Germany became a sovereign independent country on 5 May 1955 and is a member of EEC, the Council of Europe, Western European Union, NATO, the European Coal and Steel Community, Euratom, the European Monetary Agreement and the Agencies of the UN.

In June 1948 the US, the UK and France agreed on a central government for the 3 western zones. An Occupation Statute, which came into force on 31 Sept. 1949, reduced the responsibilities of the occupation authorities. Formally, the Federal Republic of Germany came into existence on 21 Sept. 1949. The Petersberg Agreement of 22 Nov. 1949 freed the Federal Republic of numerous restrictions of the Occupation Statute. In 1951 the USA, the UK and France as well as other states terminated the state of war with Germany; the Soviet Union followed on 25 Jan. 1955. On 5 May 1955 the High Commissioners of the USA, the UK and France signed a proclamation revoking the Occupation Statute. On the same day, the Paris and London treaties, signed in Oct. 1954, came into force and established the sovereignty of the Federal Republic of Germany.

CONSTITUTION. The Constituent Assembly (known as the 'Parliamentary Council') met in Bonn on 1 Sept. 1948, and worked out a Basic Law which was approved by a two-thirds majority of the parliaments of the participating Länder and came into force on 23 May 1949.

The Basic Law (Grundgesetz) consists of a preamble and 146 articles. The first section deals with the basic rights which are legally binding for legislation, administration and jurisdiction.

The Federal Republic of Germany is a democratic and social federal state. The federal flag is black, red and golden. For the time being the Basic Law applies to the Länder Baden-Württemberg, Bavaria, Bremen, Greater Berlin (temporarily suspended), Hamburg, Hessen, Lower Saxony, North Rhine-Westphalia, Rhineland-Palatinate, Saarland and Schleswig-Holstein. The Basic Law decrees that the general rules of international law form part of the federal law. The constitutions of the Länder must conform to the principles of a republican, democratic and social state based on the rule of law. Executive power is vested in the Länder, unless the Basic Law prescribes or permits otherwise. Federal law supersedes Land law.

The organs of the Federal Republic are:

The Federal Diet (Bundestag), elected in universal, direct, free, equal and secret elections, for a term of 4 years.

The Federal Council (Bundesrat), consisting of members of the governments of the Länder. Each Land has at least 3 votes. Länder with more than 2m. inhabitants have 4, Länder with more than 6m. inhabitants have 5 votes.

The Federal President (Bundespräsident) is elected by the Federal Assembly for a term of 5 years and represents the Federal Republic in international relations. Re-election is admissible only once. The Federal Assembly (which meets only for the election of the Federal President) consists of the members of the Federal Diet and an equal number of members elected by the popular representative bodies of the Länder according to a particular system of semi-proportional representation.

The Federal Government consists of the Federal Chancellor, elected by the Federal Diet on the proposal of the Federal President, and the Federal Ministers, who are appointed and dismissed by the Federal President upon the proposal of the Federal Chancellor.

The Federal Republic has exclusive legislation on: (1) foreign affairs; (2) federal citizenship; (3) freedom of movement, passports, immigration and emigration, and extradition; (4) currency, money and coinage, weights and measures, and regulation of time and calendar; (5) customs, commercial and navigation agreements, traffic in goods and payments with foreign countries, including customs and frontier protection; (6) federal railways and air traffic; (7) post and telecommunications; (8) the legal status of persons in the employment of the Federation and of public law corporations under direct supervision of the Federal Government; (9) trade marks, copyright and publishing rights; (10) co-operation of the Federal Republic and the Länder in the criminal police and in matters concerning the protection of the constitution, the establishment of a Federal Office of Criminal Police, as well as the combating of international crime; (11) federal statistics.

JUSTICE. Justice is administered by the federal courts and by the courts of the Länder. In criminal procedures, civil cases and procedures of non-contentious jurisdiction the courts on the Land level are the local courts (Amtsgerichte), the regional courts (Landgerichte) and the courts of appeal (Oberlandesgerichte). On the federal level decisions regarding these matters are taken by the Federal Court (Bundesgerichtshof) at Karlsruhe. In labour law disputes the courts of the first and second instance are the labour courts and the Land labour courts and in the third instance, the Federal Labour Court (Bundesarbeitsgericht) at Kassel. Disputes about public law in matters of social security, unemployment insurance, maintenance of war victims and similar cases are dealt with in the first and second instances by the social courts and the Land social courts and in the third instance by the Federal Social Court (Bundessozialgericht) at Kassel. In most tax matters the finance courts of the Länder are competent and in the second instance, the Federal Finance Court (Bundesfinanzhof) at Munich. Other controversies of public law in non-constitutional matters are decided in the first and second instance by the administrative and the higher administrative courts (Oberverwaltungsgerichte) of the Länder, and in the third instance by the Federal Administrative Court (Bundesverwaltungsgericht) at Berlin.

For the inquiry into maritime accidents the admiralty courts (Seeämter) are competent on the Land level and in the second instance the Federal Admiralty Court (Bundesoberseeamt) at Hamburg.

The constitutional courts of the Länder decide on constitutional questions. The Federal Constitutional Court (Bundesverfassungsgericht) as the supreme German court decides such questions as loss of basic rights, unconstitutional character of political parties, validity of laws, charges against judges and complaints regarding violations of basic rights by the public force.

The death sentence is abolished. (It is retained in East Germany for espionage or sabotage and for treason.)

Debt Settlement. On 27 Feb. 1953 several agreements were signed in London settling Germany's external pre-war and post-war debts. These agreements entered into force on 16 Sept. 1953.

The claims arising from the post-war economic assistance given to Germany by the UK (£201.8m.), France ($15.79m.) and the USA ($3,014m.) were fixed at £150m., $11.84m. and $1,000m. respectively, of which only the claims of the USA bear interest at 2½%. Up to March 1961 the claims were paid off by regular and premature redemption as follows: Great Britain except for £67.5m., France except for $5,328,000 and the USA except for $787.37m. In April/May 1961 the Deutsche Bundesbank repaid on behalf of the Federal Republic the total claims of Great Britain and France and the amount of $587m. to the USA. The debt still outstanding on 30 Dec. 1966 (US$195.94m.) was also repaid by the Deutsche Bundesbank on behalf of the Federal Republic.

On 31 Dec. 1968 the London Debts Agreement of 27 Feb. 1953 was in force in a total of 56 foreign countries. 90% of all debts were claims of the USA, Great Britain, France and Switzerland.

Of the approximately DM 4,000m. of public pre-war debts, the sum of DM 1,705m. and of the approximately DM 2,200m. of private pre-war debts the amount of DM 253m. had still to be paid back on 31 Dec. 1968.

DEFENCE. The Paris Treaties, which entered into force in May 1955, stipulated a contribution of the Federal Republic to western defence within the framework of NATO and the Western European Union. In 1973 the Federal Defence Force (Bundeswehr) had a total strength of 475,000 all ranks.

Army. In 1973 the Army consisted of 13 armoured brigades, 12 armoured infantry brigades, 3 motorized rifle brigades, 2 mountain brigades, 3 airborne brigades; total strength 334,000.

The principal combat unit is now the self-sufficient brigade of 3,100-4,500 men; each has infantry, armoured infantry, tanks, conventional artillery, anti-aircraft and anti-tank weapons, reconnaissance, signalling and supply units. The new armoured division consists of 3 brigades. Eleven battalions are equipped with American Honest John and 4 battalions with Sergeant surface-to-air missiles. The Army has 1,050, M-48 A2 Patton and 2,200 Leopard medium tanks, 7,820 armoured personnel carriers and 1,100 tank destroyers.

Territorial Defence. This special organization is being established in order to relieve the operational forces of tasks incompatible with combat mobility. Personnel, 1973, was 35,000.

Navy. At the end of 1973 the Navy had 12 diesel-powered patrol submarines, 3 guided missile armed destroyers, 8 other destroyers, 6 frigates, 6 corvettes, a light cruiser type training ship, 13 escort and support ships, 24 coastal minesweepers, 29 fast minesweepers, 21 inshore minesweepers, 38 torpedo boats, 2 medium landing ships, 22 landing craft, 14 supply ships, 13 replenishment ships and oilers, 4 repair ships and 52 auxiliaries and service craft.

The new construction programme includes 18 submarines and 30 fast patrol boats (missile boats). The project to build 4 guided missile frigates has been cancelled.

The Naval Air Arm has 2 wings (each 2 squadrons of 18 aircraft) of F-104G Starfighters and 1 wing of Breguet Atlantic maritime patrol bombers, supplemented by an anti-submarine helicopter wing. Albatross amphibians and Do 27 aircraft form an air-sea rescue wing.

Navy personnel in 1973 totalled 4,550 officers and 31,450 men, including the Naval Air Arm.

Air Force. Since Oct. 1970, the Luftwaffe has comprised the following commands: German Air Force Tactical Command, German Air Force Support Command (including two German Air Force Regional Support Commands—North and South) and General Air Force Office. Its strength in mid-1973 was approximately 104,000 officers and other ranks and about 460 first-line combat aircraft. Combat units, including 10 heavy fighter-bomber squadrons, 8 light ground attack/reconnaissance squadrons, 4 reconnaissance squadrons, 2 missile groups, and an air defence force of 4 interceptor squadrons, 24 batteries of Nike-Hercules and 31 batteries of Hawk surface-to-air missiles, are assigned to NATO. There are 4 F-104G Starfighter interceptor squadrons (being re-equipped with F-4F Phantoms), 10 F-104G fighter-bomber squadrons (2 re-equipping with F-4Fs), 4 RF-4E Phantom reconnaissance squadrons and 8 light attack/reconnaissance squadrons of Fiat G 91s (2 re-equipping with F-4Fs). Two transport wings (each 2 squadrons of 18 aircraft) with turboprop Transall C-160 aircraft and 1 wing of 4 helicopter squadrons with UH-1D Iroquois add to the air mobility of the Bundeswehr. There are also VIP, support and light transport aircraft, and Piaggio P.149D and Do 27 initial training aircraft. Guided weapons in service include 2 wings of Pershing surface-to-surface missiles and 6 battalions of Nike-Hercules and 9 battalions of Hawk surface-to-air missiles.

A base was built in 1964 near Beja in Portugal, mainly for logistical purposes. All F-104 and Phantom pilots undergo basic and advanced training in USA.

In 1971 cities (i.e., communes of more than 10,000 inhabitants, including Greater Athens) had 4,667,489 inhabitants (53.2%), towns (i.e., communes with between 2,000 and 9,999 inhabitants), 1,028,769 (11.7%), villages and rural communities (under 2,000 inhabitants), 3,072,383 (35.1%).

Mount Athos, the easternmost of the three prongs of the peninsula of Chalcidice, is a self-governing community composed of 20 monasteries. (See THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1945, p. 983.) For centuries the peninsula has been administered by a Council of 4 members and an Assembly of 20 members, 1 deputy from each monastery. The Greek Government on 10 Sept. 1926 recognized this autonomous form of government; Articles 109-112 of the Constitution of 1927 gave legal sanction to the Charter of Mount Athos, drawn up by representatives of the 20 monasteries on 20 May 1924. Article 103 of the 1952 Constitution confirms the special status of Mount Athos.

VITAL STATISTICS (1971): 141,220 live births; 1,940 still births; 1,732 illegitimate births; 70,688 marriages; 73,795 deaths; 61,748 emigrants; 24,709 immigrants.

RELIGION. According to the census of 1961, there were 8,118,000 adherents of the Greek Orthodox Church, 35,000 Roman and Greek Catholics, 10,200 Armenians including 9,450 Monophysites, 15,000 Protestants, 8,000 Jehovah's Witnesses, 108,000 Moslems (300 mosques) and 5,800 Hebrews.

The Roman Catholics have 3 archbishops (in Naxos and Corfu and, not recognized by the State, in Athens) and 1 bishop (for Syra and Santorin). The Exarchs of the Greek Catholics and the Armenians are not recognized by the State.

Complete religious freedom is recognized by the Constitution of 1968, but proselytizing from, and interference with, the Greek Orthodox Church is forbidden.

Primary school teachers numbered 28,536. 5,047 nursery schools had 82,884 children. Secondary education is provided in public gymnasia for a further 6 years. It is divided into 2 three-year periods. At the end of the first 3 years, the pupils choose between the classical and practical streams of education, the former laying emphasis on classics and the latter on mathematics and science. DEFENCE. Military service (2 years) is compulsory, but not universal, between the ages of 18 and 50 (from 18 to 30 in the special reserves), and conscripts may be called upon for work in communications, reforestation and agriculture. The Army numbers 100,000, organized in 6 infantry, 1 parachute and 1 engineer battalions and some motorized units with some tanks. The Policía Nacional has between 2,000 and 3,000.

There is a small Air Force with 8 A-37B light attack aircraft, 1 C-54 and a squadron of C-47 transports, T-33 jet and T-6 piston-engined trainers, and a number of light aircraft and helicopters, including 6 UH-1 Iroquois. Total strength is about 1,000 personnel and 50 aircraft.

A Naval force was formed in 1959. In 1973 it comprised 4 very small patrol craft and 1 rescue boat. Personnel: 180 officers and men.

PRODUCTION. The Cordilleras divide Guatemala into two unequal drainage areas, of which the Atlantic is much the greater. The Pacific slope, though comparatively narrow, is exceptionally well watered and fertile between the altitudes of 1,000 and 5,000 ft, and is the most densely settled part of republic. The Atlantic slope is sparsely populated, and has little of commercial importance beyond the chicle and timber-cutting of the Petén, coffee cultivation of Cobán region and banana-raising of the Motagua Valley and Lake Izabal district.

PLANNING. A 5-year development plan (1971-75) is aimed at increasing the value of exports, improving the collection of revenues from taxation and making the best use of foreign credits (Q.453m. in the period) to bring about a cumulative annual growth rate of 7.8% in the GDP by 1975.

AGRICULTURE. The soil in general is exceedingly fertile and agriculture is the most important industry. But soil erosion is serious and a single week of heavy rains suffices to cause flooding of fields and much crop destruction.

On 17 June 1952 an 'Agrarian Reform Law' was enacted providing for the expropriation (with eventual compensation) of those parts of landed estates which were not under cultivation. The US Government in 1953 protested against the expropriation of 234,000 acres belonging to the United Fruit Company. Under the new government the expropriation was halted and the 'Agrarian Reform Law' was superseded by a 'Statute' early in 1956, which provided small holdings to several thousand peasant farmers. This distribution of land continues, now under the provisions of the 'Agrarian Transformation Law' of 1962. In 1966, 24 state farms and 17 farms owned by banks were transformed into co-operatives.

The principal crop is coffee; there are about 12,000 coffee plantations with 138m. coffee trees on about 338,000 acres, but 80% of the crop comes from 1,500 large coffee farms employing 426,000 workers. Coffee exports in 1971 were valued at Q.96.3m. mainly to USA and Germany.

Bananas are still an important export crop, but exports have at times been seriously reduced, partly by labour troubles and by hurricanes. Exports 1971 were worth Q.14.4m.

Cotton has become an important export and in 1971 were valued at Q.26m. Other important exports (1971) were sugar, Q.9.8m.; beef, Q.17.3m. Guatemala is, after Mexico, the largest producer of chicle gum (used for chewing-gum manufacture in USA). Rubber development schemes are under way, assisted by US funds. Tobacco output (all for home consumption) is about 5m. lb. grown on 8,300 acres. Guatemala is one of the largest sources of essential oils (citronella and lemon grass); exports in 1971 were valued at Q.2.4m. Cattle-grounds (potreros) occupy about 758,000 acres. It is calculated that there are some 1.4m. head of cattle (mostly beef) in the country.

FORESTRY. The forest area has an extent of 17,784,000 acres. The department of Petén is rich in mahogany and other woods.

FISHERIES. Exports were about Q.2.5m. in 1971.

MINING. Mineral production is limited to zinc and lead concentrates; exports (1969) Q.4.3m. In 1965 a subsidiary of International Nickel Co. of Canada was granted a 40-year concession to extract and process nickel ore in Northern Guatemala. Eventual production will be 50m. lb. a year.

POWER. 532m. kwh. of electricity were generated in 1971. A new thermo-electric plant of 14,000 kw. capacity was inaugurated at Escuintla in Sept. 1965 and another of 13,000 kw. at Los Esclavos on 24 Sept. 1966.

INDUSTRY. The principal industries are food and beverages, tobacco, chemicals, hides and skins, textiles, garments and non-metallic minerals. New industries include electrical goods, plastic sheet and metal furniture.

TOURISM. There were 420,000 foreign visitors in 1973 spending approximately US$50m.

TRADE UNIONS. Trade unions are small. In 1954 the trade unions were ordered to reorganize: there are now two main federations.

COMMERCE. Values in Q.1,000 (1 quetzal = US$1) were:

	1966	1967	1968	1969	1970	1971
Exports (f.o.b.)	226,120	197,934	222,231	255,355	290,181	283,231

Value (in Q.1,000) of principal imports, 1972: Chemicals, 65,046; foodstuffs, 24,361; petroleum products, 21,305. Chief exports are coffee (US$96.3m. in 1971), cotton, bananas, beef, essential oils, timber, chicle and shrimps. The main trading partners are USA and West Germany, and the partners of the Central American Common Market.

Total trade between Guatemala and UK for 6 years (in £1,000 sterling, British Board of Trade returns):

Imports to UK	1,047	799	859	1,093	1,884	4,667
Exports and re-exports from UK	4,063	3,545	4,150	6,432	4,724	5,145

SHIPPING. The chief ports on the Atlantic coast are Puerto Barrios and Santo Tomás de Castilla; on the Pacific coast, San José and Champerico. Total tonnage handled was, 1971, 1.6m. tons.

RAILWAYS. The principal railway system is the government-owned (since 1968) Ferrocarriles de Guatemala. All railways are of 3 ft gauge. Total length of all lines is about 500 miles. Passengers carried, 1972, numbered 1,284,800, and freight carried, 622,300 short tons. The bridge across the Suchiate River between Mexico and Guatemala in 1942 linked the railways of North and Central America, though differences in gauge make it necessary to change trains at Ayutla.

ROADS. In 1972 there were 13,449 km of roads, of which 2,552 are paved. There is a trunk highway from coast to coast via Guatemala City. There are 2 trunk highways from the Mexican to the Salvadorean frontier: the Pacific Highway serving the fertile coastal plain and the Pan-American Highway running through the highlands and Guatemala City. Motor vehicles number about 54,000.

AVIATION. The government-owned airline, Aviateca, furnishes both domestic and international services: 6 other airlines handle international traffic. In 1970 air cargo amounted to 4.8m. kg; number of passengers (1968), 160,562.

POST. The Government own and operate the telegraph and telephone services; there are (1972) 43,905 telephone instruments. There are some 70 broadcasting stations. Radio receiving sets in use, 1969, numbered about 250,000. There are 3 commercial television stations.

BANKING. By an Act effective 4 Feb. 1946 the Central Bank of Guatemala (founded in 1926 as a mixed central and commercial bank) was superseded by a new institution, the Banco de Guatemala, to operate solely as a central bank. Savings and term deposits at commercial banks were Q.207m. at the end of 1971. Total currency circulation (backed by a gold reserve fixed by law at a minimum of 40%) on 31 Dec. 1972 was Q.254·6m.; total net international reserves amounted to Q.119·5m. on 31 Dec. 1972. In July 1965 the country's quota with the IMF was increased from US$15m. to 25m.

There are 11 banks, including the Banco de Guatemala, Banco Nacional de Desahuallo, set up in 1971 to promote agricultural development, its counterpart for small industries (Banco de los Trabajadores) set up in Jan. 1966 with initial capital of US$1·3m., a branch of the Bank of London and Montreal Ltd and a branch of the Bank of America.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system has been officially adopted, but is little used in local commerce.

Libra of 16 oz.	= 1·014 lb.	League	= 3 miles
Arroba of 25 libras	= 25·35 lb.	Vara	= 32 in.
Quintal of 4 arrobas	= 101·40 lb.	Manzana	= 10,00 varas sq.
Tonelada of 20 quintals	= 18·10 cwt	Caballeria of 64 man-
Fanega	= 1½ Imp. bushels	zanas	= 110 acres

AREA AND POPULATION. The republic lies on the west coast between Portuguese Guinea and Sierra Leone.

The area is 245,857 sq. km (95,000 sq. miles), and the estimated population in 1968 was 3·8m. In 1964 Conakry, the capital, had approximately 120,000 inhabitants; Kankan, 29,100; Kindia, 25,000; Siguiri, 12,700; Labé, 12,500, and N'Zérékoré, 8,600 inhabitants.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The independent republic of Guinea was proclaimed on 2 Oct. 1958, after the territory of French Guinea had decided at the referendum of 28 Sept. to leave the French Community. The constitution provides for the limitation or renunciation of sovereignty in favour of African unity. This principle found expression in the agreements with Ghana (Nov. 1958) and Ghana-Mali (Dec. 1960).

Co-operation with France in economic and cultural matters was established by a convention signed on 22 May 1963.

The official language is French.

National flag: Red, gold, green (vertical).

The constitution of 12 Nov. 1958 declared Guinea 'a democratic, secular and social republic'. The President of the republic is elected for a 7-year term and can be re-elected.

President and Prime Minister: Sékou Touré (elected Jan. 1961, re-elected Jan. 1968).

Foreign Affairs: El Hadj Diallo Saifoulaye.

Elections for the National Assembly, held on 1 Jan. 1968, returned the 75 members (including 16 women) from the single official list of the Parti Démocratique de Guinée.

EDUCATION. There were, in 1963-64, 188,717 pupils in elementary schools and 6,678 in technical and secondary schools.

DEFENCE. The Army of 5,000 men has been equipped with Soviet, Czech and Chinese weapons, armoured cars and artillery.

An Air Force is being formed with Soviet assistance; it is reported to be equipped with 8 MiG-17 jet-fighters and MiG-15 UTI trainers, 2 Il-18 turboprop transports, 4 An-14 and 4 Il-14 piston-engined transports, all Russian built, plus a few helicopters, piston-engined Yak-18 and L-29 jet trainers. Personnel about 800.

AGRICULTURE. The chief products are rice, palm-nuts, bananas, coffee, pineapples, orange juice, groundnuts, millet. Coffee is grown in forest districts. There are experimental fruit gardens at Camayenne near Conakry, Kindia and Dalaba, 2 stations for rice selection (Kankan, Koba) and an experimental quinine station at Sérédou. Fouta Djallon contains cattle in abundance. In 1961 there were 1.5m. cattle, and in 1959, 546,756 sheep and goats.

POWER. Production of electrical energy was 10.6m. kwh. in 1955.

COMMERCE. In 1963 imports totalled 11,355m. Guinea francs; exports, 13,820m. Guinea francs. Of the imports, 34% came from USSR, 26% from France, 11% from West Germany, 10% from UK. Alumina forms about 60% of the exports.

HAITI

République d'Haiti

HISTORY. Haiti occupies the western third of the large island of Hispaniola which was discovered by Christopher Columbus in 1492. The Spanish colony was ceded to France in 1697 and became her most prosperous colony. After the extirpation of the Indians by the Spaniards (by 1533) large numbers of African slaves were imported whose descendants now populate the country. The slaves obtained their liberation following the French Revolution, but subsequently Napoleon sent his brother-in-law, Gen. Leclerc, to restore French authority and re-impose slavery. Toussaint Louverture, the leader of the slaves who had been appointed a French general and governor, was kidnapped and sent to France, where he died in gaol. However, the reckless courage of the Negro troops and the ravages of yellow fever forced the French to evacuate the island and surrender to the blockading British squadron.

The country declared its independence on 1 Jan. 1804, and its successful leader, Gen. Jean-Jacques Dessalines, proclaimed himself Emperor of the newly-named Haiti. After the assassination of Dessalines (1806) a separate régime was set up in the north under Henri Christophe, a Negro general who in 1811 had himself proclaimed King Henry. In the south and west a republic was constituted, with the mulatto Alexander Pétion as its first President. Pétion died in 1818 and was succeeded by Jean-Pierre Boyer, under whom the country became re-united after Henry had committed suicide in 1820. From 1822 to 1844 Haiti and the eastern part of the island (later the Dominican Republic) were united. After one more monarchical interlude, under the Emperor Faustin (1847-59), Haiti has been a republic. From 1915 to 1934 Haiti was under United States occupation.

AREA AND POPULATION. The area is 27,750 sq. km (10,700 sq. miles), of which about three-quarters is mountainous. The population was estimated in 1971 to be about 4.96m. (highest density in Latin America), of which 85% are living in rural areas. Infant deaths per 1,000 live births in 1970 were estimated at 147.

The country is divided into 9 Départements: the original Nord-Ouest, Artibonite, Nord, Ouest, Sud; plus (1962) Nord Est, Centre, Sud Est and Grande Anse; these latter 5 have not yet been delineated. The Ile de la Gonave, some 40 miles long, lies in the gulf of the same name. Among other islands is La Tortue, off the north peninsula. The majority of the population are Negroes, with an important minority of mulattoes and only about 3,000 white residents, almost all foreign. The capital, Port-au-Prince (Ouest) has an estimated population of 500,000; Cap Haitien (Nord), 30,000; Les Cayes (Sud), 14,000; Gonaïves (Artibonite), 14,000, and Jérémie (Sud), 12,000; Port de Paix (Nord-Ouest), 6,500.

Haiti is the only French-speaking republic in the Americas. The standard French of government, parliament and the press is spoken by the small literate minority, but the great majority of the people speak only the dialect known as Créole.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The 1950 constitution, under which Dr François Duvalier was elected president on 22 Oct. 1957, provided that no president was immediately re-eligible. The new constitution later in 1957 did not forbid re-election.

A single-chamber legislature of 58 deputies elected for a 6-year term was established in April 1961, and new chambers were elected in 1967 and 1973.

In 1964 the constitution was again rewritten and Dr Duvalier named Life President (22 June); the deputies were made capable of indefinite re-election.

President of the Republic: In April 1961 elections were held for the Legislative Chamber, and afterwards it was announced that Dr Duvalier had been re-elected President for a further 6 years (on 22 June 1964 extended to 'life'), although the next presidential election was not due until 1963 and there had been neither nominations nor campaign. (For the series of coups d'état in 1956-57, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1960, p. 1085.) Dr Duvalier died 21 April 1971. He was succeeded, as President for Life, by his son, Jean-Claude Duvalier whom he nominated as his successor under Article 102 of the 1964 Constitution as amended 14 Jan. 1971.

National flag: Black, red (vertical); in the centre, the coat of arms on a white square.

National anthem: 'La Dessalinienne': Pour le pays, pour les ancêtres (words by J. Lhérisson; tune by N. Geffrard, 1903).

RELIGION. Since the Concordat of 1860, the official religion is Roman Catholicism, under an archbishop with 5 suffragan bishops. There are still quite a number of foreigners, French and French Canadians mainly, among the clergy but the first Haitian archbishop took office in 1966. The Episcopal Church now has its first Haitian bishop who was consecrated in 1971. Other Christian churches number perhaps 10% of the population. The folk religion is Voodoo.

EDUCATION. The school system is modelled after that of France, with the country divided into 23 urban inspectors' districts, including the principal one in Port-au-Prince. The law calls for free and compulsory elementary education in the French language.

For the 1970-71 academic year, urban primary schools numbered 292 (197 laic and 95 religious) attended by 170,975 pupils. No statistics are available on the number of teachers in primary schools. There were, for the same period, at the secondary level, 21 national (public) lycées with 13,000 students (3,800 of them girls), 700 teachers (150 of them women). In the private secondary sector, 96 schools were reported with 18,000 students (1,150 girls), 900 teachers (200 women). Professional education is divided into 3 categories: (a) 41 pre-vocational schools; (b) 18 vocational schools which prepare trained workers, and (c) 5 vocational schools preparing technicians. There were also 10 licensed private commercial schools. The total number of students was 13,000, 2,000 of whom were in the private sector.

Adult education decreed by a law enacted in 1958 is under the responsibility of an autonomous organism related to the Ministry of Education called Office National d'Alphabétisation et d'Action Communautaire (ONAAC). According to statistics available at ONAAC, the number of illiterate adults, on 10 May 1971, was 1,916,685. During the 1970-71 academic year, 78,737 of them learned how to read Creole, thus becoming apt for the passage to French.

The country is divided into centres. The action of ONAAC extends, so far, to four-fifths of the Republic with 3,724 centres. 2,018 of them are presently active with an attendance of 50,793 adult pupils. Each centre has 1 teacher.

Rural education falls into the attributions of the Ministry of Agriculture. It is estimated that rural school population is about 1m. but only about 15% regularly attend class.

Higher education is offered at the following faculties of the University of Haiti: medicine and pharmacy, odontology (dentistry), science (engineering, architecture, natural sciences, physics, chemistry, biology) with a school of surveying, law and economic sciences, agronomy and veterinary medicine, ethnology, letters and pedagogy, and National School of Higher International Studies.

CINEMAS (1973). There were 16 cinemas and 4 drive-in cinemas in Port-au-Prince.

NEWSPAPERS (1973). There were 6 daily newspapers in Port-au-Prince, also a monthly in English and 1 weekly newspaper in Cap Haitien.

HEALTH. There were, in 1971, over 300 doctors in practice, 11 hospitals, 14 out-patient clinics, 160 rural clinics and 20 sanatoria. The hospitals total 2,600 beds, of which 145 were in private clinics.

JUSTICE. Judges, both of the lower courts and the court of appeal, are appointed by the President. The legal system is basically French. The divorce law has recently been amended to permit parties to obtain 'quick and painless' divorces at a moderate cost, in the hope of attracting the US trade, now that the Mexican 'divorce mills' have closed down. This has developed into a useful flow of dollar revenue.

Police. The Police number about 600 in Port-au-Prince and are part of the armed forces.

FINANCE. Currency. The unit of currency is the gourde and its value fixed at 5 gourdes = US$1. The total currency in circulation on 1 Oct. 1971 was 122,943.5m. gourdes in notes, and 10,174.2m. gourdes in coins. There are copper-nickel coins for 50, 20, 10 and 5 centimes and copper-zinc-nickel coins of 10 and 5 centimes. The amount of US currency in circulation is not known, due to the fact that it is used freely with the local currency, but it is legal tender.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure (fiscal year ending 30 Sept.) in US$1m. (5 gourdes = US$1), balanced as follows: 1970-71, 29.3; 1971-72, 29.6; 1972-73, 31.3; 1973-74, 33.2.

Proposed expenditures for the year 1972-73 (in US$1m.) are: Interior and defence, 8.8; health, 4.15; education, 4; debt service, 2.6; the chief sources of revenue are customs duties, 12.1; export taxes, 4, and excise taxes, 4. A revised income tax, on individuals and companies, became effective in April 1973. These figures do not give a full picture of Haiti's financial situation, since the State also draws substantial revenue from other sources, mainly the tobacco monopoly, which deals in various fields besides tobacco; these revenues are 'unfiscalized' and neither the amount realized nor the purposes for which the money is spent are made public. In 1972 the regular budget showed a contribution, for the first time, of US$600,000 from the funds of Régie du Tabac.

The development budget (1973-74) balanced at US$37.9m. and includes US$23.5m. in foreign aid.

The total public debt at May 1972 was approximately US$92m., of which $42m. is owed abroad.

DEFENCE. The Haitian Defence Force (Forces Armées d'Haiti) totalling about 6,400 men, is divided into Army, Navy, and Air Force. The President is Commander-in-Chief and appoints the officers.

Army. Total strength about 5,780 organized into 9 Military Departments and the 'Leopards'. Three of the Departments are in Port-au-Prince and consist of the Presidential Guard (4 Companies); the Dessalines Barracks (7 Companies including the Dessalines Battalion and Headquarters troops); and the Port-au-Prince Police (6 Companies in blue uniforms.) The other 6 Military Departments are located outside Port-au-Prince; their troops (20 Companies) operate as District Police. The Fire Brigade and the Prison Guard Company are also part of the Armed Forces. Only the Presidential Guard, the Dessalines Battalion and the Leopards (one company of 'Commandos' or Special Forces) with a second company of about 200 recruits, now in training, have any potential for tactical military operations. They are armed mainly with light infantry weapons but have a few elderly pieces of light artillery and 9 light tanks.

Air Force. Total strength is about 180, including 22 qualified pilots, and about 30 aircraft, all piston-engined, of which some 23 are operational. They include 5 C-47 transports, 1 P-51 Mustang fighter-bomber, 1 B-25 bomber, 6 newly-acquired T-28s, 5 S-58 helicopters and 1 Hughes 269A training helicopter.

Navy. The coastguard of 40 officers and 250 men has 6 patrol vessels, of which 3 are operational, a landing craft transport in reserve and a yacht.

Militia. There is in addition a volunteer civilian force, the Volontaires de la Sécurité Nationale, whose total strength is now estimated at about 5,000–7,000, about half of whom have access to antiquated rifles. This force, formerly of some importance as Dr François Duvalier's 'private army' of tough, devoted followers (sometimes called Tontons Macoute or Bogeymen) is much less prominent since his death, having been reduced in strength and reorganized under Defence Force Headquarters on lines roughly parallel to the regional Military Departments.

AGRICULTURE. Only one-third of the country is arable and most people own the tiny plots they farm; the resulting pressure of population is the main cause of rural poverty. Number of farms is estimated at over 500,000.

The occupations of Haiti are nine-tenths agricultural, carried on in 7 large plains, from 200,000 to 25,000 acres, and in 15 smaller plains down to 2,000 acres. Irrigation is used in some areas. Haiti's most important product is coffee of good quality, classified as 'mild', and grown by peasants. Production in 1971–72 totalled 540,000 bags (of 60 kg). Second most important crop is sugar. Sisal is grown extensively. Most of the fibre is exported as or for cordage. New types of cotton are being tried with success. New varieties of rice should significantly boost future production, especially in the Artibonite Valley. Output of main crops in 1971–72 (short tons) was: Sugar, 75,400; sisal, 20,000; (metric tons) cocoa, 3,300; tobacco, 2,300; maize, 265,000; rice, 92,000.

Rum and other spirits are distilled. Essential oils from lime, vetiver, neroli and amyris are becoming important. Cattle and horse breeding are encouraged.

MINING. A US company is engaged in mining bauxite (720,400 metric tons in 1972). A Canadian firm mining copper (144,430 metric tons in 1970) had to suspend operations at the end of 1971, as uneconomical because of the world price of copper. Haiti may possess undeveloped mineral resources of oil, gold, silver, antimony, sulphur, coal and lignite, nickel, gypsum and porphyry.

INDUSTRY. Light manufacturing industries assembling or finishing goods for re-export constitute the fastest growing sector. Their foreign exchange earnings are second only to those of coffee. There are 2 textile mills producing cheap denim with a total of 550 looms and 14,000 spindles. Soap factories produce approximately 10,000 cases of 200 11-oz. bars per month. A cement factory located near the capital produces approximately 300,000 tons per year. There are also a pharmaceutical plant, a tannery, a plastics plant, 2 paint works, 2 shoe factories, a large factory producing enamel cookingware, 2 pasta-making factories, a tomato cannery and a flourmill (with plans for expansion), all located in or near Port-au-Prince.

TOURISM. In 1973, 206,000 tourists visited Haiti.

ELECTRICITY. The new hydro-electric plant at Péligre, which was inaugurated in July 1971, provides some 30m. kw. to the capital. Capacity will rise to 45m. kw. when the third turbine is ready to operate early in 1974. The thermal plant in Port-au-Prince, formerly US and now State owned, is now on standby for emergencies. Generating capacity at Cap Haitien is 3.1m. kw.

LABOUR. Trade unions were recognized in Feb. 1946. Strong government influence is exercised over the insignificant portion of the labour force that is unionized and organized labour has virtually no strength in Haiti.

COMMERCE. Imports and exports for fiscal years ending 30 Sept. (in US$1m.):

	1967	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972
Imports	37.9	36.6	43.5	59.1	63.5	70.4
Exports	32.3	35.7	37.0	39.6	47.1	42.7

Chief exports from Haiti during the period 1 Oct. 1971–30 Sept. 1972 were (in US$1m.) as follows: Coffee, 14.7; light industrial products assembled for re-export, 16 (estimate); bauxite, 6.3; sugar, 3.4; essential oils, handicrafts, sisal and sisal products are also normally significant.

Of total imports in 1970, USA supplied 54% (1971, 44%), Japan 10%, Canada 8%, UK 4.2%; of exports, the main destinations were: USA 51%, (1971, 62%), Belgium 11.6%, France 8%, UK 0.6%.

The leading imports are foodstuffs, textiles, machinery, mineral oils, raw materials for transformation industries and vehicles.

Total trade between Haiti and UK in £1,000 sterling (British Board of Trade returns):

	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	178	178	144	62	74	154
Exports and re-exports from UK	689	816	976	1,170	1,280	1,470

SHIPPING. US, French, W. German, Dutch, British, Canadian and Japanese lines connect Haiti with the US, Latin America (except Cuba), Canada, Jamaica, Europe and the Far East.

ROADS. Total length of roads is some 4,000 km, little of which is practicable in ordinary motors. Four-wheel drive vehicles are widely used as well as lorries. There are about 15,500 vehicles in Haiti.

RAILWAYS. The only railway is owned by the Haitian American Sugar Company.

AVIATION. An airport capable of handling jets was opened at Port-au-Prince in 1965. US and French carriers provide daily direct services to New York, Miami, Jamaica, Puerto Rico and the French Antilles. There are also services to the Dominican Republic, the Bahamas and the Netherlands Antilles. A Haitian company provides a cargo service to the US and Puerto Rico. Air services connecting Port-au-Prince with other Haitian towns are operated at present under contract, by Turks and Caicos Airways.

POST. Most principal towns are connected by the government telegraph system, telephones and wireless. Cables run from Port-au-Prince to Puerto Plata (Dominican Republic) and to New York and South America.

The telephone company, of which the Haitian Government is now the majority stockholder, is in process of being reorganized and modernized under Canadian management. A new exchange has been installed in Pétionville and work on the new exchange for Port-au-Prince is in progress.

BANKING. The Banque Nationale de la République d'Haiti, owned by the State, was established 21 Oct. 1910 with a capital of US$5m., and has a monopoly of the note issue. US dollars may be included in the minimum required reserves. Reserves totalled US$20m. in Oct. 1972. The Royal Bank of Canada has a branch at Port-au-Prince, the First National City Bank of New York opened a branch in 1971, the Bank of Nova Scotia in 1972, and the Bank of Boston in 1973. The Banque de l'Union Haïtienne (mainly local capital with participation from American, Canadian and Dominican Republic Banks) also opened in 1973.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system is officially accepted.

HONDURAS

República de Honduras

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. On 5 Nov. 1838 Honduras declared itself an independent sovereign state, free from the Federation of Central America, of which it had formed a part.

Until the change of Government on 4 Dec. 1972, legislative power had been vested in a single chamber, the Congress of Deputies consisting of 64 members, chosen for 6 years by popular vote, in the ratio of 1 per 30,000 inhabitants. It used to meet for 180 days beginning 26 May and ending 26 Oct. A permanent commission of 5 members used to sit while Congress was not in session for the transaction of routine or emergency business. All men and women over 18 are entitled to vote.

In March 1971, Dr Ramón Ernesto Cruz (National Party) was elected President, defeating Dr Jorge Bueso Arias (Liberal Party). The former President, Gen. López, who was debarred from standing for re-election in 1971, seized power in a bloodless coup on 4 Dec. 1972. Since that date Congress has been suspended and Government is by decree.

Chief of State: Gen. Oswaldo López Arellano.

National flag: Blue, white, blue (horizontal; 5 blue stars arranged saltire-wise in the middle).

National anthem: Tu bandera es un lampo de cielo (words by A. C. Coello; tune by C. Hartling).

AREA AND POPULATION. Area is 112,088 sq. km (43,227 sq. miles), with a population, census estimate (30 June 1973) of 2·8m. (24 per sq. km).

The capital of Honduras is Tegucigalpa, with (30 June 1973) a population of 274,850. The next most important town is San Pedro Sula, 133,730. The main ports are Amapala (6,900) on the Pacific, and, on the Atlantic, La Ceiba (44,057), Puerto Cortés (29,981) and Tela (19,658). The port of entry for the Bay Islands is Roatán.

The republic is divided into 18 departments with their populations: Francisco Morazán (483,200); Atlántida (139,700); Colón (64,700); Comayagua (143,999); Copán (176,899); Cortés (311,599); Choluteca (227,601); El Paraíso (149,599); Gracias a Dios (17,801); Intibucá (95,301); Islas de La Bahía (10,100); La Paz (70,200); Lempira (144,899); Ocotepeque (63,300); Olancho (151,800); Santa Barbara (240,399); Valle (106,800); and Yoro (179,501).

Aboriginal tribes number over 35,000, principally Miskito, Payas and Xicaques Indians and Sambos (the latter a mixture of Miskito and Negro), each speaking a different dialect. The Spanish-speaking inhabitants are chiefly mestizos, Indians with an admixture of Spanish blood. Gracias a Dios is still practically unexplored and is inhabited by pure native races who speak little or no Spanish.

In 1971 there were 117,430 live births and 20,405 deaths. Crude birth rate was 45·2 per 1,000 population; crude death rate, 7·9; marriage rate, 33; infant mortality rate, 39·5 per 1,000 live births.

RELIGION. Roman Catholicism is the prevailing religion, but the constitution guarantees freedom to all creeds, and the State does not contribute to the support of any.

EDUCATION. Instruction is free, compulsory (from 7 to 15 years of age) and secular. In 1973 the 4,151 primary schools had 420,000 children (12,000 teachers); the 154 secondary, normal and technical schools had 45,000 pupils (2,983 teachers); the teachers' college had 1,025 students (59 teachers); 6 university faculties (1973) had 8,070 students (427 teachers) at Tegucigalpa offering economics, engineering, law, medicine, dentistry, chemistry and pharmacy. Other courses offered are: Public administration, journalism, business administration, auditing and accounting, nursing, psychology, mechanical engineering, social service, agronomy (La Ceiba) and economics (San Pedro Sula).

The illiteracy rate was 50% of those 10 years of age and older in 1970.

CINEMAS (1972). Cinemas numbered about 46 with seating capacity of some 40,000.

NEWSPAPERS (1973). The 5 most important daily papers are El Día, El Cronista and La Noticia in Tegucigalpa, La Prensa and El Tiempo in San Pedro Sula. Several others exist but their circulation is low and their influence is very limited.

JUSTICE. The judicial power resides in the Supreme Court, with 7 judges elected by the National Congress for 6 years; It appoints the judges of the courts of appeal, labour tribunals and the district attorneys who, in turn, name the justices of the peace.

FINANCE. Currency. The unit of the monetary system is the lempira also known as a peso, comprising 100 centavos. Notes are issued by the Banco Central de Honduras which has the sole right to issue, in denominations of 100, 50, 20, 10, 5 and 1 lempiras. Coins in circulation are 50 and 20 centavos in silver, 10 and 5 centavos in cupro-nickel and 2 and 1 centavos in copper.

Rate of exchange. Oct. 1972: 2 lempiras = US$1, 4·86 lempiras = £1.

Budget. The fiscal and calendar years have coincided since 1 Jan. 1957. Recent budgets (in 1m. lempiras) balance as follows: 1971, 240·8; 1972, 267·3; 1973, 272·2; 1974, 329·1.

The largest sources of income (1972) were (in 1m. lempiras): Import duties, 51·7; income tax, 39·6; production taxes, 68·8.

Total internal debt stood at the end of Dec. 1972 at 142m. lempiras, and net reserves of foreign currency at 31 Dec. 1972 at 73·4m. lempiras.

DEFENCE. Army. Every male citizen is liable to serve in the Army from the age of 18 to 50. Service in the active Army is for approximately 1 year. Although there is no actual reserves programme, those men who have served on active duty for 1 year or more, are eligible for recall. The size of the regular Army is approximately 4,500 men; this does not include the National Police Force, which numbers 2,500. The Army is organized into 3 battalions and minor units.

Air Force. Equipment, all of US origin, includes a small number of F-86K all-weather jet fighters (reportedly in store) and 7 Corsair piston-engined fighter-bombers, 1 B-26 light bomber, 1 C-54 and 7 C-47 transports, T-41A and T-6 trainers. Total strength is about 900 personnel, of whom 400 are civilian maintenance staff.

AGRICULTURE. Although Honduras is essentially an agricultural country, less than a quarter of the total land area is cultivated and by far the larger portion of this is on the Caribbean and Pacific coastal plains. The chief products exported during 1972 were (in 1m. lempiras): Bananas, 176·9; coffee, 54·5; cotton, 1·4; maize, 1·3; beans, 4; tobacco, 4·4; sugar, 4·1; tinned fruit, 4·6.

FORESTRY. Forests cover nearly 45% of the total land area. Honduras has an abundance of hard- and softwoods. Large stands of mahogany and other hardwoods—granadino, guayacán, walnut and rosewood—grow in the north-eastern part of the country, in the interior valleys, and near the southern coast. Stands of pine occur almost everywhere in the interior, but are severely damaged by bark beetle and fires. In 1972, total wood exports amounted to 54·2m. lempiras.

FISHERIES. Commercial fishing in territorial waters is restricted to Honduran nationals and Honduran companies in which the controlling share of the capital is owned by a Honduran national. 2,206,043 kg (6·58m. lempiras) of shrimp, fish and other sea foods were exported in 1971.

MINING. Mineral resources include gold, silver, lead, tin, zinc and mercury, which are exported. There are probably reserves of other minerals which have not yet been exploited. The Rosario Resources Company, which owned and operated the famous Rosario mines near Tegucigalpa from 1882 to 1954, developed and now operates a mine at El Mochito (Department of Santa Barbara) while the Compañía Minera Los Angeles SA has a mine currently extracting lead, zinc and silver at Valle de Angeles (Department of Francisco Morazán).

INDUSTRY. Small-scale local industries include beer and mineral waters, cement, flour, vegetable lard, coconut oil, sweets, cigarettes, cigars, textile and clothing, panama hats, plastics, nails, matches, plywood, furniture, paper bags, soap, candles, fruit juices and household chemicals. An important hydro-electric scheme has been built at Rio Lindo to serve the Central and North Coast regions. A small integrated steel-mill may be erected in Agalteca (Department of Francisco Morazán).

LABOUR. The organization of trade unions was begun in 1954 with the assistance of ORIT (Inter-American Regional Organization) sponsored by the USA trade unions. In 1972 there were 166 trade unions, of which only 119 were active, with about 67,956 members. A 'Charter of Labour' was granted in Feb. 1955 and an advanced Labour Code and Social Security Bill passed into law in May 1959. A Ministry of 'Labour, Social Assistance and the Middle Class' was created in 1955; the last four words of its title were expunged in 1957.

COMMERCE. Imports and exports (including re-exports) for fiscal years (in Im. lempiras):

Exports and re-exports from UK	1,293	1,506	1,445	2,197	1,522

ROADS. Honduras is connected with Guatemala, El Salvador and Nicaragua by the Pan-American Highway. Out of a total of 3,500 miles of road, 730 are paved. There are good asphalted highways between Puerto Cortés in the north and Choluteca in the south passing through San Pedro Sula and Tegucigalpa with branches to Guatemala and El Salvador.

RAILWAYS. Only 3 railways exist; they are confined to the north coastal region and are used mainly for transportation of bananas. Tegucigalpa, the capital, is not served by any railway, and there are no international railway connexions. The total railways operating at Dec. 1971 were 347 km.

SHIPPING. Sailings to the Atlantic coast port of Puerto Cortés from Europe are frequent, mainly operated by Cia Generale Transatlantique, the Royal Netherlands Steamships Co., Hapag Lloyd and vessels owned or chartered by the United Fruit Co. and the Standard Fruit Co.

AVIATION. Over a large part of the country the aeroplane is the normal means of transport for both passengers and freight. There are international airports at Tegucigalpa, San Pedro Sula, La Ceiba and over 30 smaller airstrips in various parts of the country.

POST. The Government at April 1972 operated 18,845 km of telephone lines and 12,526 km of telegraph lines. Number of government telephones in use, 1972, 15,534; telephone exchanges, 52; number of telegraph offices, 210; combined telephone and telegraph offices, 179. There are 421 post offices and agencies, 100 commercial broadcasting stations. Commercial television began with a station in Tegucigalpa in Sept. 1959. There were 5 commercial channels and about 27,000 receivers in use. Transmission in colour commenced mid-1973.

BANKING. The central bank of issue is the Banco Central de Honduras. The Banco Atlántida (controlled by Chase Manhattan) has branches in Tegucigalpa, San Pedro Sula, Comayagua, Puerto Cortés, La Ceiba, Tela, El Progreso, Choluteca and other towns. The Banco de Honduras which operates in many parts of the country is controlled by the First National City Bank of New York. The Bank of America has branches in Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula. The Bank of London and Montreal has branches in Tegucigalpa, San Pedro Sula, Comayaguera and La Ceiba. The Central American Bank for Economic Integration has its head office in Tegucigalpa.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system has been legal since 1 April 1897, but English pounds and yards and the old Spanish system are still in use: 1 vara = 32 in.; 1 manzana (10,000 sq. varas) = 700 sq. metres; 1 arroba = 25 lb.; 1 quintal = 100 lb.; 1 tonelada = 2,000 lb.

HUNGARY

Magyar Népköztársaság

HISTORY. Hungary first became an independent kingdom in 1001. For events in Hungary since 1918 see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1945, pp. 1006-7, and 1957, p. 1096.

On 23 Oct. 1956 an anti-Stalinist revolution broke out, and the newly formed coalition government of Imre Nagy on 1 Nov. withdrew from the Warsaw Pact and asked the United Nations to protect Hungarian neutrality. János Kádár, one of Nagy's ministers, formed a counter-government on 3 Nov. and asked the Soviet Government for support. Russian troops suppressed the revolution and abducted Nagy and his Ministers, who were later secretly executed.

On 7 Sept. 1967 the Soviet-Hungarian treaty of friendship (first signed in 1948) was renewed for a further 20 years.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. On 1 Feb. 1946 the National Assembly proclaimed a republic.

The present People's Republic was established by a constitution adopted on 18 Aug. 1949. Supreme power is vested in Parliament. Parliament elects a Presidential Council, which exercises the functions of Parliament between sessions. It can dissolve government bodies and annul legislation. The 1949 Constitution was amended in 1972. The distinction between 'working people' and 'citizens' disappears. Citizens are stated to have both indirect (through elected representatives) and direct (through local and enterprise councils) democratic rights. State and co-operative property are recognized as co-existing with equal status. Personal property is 'recognized and protected' up to the limit set by law (this includes for private artisans, places of business and machinery).

Ethnic minorities have equal rights and education in their own tongue.

National flag: Red, white and green (horizontal).

National anthem: God bless the Hungarians—Isten áldd meg a magyart (words by Ferenc Kölcsey, tune by Ferenc Erkel).

Chairman of the Presidential Council (Head of State): Pál Losonczi, appointed on 14 April 1967. Deputy Chairmen: Sándor Gáspár and Ödön Kisházi.

In 1949 the Hungarian Working People's Party (Communists), the Small-holders' Party, the National Peasant Party, the Trade Union Federation, the Association of Working Peasants, the Democratic Women's Association and the Federation of Working Youth were merged in the Hungarian People's Independence Front. In 1954 a new comprehensive organization was formed, the People's Patriotic Front. The Communist Youth Association (Kisz) had 800,000 members in 1970.

The Communist Party was reorganized after the 1956 revolution and changed its name to 'Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party'. It had 662,397 members in 1970. Supreme de facto power is in the hands of the Party's Politburo, composed in March 1973 of: János Kádár, First Secretary of the Central Committee; György Aczel; Antal Apró; Valéria Benke; Béla Biszku; Lajos Fehér; Jenő Fock; Sándor Gáspár; Gyula Kállai; Zoltan Komocsin; Dezső Nemes; Károly Nemeth; Rezső Nyers.

The Government was in March 1974 composed as follows:

Prime Minister: Jenő Fock.

Deputy Prime Ministers: Milkós Ajtai, Lajos Fehér, Mátyás Timár, István Huszár. Finance: Lajos Faluvégi. Foreign Affairs: Frigyes Puja. Chairman, State Planning Commission: György Lázár. Speaker, National Assembly: Antal Apró. Interior: András Benkei. Culture: Miklós Nagy. Defence: Gen. Lajos Czinege. Foreign Trade: József Biró. Justice: Mihály Korom.

Parliament consists of 352 deputies, elected for a 4-year term by all citizens over 18 years. The latest elections were held on 25 April 1971. 7,334,918 votes were cast (i.e., 98.7% of the electorate).

Since 1970 the right to select candidates is vested solely in pre-election nomination meetings open to all voters. Since 1967 more than one candidate has been permitted to stand in each constituency. Such 'alternative' candidates must receive 30% of the votes at nomination meetings. All candidates must support the Patriotic Front. To be elected candidates must gain at least 50% of the votes cast. In 1971 alternative candidates stood in 48 constituencies.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. Hungary is administratively divided into the capital, Budapest, 19 counties (megyek) and 5 county boroughs (large towns with county status), which are subdivided into districts, towns and boroughs. Councils for the 3 latter are elected for 4-year terms, and in turn elect Executive Committees to carry on day-to-day administration and the members of the county councils. The elections of 5 April 1973 were held after only 2 years so that local elections should no longer coincide with general elections.

AREA AND POPULATION. The peace treaty of 10 Feb. 1947 restored the frontiers as of 1 Jan. 1938. The area of Hungary is 93,030 sq. km (35,911 sq. miles). The official language is Hungarian (Magyar), a member of the Finno-Ugrian group.

At the census of 1 Jan. 1970 the population was 10,314,152 (4,991,000 males and 5,323,000 females). Population in 1973: 10,415,000.

45% of the population is urban (19% in Budapest). Population density, 112 per sq. km. Birth rate, 1972, 14.7 per 1,000; growth rate, 3.3%; expectation of life: males, 66; females, 72. In 1970 there were some 1.25m. Hungarian émigrés. There are Hungarian minorities in Romania, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia.

Vital statistics, 1972: Births, 154,451; marriages, 97,671; divorces, 23,960; deaths, 123,009; infant mortality, 35 per 1,000 live births.

Ethnic minorities in 1970 (in 1,000): Germans, 220; Slovaks, 100; Croats and Serbs, 100; Romanians, 25.

RELIGION. All religions have equal standing. Each church receives state subsidies totalling in all some 80m. forints per annum, of which half goes to the Roman Catholic Church.

High church appointments require the consent of the Presidential Council. Lower ones are ratified by the State Office for Church Affairs. Certain appointments become valid if the Office makes no comment within 15 days, and for the most minor church appointments neither state consent nor prior notification is required. Ecclesiastics are required to take an oath of allegiance to the state.

In 1964 by an agreement with the Vatican the Pope appointed an archbishop and 5 bishops, who took the oath of allegiance to the state. By further agreements of 1969 and 1972 the hierarchy was increased to 2 archbishops (Kalocsa, Eger), 3 bishops, 4 apostolic administrators and 4 auxiliaries.

In Feb. 1974 the Pope removed Cardinal Mindszenty from the post of Primate of Hungary and appointed an apostolic administrator to his diocese. The Vatican has lifted its excommunication of priests who work with the government.

Estimates (1956) of Church membership: Roman Catholics, 6.2m.; Reformed, 2m.; Lutherans, 433,000; Orthodox, 273,000; Baptists, 35,000; Seventh-Day Adventists, 14,000; Methodists, 2,500; Jews, 80,000.

EDUCATION. Education is free and compulsory from 6 to 16. 'General' schooling ends at 14; secondary schooling is available at general, technical, apprentices' or continuation schools.

In 1972-73 there were 3,642 kindergartens with 14,846 teachers and 277,000 pupils; 5,197 general schools with 64,002 teachers and 1.04m. pupils; 540 secondary schools with 13,687 teachers and 346,543 pupils; 158 continuation schools with 3,992 pupils.

There are 4 universities proper (Budapest, Pécs, Szeged, Debrecen), and 14 specialized universities (6 technical, 4 medical, 3 arts, 1 economics). At these and at 24 other institutions of higher education there were, in 1972-73, 90,857 students and 10,778 teachers. There were 13 teacher-training colleges with 13,363 students.

CINEMAS (1972). There were 3,756 cinemas; attendance totalled 74m. 43 full-length feature films were made.

NEWSPAPERS. In 1972 there were 29 dailies and 468 other periodicals. The Party daily is Népszabadság ('People's Freedom') (average daily circulation, 756,000).

LIBRARIES. There are 5,260 public, 3,585 trade union and 1,624 research and professional libraries.

SOCIAL WELFARE. Medical treatment is free. Patients bear 15% of the cost of medicines. Sickness benefit is 75% of wages, old age pensions (at 60 for men, 55 for women) 60-70%. In 1972, 37m. forints were paid out in social insurance benefits.

Family allowances (per month) were raised on 1 Jan. 1973 to 350 forints for a second child, 560 forints for a third and 730 forints for a fourth.

In 1972 there were 24,930 doctors and dentists and 86,111 hospital beds.

JUSTICE. The administration of justice is the responsibility of the Procurator-General, who is elected by Parliament for a term of 6 years. Civil and criminal cases fall under the jurisdiction of the district courts, county courts and the Supreme Court in Budapest. Criminal proceedings are dealt with by district courts through 3-member councils and by county courts and the Supreme Court in 5-member councils.

District Courts act only as courts of first instance; county courts as either courts of first instance or of appeal. The Supreme Court acts normally as an appeal court, but may act as a court of first instance in cases submitted to it by the Public Prosecutor. All courts, when acting as courts of first instance, consist of 1 professional judge and 2 people's assessors, and, as courts of appeal, of 3 professional judges. Local government Executive Committees may try petty offences.

District or county judges and assessors are elected by the district or county councils, all members of the Supreme Court by Parliament.

There are also military courts of the first instance. Military cases of the second instance go before the Supreme Court.

Judges are appointed for life, subject to removal for disciplinary reasons.

FINANCE. Currency. A decree of 26 July 1946 instituted a new monetary unit, the forint subdivided into 100 fillér. The official rate of exchange is 28.2 forints to the £ sterling, 10.81 forints = US$1, 13 forints = 1 rouble. Tourist rate: 60 forints = £1 sterling, 27.63 forints = US$1.

Budget. The budget for calendar years was as follows (in 1,000m. forints):

	1966	1967	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972
Revenue	95.51	104.75	137.282	154.219	171.900	193.061	209.400
Expenditure	95.41	104.70	138.768	155.929	175.700	195.226	212.000

1972 revenue included 93,500m. forints from enterprises. Expenditures: Capital accumulation, 45,900m.; social services, 39,000m.; education, 17,000m.

Hungary settled its debt to the UK in 1967. By an agreement of 6 March 1973 Hungary is to meet claims of US$ 18.9m. arising from war damage and nationalization in 20 yearly instalments.

DEFENCE. The 1947 Treaty authorized Hungary to have an army up to a strength of 65,000 personnel, and an air force of 90 aircraft, of which not more than 70 may be combat types, with a personnel strength of 5,000.

Army. Hungary is divided into 4 army districts: Budapest, Debrecen, Kiskunfélegyháza, Pécs. The strength of the Army is 90,000 men. It is organized in 1 tank and 4 motorized divisions, with about 1,500 T-54 and T-55 tanks. Active military service begins at the age of 18 and lasts 2 years and in some specialist branches 3 years.

Navy. In 1969 it was officially stated by the Hungarian Embassy in London that there were no longer any fighting ships in Hungary since the small fleet had been dispersed. In 1970 it was stated that there were no plans to enter new naval vessels into service; but there is a para-military marine service of about 500 officers and men operating as river monitors and watch pickets, constituting the River Guard, and Army vessels are active along the Danube.

Air Force. The Air Force is an integral part of the Army, with a strength of about 12,000 officers and men and 110 combat aircraft, in 2 fighter divisions. The interceptor division has 3 regiments of MiG-21 and MiG-17 fighters. Su-7 fighter-bombers are replacing MiG-17s in the other division. Transport units are equipped with An-2, Il-14 and Li-2 (DC-3) aircraft. Other types in service include Ka-26, Mi-4 and Mi-8 helicopters and L-29 Delfin and MiG-15UTI trainers. 'Guideline' surface-to-air missiles are also operational.

The security police (BKH) was reformed after the revolution of 1956 and now comes under the Ministry of the Interior.

The Militia has been taken over by the ordinary police and the Workers' Militia, a para-military organization armed with automatic weapons. Its strength in 1966 was about 35,000.

Three Soviet divisions are stationed in Hungary.

PLANNING. For details of past plans see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1970-71. A 'New Economic Mechanism' came into effect on 1 Jan. 1968. It restricts central direction to overall policies, replaces direct by financial control and gives local managers more initiative. This policy has succeeded in increasing investment and industrial growth and raised the standard of living, although measures of price and wage restraint became necessary in 1973. The fourth 5-year plan (1971-75) gives priority to power production and the chemical, aluminium and motor industries. Industrial production is scheduled to rise by 32%, agricultural production by 15%, national income by 30%, of which 75% is earmarked for investment.

AGRICULTURE. The large private holdings which characterized pre-war agriculture were broken up by the Communist government and distributed as individual smallholdings. After 1950 this policy was superseded by collectivization. A land law of 1968 permits collectives to own land, and guarantees individuals' rights to private plots. Collectives meet in a National Council of Agricultural Co-operatives.

In 1972 the agricultural area was (in 1,000 hectares) 8,363, of which 5,026 were arable, 1,281 meadows and pastures, 219 vineyards and 321 gardens.

In 1972 there were 2,315 collective farms with 5.6m. hectares of land (including 712,000 hectares of household plots) and 180 state farms with 1m. hectares. There were 554,000 hectares of private farm land. The irrigated area was 267,000 hectares; 67,000 tractors were in use.

Production statistics (in 1,000 metric tons):

Crops	1971	1972	1973	Crops	1970	1971	1972

Livestock products (1972): Eggs, 3,287m.; milk, 1,783m. litres; wool, 8,300 metric tons; animals for slaughter, 1.62m. metric tons.

The north shore of Lake Balaton and the Tokaj area are important wine-producing districts. Tokaj viticulture has been negligent in recent years, but now a Reconstruction Committee is reimposing rigorous standards. Wine production in 1973 was 600m. litres.

FORESTRY. The area under forest in 1972 was 1.48m. hectares. 22,000 hectares were afforested and 5.35m. cu. metres of timber were cut.

FISHERIES. Hungary retains important fishery preserves in the Danube and Tisza rivers and in Lake Balaton. Catch in 1971: 18,000 metric tons.

MINING. Coal and bauxite are mined, and there is some iron ore. Oil and natural gas have been found in the Szeged basin and in Zala county.

INDUSTRY. For a summary of the successive stages of nationalization from 1946 to 1952, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1954, p. 1115.

¹ Including lignite and brown coal. ² Including 1.2m. tons of petrol.

An 800-mw nuclear power station is being built with Soviet help to begin producing in 1975.

PIPELINE. There are pipelines for crude oil ('Friendship' I and II from USSR) and natural gas totalling 2,893 km in 1972. Imports in 1972 (1,000 metric tons): oil, 6,065; gas, 199.

LABOUR. In 1972 there were 5.04m. wage-earners (2.1m. female) including: Industry, 1.78m.; agriculture, 1.26m.; commerce, 0.43m.; building, 0.4m.; transport and communications, 0.38m. The labour code contains regulations in line with the 'New Economic Mechanism', abolishing many of the restrictions on the termination of employment and the obligation of the State to fix wages. Trade unions play an increased role. A 44-hour week has been introduced progressively in most branches of industry since 1970. Average monthly wages in 1971 (in forints): Manual workers, 1,510; peasants, 1,562; salaried staff, 2,018. In 1973 salaries were raised by 4-5%, and the wages of manual workers by 6-8% to reduce the differential which had developed over recent years. Trade union membership was 3.43m. in 1971.

COMMERCE. Hungary is heavily dependent on foreign trade, which even under the 'New Economic Mechanism' remains basically under state control. Trade for calendar years (in 1m. forints):

Imports	20,841	21,163	22,631	29,410	35,098	34,093
Exports	19,971	21,004	24,462	27,196	29,355	35,583

In 1972, 70% of Hungary's trade was with communist countries (34.5% with USSR). Major exports to communist countries: Machinery, industrial consumer goods, raw materials; elsewhere, raw materials and industrial consumer goods.

All exports and imports require licensing by the Ministry of Foreign Trade, and are mainly handled by 29 specialized foreign-trade agencies. Hard currency is available through the National Bank for enterprises permitted to trade directly with foreign customers. The Marketexpo branch of the Hungarian National Market Research Institute will conduct research for foreign firms. The agency Interag acts for Western firms in Hungary. Main imports from the West are machinery, fuel and consumer goods.

On 21 March 1972 an Anglo-Hungarian trade agreement was signed for the period 1972-74. UK quota restrictions on imports are to be gradually reduced over this period with a view to their ultimate abolition. An economic, industrial and technical co-operation agreement was signed at the same time. Western capital participation in Hungarian enterprises has been permitted since 1972, although the Government prefers co-operation without such participation.

Total trade between Hungary and UK according to British Board of Trade returns (in £1,000 sterling):

	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	9,971	9,408	10,629	9,358	11,760	16,830
Exports and re-exports from UK	12,781	13,323	18,995	20,787	22,901	21,467

In 1972, 40% of Hungarian imports into UK were agricultural products.

SHIPPING. Navigable waterways have a length of 1,633 km; 3.3m. tons of cargo and 3.4m. passengers were carried in 1972.

ROADS. In 1972 there were 29,700 km of road, including (in 1971) 6,050 km of first- and second-class motor roads. In 1972 passenger cars numbered 340,000 (90% private). 160m. metric tons of freight and 532m. passengers were transported by road in 1972.

RAILWAYS. Construction length of public lines in 1972, 8,603 km, of which 1,054 km are electrified. 118m. metric tons of freight and 500m. passengers were carried. In 1972 80% of trains were hauled by electricity or diesel.

AVIATION. Hungarian Air Lines (Malév) operate from Ferihegy airport, 16 km from Budapest. In 1972, 339,115 passengers were carried. Malév operates flights to Austria, Belgium, France, West Germany, Greece, Italy, Scandinavia, Egypt, UK and European communist capitals. Western airlines with flights to Budapest: British Airways, Air France, SABENA, Swissair, OS, Lufthansa and KLM.

POST AND BROADCASTING. Number of post offices (1972), 2,460; number of telephones, 873,194. Wireless licences, 2,542,000; television licences, 2,085,000. Magyar Rádió és Televízió broadcasts 3 programmes on medium-waves and FM and also regional programmes, including transmissions in German and Serbo-Croat. One TV programme is broadcast. Colour broadcasts are only transmitted in Budapest, using the SECAM system.

BANKING. All banking activities are controlled by the National Bank, including the National Savings Bank, which handles local government, as well as personal, accounts. (Deposits in 1972: 54,510m. forints.) The National Bank finances investment to individual enterprises and is the main authority over foreign-exchange transactions. There is also a Foreign Trade Bank for Hungarian enterprises trading abroad. The State Development Bank (formerly Investment Bank) finances large-scale investment projects and oversees national investment trends.

The National Credit Institute of Co-operatives handles all credit transactions for farmers, artisans and co-operatives. The Hungarian International Trade Bank opened in London in 1973.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system of weights and measures is in use. For land measure a cadastral yoke (1 acre = 0.7033 cadastral yoke) is used.

ICELAND

Lýðveldið Ísland

HISTORY. The first settlers came to Iceland in 874. Between 930 and 1264 Iceland was an independent republic, but by the 'Old Treaty' of 1263 the country recognized the rule of the King of Norway. In 1381 Iceland, together with Norway, came under the rule of the Danish kings, but when Norway was separated from Denmark in 1814, Iceland remained under the rule of Denmark. Since 1 Dec. 1918 it has been acknowledged as a sovereign state. It was united with Denmark only through the common sovereign until it was proclaimed an independent republic on 17 June 1944.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. On 24 May 1944 the people of Iceland decided in a referendum to sever all ties with the Danish Crown. The voters were asked whether they were in favour of the abrogation of the Union Act, and whether they approved of the bill for a republican constitution: 70,725 voters were for severance of all political ties with Denmark and only 370 against it; 69,048 were in favour of the republican constitution, 1,042 against it and 2,505 votes were invalid. On 17 June 1944 the republic was formally proclaimed, and as the republic's first president the Alþingi elected Sveinn Björnsson for a 1-year term (re-elected 1945 and 1949; died 25 Jan. 1952). The President is now elected for a 4-year term.

President of the Republic of Iceland: Kristján Eldjárn (elected 30 June 1968, with 67,544 out of 102,972 valid votes, inaugurated 1 Aug. 1968; re-elected unopposed in 1972).

National flag: Red cross, with white borders, on blue.

National anthem: Ó Guð vors lands (words by M. Jochumsson, 1874; tune by S. Sveinbjörnsson).

The official language is Icelandic (islenska).

The Alþingi (Parliament) is divided into two Houses, the Upper House and the Lower House. The former is composed of one-third of the members elected by the whole Alþingi in common sitting. The remaining two-thirds of the members form the Lower House. The members of the Althing receive payment for their services.

The budget bills must be laid before the two Houses in joint session, but all other bills can be introduced in either of the Houses. If the Houses do not agree, they assemble in a common sitting and the final decision is given by a majority of two-thirds of the voters, with the exception of budget bills, where a simple majority is sufficient. The ministers have free access to both Houses, but can vote only in the House of which they are members.

The electoral law enacted in 1959 provides for an Alþingi of 60 members. Of these, 49 are elected in 8 constituencies by proportional representation; the remaining 11 are apportioned to the parties according to their total vote.

At the elections held on 13 June 1971 the following parties were returned: Independence Party, 22; Progressives, 17; People's Alliance, 10; Social Democrats, 6; Union of Liberals and Leftists, 5.

The executive power is exercised under the President by the Cabinet. The coalition Cabinet, constituted in July 1971, is now composed as follows:

Prime Minister, Justice and Church: Ólafur Jóhannesson (Progress).

Foreign Minister: Einar Ágústsson (Progress).

Finance and Agriculture: Halldór Sigurðsson (Progress).

Manufacturing Industries, Health and Social Welfare: Magnús Kjartansson (PA).

Fisheries and Commerce: Lúðvík Jósepsson (PA).

Communications and Social Affairs: Björn Jónsson (UFF).

Education: Magnús Torfi Ólafsson (UFF).

The ministers are responsible for their acts. They can be impeached by the Alþingi, and in that case their cause will be decided by the Landsdómur, a special tribunal for parliamentary impeachments.

LOCAL ADMINISTRATION. For administrative purposes Iceland is divided into 16 provinces (sýslur), each under a chief executive (sýslumaður). Each province forms one or two municipal districts with a council superintending the 213 rural municipalities. There are also 14 urban municipalities with a town council, independent of the provinces, and forming by themselves administrative districts co-ordinate with the provinces. The municipal councils are elected direct by universal suffrage (men and women over 20 years of age), in urban municipalities by proportional representation, but in rural municipalities by simple majority.

AREA AND POPULATION. Iceland is a large island in the North Atlantic, close to the Arctic Circle, and comprises an area of about 103,000 sq. km (39,758 sq. miles), with its extreme northern point (the Rífstangi) lying in 66° 32' N. lat., and its most southerly point (Dyrhólaey, Portland) in 63° 24' N. lat., not including the islands north and south of the land; if these are included, the country extends from 67° 10' N. (the Kolbeinsey) to 63° 19' N. (Geirfuglasker, one of the Westman Islands). It stretches from 13° 30' (the Gerpir) to 24° 32' W. long. (Látrabjarg). The skerry Hvalbakur (The Whaleback) lies 13° 16' W. long.

The 25 constituencies of the country are now grouped in 7 districts.

The health service division, however, is only partially operative.

REPUBLIC OF INDONESIA

Republik Indonesia

GOVERNMENT AND CONSTITUTION. Indonesia is a sovereign, independent republic which was proclaimed by Dr Sukarno and Dr Hatta on 17 Aug. 1945. In the 16th century Portuguese traders in quest of spices settled in some of the islands, but were ejected by the British, who in turn were ousted by the Dutch (1595). From 1602 the Netherlands East India Company conquered the Netherlands East Indies, and ruled them until the dissolution of the company in 1798. Thereafter the Netherlands Government ruled the colony from 1816 to 1941, when it was occupied by the Japanese until 1945.

Complete and unconditional sovereignty was transferred to the Republic of the United States of Indonesia on 27 Dec. 1949, except for the western part of New Guinea, the status of which was to be determined through negotiations between Indonesia and the Netherlands within one year after the transfer of sovereignty. A union was created to regulate the relationship between the two countries. A settlement of the New Guinea (West Irian) question was, however, delayed until 15 Aug. 1962, when, through the good offices of the United Nations, an agreement was concluded for the transfer of the territory to Indonesia on 1 May 1963. In Feb. 1956 Indonesia abrogated the union and in Aug. 1956 repudiated Indonesia's debt to the Netherlands.

During 1950 the federal system which had sprung up in 1946-48 (see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1950, p. 1233) was abolished, and Indonesia was again made a unitary state. The provisional constitution was passed by the Provisional House of Representatives on 14 and came into force on 17 Aug. 1950. On 5 July 1959 by Presidential decree, the Constitution of 1945 was reinstated and the Constituent Assembly dissolved.

On 12 Jan. 1960 President Sukarno issued a decree enabling him to control the political parties, with the power (on the recommendation of the Supreme Court) to dissolve them. He also set up a mass organization, the National Front, and a supreme State body called the People's Consultative Assembly.

On 6 March 1960 the President prorogued Parliament to be reorganized on the basis of the 1945 constitution. Local administrations nominated 130 members representing political parties and 153 members representing functional groups, who formed the new 'Mutual Co-operation House of Representatives'.

A communist attempt to overthrow the government in Sept./Oct. 1965 was suppressed by the army. Some 80,000 communists are said to have been killed, and the communists killed 6 generals and several officials of the armed forces. The Communist Party was banned on 12 March 1967.

The 3-year 'confrontation' with Malaysia ended on 11 Aug. 1966, when an agreement was signed in Jakarta, terminating hostilities and re-establishing diplomatic relations.

On 11-12 March 1966 the military commanders under the leadership of Lieut.-Gen. Suharto took over the executive power while leaving President Sukarno as the head of State. The Communist Party was at once outlawed and the National Front was dissolved in Oct. 1966. On 22 Feb. 1967 Sukarno handed over all his powers to Gen. Suharto.

President, Prime Minister and Minister of Defence: Gen. Suharto, elected by the People's Consultative Assembly in March 1968 and re-elected 22 March 1973. He formed a new cabinet on 27 March with the following membership:

Home Affairs: Lieut.-Gen. Amir Machmud. Foreign Affairs: Adam Malik. Justice: Professor Umar Seno Adji. Information: Mashuri Saleh. Finance: Dr Ali Wardhana. Commerce: Radius Prawiro. Agriculture: Dr Thojib Hadiwidjaja. Industry: Lieut.-Gen. Mohammad Jusuf. Mining: Dr Mohammad Sadli. Health: Prof. G. A. Siwabessi. Religious Affairs: H. A. Mukti Ali. Labour, Resettlement and Co-operatives: Prof. Soebroto.

JUSTICE. The judicial organization is under the direction of the Minister of Justice. There are courts of first instance, high courts of appeal in the larger towns and a supreme court of justice for the whole of Indonesia in the capital.

In civil law the population is divided into three main groups: Indonesians, Europeans and foreign Orientals, to whom different law systems are applicable. When, however, people from different groups are involved, a system of so-called 'inter-gentile' law is applied.

The present criminal law, which has been in force since 1918, is codified and is based on European penal law. This law is equally applicable to all groups of the population. For private and commercial law, however, there are various systems applicable for the various groups of the population. For the Indonesians, a system of private and agrarian law is applicable; this is called Adat Law, and is mainly uncoded. For the other groups the prevailing private and commercial law system is codified in the Private Law Act (1847) and the Commercial Law Act (1847). These Acts have their origins in the French Code Civile and Code du Commerce through the similar Dutch codifications. These Acts are entirely applicable to Indonesian citizens and to Europeans, whereas to foreign Orientals they are applicable with some exceptions, mainly in the fields of family law and inheritance.

FINANCE. Currency. The monetary unit is the rupiah (abbreviated Rp.), divided into 100 sen. There are bank-notes of 1, 2½, 5, 10, 25, 50 and 100 rupiahs and aluminium coins of 1, 5, 10, 25 and cupro-nickel coins of 50 sen.

On 24 Aug. 1959 the currency denominations were reduced to a tenth of their nominal value. Further devaluations took effect on 14 Dec. 1965, when a new rupiah worth 1,000 old rupiahs was introduced, and on 22 Dec. 1965, when the rupiah for imports and exports was revalued at Rp. 10,000 = US$1.

Special bank-notes—called 'Irian Barat rupiah'—were issued on 1 May 1963 for the province of West Irian.

Budget. The ordinary budget, excluding the development budget, was as follows (in Rp. 1m.):

	1971-72
Gross revenue	415,960.3

Energetic measures to carry into effect a rehabilitation and stabilization programme taken in hand, effective from Sept. 1966. In March 1971 foreign investment was US$121.8m. in 199 projects.

DEFENCE. The Indonesian Armed Forces were formally set up on 5 Oct. 1945. On 11 Oct. 1967 the Army, Navy, Air Force and Police were unified under the Ministry of Defence and Security. Their commanders no longer hold cabinet rank. There is selective military service.

The (ex-Soviet) cruiser was on the disposal list in 1972; and it is doubtful if any of the 14 old submarines and 8 old destroyers acquired from the USSR remain in an operational state. The naval air arm had Gannet anti-submarine aircraft.

Naval personnel totalled 25,000 officers and ratings, including air arm, and 14,000 men of the marine commando corps.

Air Force. Operational combat units are equipped with 16 Avon-Sabre jet fighters provided by Australia, 1 squadron of P-51D Mustang piston-engined fighter-bombers and 1 squadron of B-26 Invader piston-engined bombers. Large numbers of more modern combat aircraft supplied by the Soviet Union, including MiG-21, MiG-19 and MiG-17 fighters, and Tu-16 and Il-28 twin-engined bombers, are currently inactive, as are Soviet-built 'Guideline' surface-to-air missiles at several sites. There are 2 transport squadrons, equipped respectively with turboprop C-130B Hercules, and piston-engined C-47 and Il-14 aircraft; 1 StOL light transport squadron of Twin Pioneers supplied by Malaysia; 4 Nomad twin-turboprop StOL transports; 1 maritime patrol squadron with Albatross and Catalina amphibians; and an assortment of other aircraft in transport, helicopter and training units, including a few turboprop Skyvan light freighters.

Oil plays an important part in Indonesian economy, being a major source of revenue and providing employment for some 50,000. Indonesia is the principal producer of petroleum in the Far East, production coming from Sumatra, Kalimantan (Indonesian Borneo) and Java, where Anglo-Dutch and US interests operate. The 1970 output of crude oil was 344.2m. bbls. Oil refined in 1970: 77.5m. bbls.

On 1 Nov. 1960 the Government announced a new regulation providing that all mineral oil and gas exploitation must be exclusively in the hands of Indonesian Government mining companies. Mining rights held by oil and gas companies issued before the new regulation will continue.

From 28 Aug. 1961 Anglo-Dutch and American oil companies have been operating as government contractors, the Government receiving 60% (formerly 50%) of the profits.

INDUSTRY. At the beginning of Dec. 1957 the trade unions expropriated all Dutch-owned banks, trading firms, hotels, etc., which were then placed under government control. On 3 Dec. 1958 parliament passed a bill for the nationalization of all Dutch-owned businesses.

In Nov. 1963 all business enterprises owned 'wholly or partly by Malaysian nationals or Indonesian nationals domiciled in Malaysia' were sequestered by presidential decree.

On 3 Nov. 1955 Iran joined the Baghdad pact between Turkey, Iraq, Pakistan and Great Britain; now, without Iraq, known as CENTO (see p. 48).

National flag: Green, white, red (horizontal).

National anthem: Shahanshah é ma zendeh bad (words by Prince Afsar, tune by Da'ud Najmi Moghaddam).

RELIGION. The official religion is the Shia branch of Islam, known as the Ithna-'Ashariyya, which recognizes 12 Imáms or spiritual successors of the Prophet Mohammad. Of the total population, 850,000 are of the Sunni sect, 19,816 are Parsis (Zartushti), 60,682 Jews, 108,421 Armenians, 20,000 Nestorians and 8,500 Protestants.

The Shia Moslems reject the Sunna or tradition, as distinct from the actual text of the Koran, both of which are recognized by the Sunni Moslems. The power of the clergy has diminished, as the result of the increased power of the central government. The highest authority is the leading ayatullah, at present ayatullah Hakim.

All mosques and shrines have some endowments (ouqáf, sing. vaqf), now devoted to charitable and educational institutions and administered by the Ministry of Education. The shrines of some favourite saints are richly endowed and own extensive property.

The Gregorian National Armenians form 2 dioceses, each under a bishop, the one residing at Tabriz and the other at Esfahán. There are also a few thousand Roman Catholic Armenians, who have a bishop of their own rite at Esfahán, the bishop of the Latin rite residing at Rezayeh (Urmia). There is an Anglican bishop residing at Esfahán.

EDUCATION. A law providing for the gradual establishment of compulsory primary education was passed in July 1943. In 1972 schooling was available for 80% of the children of school age. The literate population is estimated at 40%.

The influence of the French educational system has been prominent. As in France, education is highly centralized. The curricula for primary and secondary schools are drawn up by the Ministry of Education.

The great majority of primary and secondary schools are state schools. Grants are made to private schools. Elementary education in state schools and university education are free; small fees are charged for state-run secondary schools. Textbooks are issued free of charge to pupils in the first 4 grades of elementary schools.

In 1970-71 there were 4.52m. pupils attending 28,884 schools. Approximately 3.42m. of these were at primary schools.

Higher education is provided by universities and technical colleges. In 1970, 50,022 students were attending institutes of higher education. Tehrán University (with 11 constituent faculties) is the largest in Iran; it maintains a secondary teachers' training college and a midwifery school. There are also universities at Shiráz (letters, agriculture, science, medicine), Tabriz (letters, agriculture, science, medicine, pharmacy), Rezayeh (agriculture), Esfahán (letters, pharmacy, medicine), Meshed (medicine, letters, theology) and Ahwáz (agriculture, science, medicine). There are in Tehrán an Institute of Technology for the training of teachers of vocational subjects at secondary-school level; a Polytechnic with institutes of mechanical, textile and electrical engineering and building construction; and the National University, a private institution for fee-paying students. The National Iranian Oil Company maintains an institute of technology at Abadán. The Central Treaty Organization in 1959 set up an institute of nuclear science in Tehrán (which has now been handed over to Iran), and in 1961 opened an agricultural machinery and soil conservation training centre at Karaj near Tehrán, and in 1960 a vocational training centre south of Tehrán.

CINEMAS (1971). There were 121 cinemas in Tehrán.

NEWSPAPERS There are numerous daily papers in Tehrán and other cities. Their circulation is relatively small, Ettela'át and Kayhán leading with about 100,000 each. Two English-language and a French-language daily appear in Tehrán.

HEALTH. The Ministry of Health controls the health of the country through the Department of Public Health, which has achieved some remarkable results in the fight against malaria; large areas along the Caspian and the Persian Gulf and in Azerbáiján are now free from malaria. Opium addiction has been greatly reduced, and the cultivation of the poppy has been practically eradicated. Programmes to combat tuberculosis, smallpox, trachoma, venereal diseases, etc., have been introduced.

In 1971, about 38,124 hospital beds (half of them in Tehrán) were available. Medical personnel included 8,970 physicians and surgeons, 1,290 dentists, 3,270 pharmacists and 3,807 nurses. Numerous hospitals, health centres, dispensaries and maternal and child health clinics and 14 schools of nursing have been set up.

JUSTICE. The judicial system is modelled on that of France. There are justices of the peace in villages and small towns, higher courts in the large towns, police magistrates in all important places, courts of appeal in Tehrán, Tabriz, Shiráz, Kermánsháh, Esfahán, Meshed, Kermán and Ahwáz, and a court of cassation, or supreme court, in Tehrán. The courts are supervised by the Ministry of Justice. New civil, criminal and commercial codes based on French and Swiss codes were introduced in the early 1930s.

WELFARE. A system of social security benefits covering accident, sickness, retirement, death, marriage, maternity and childbirth and free medical attention and hospitalization for insured contributors and their families is embodied in the Workers' Social Insurance Law, 1960. This law provides for the insurance under the scheme of all workers in receipt of wages or salaries, but is at present being applied to some 683,496 workers employed mainly in industrial and mining establishments employing 10 or more workers. It also provides for the compulsory payment by employers of family allowances to workers with 2 or more children.

FINANCE. Currency. The Iranian unit of currency is the rial sub-divided into 100 dinars.

Notes in circulation are of denominations of 50–10,000 rials. Coins in circulation are bronze–aluminium and copper, 50 dinar; silver alloy, 1, 2, 5, 10 and 20 rials. There are also gold pahlavi and $\frac{1}{2}$ pahlavi pieces containing 7·322382 and 3·661191 grammes of gold respectively which do not constitute part of monetary circulation, but have a market value as any other commodity.

Government control of foreign exchange was introduced on 1 March 1936. The official parity of the rial is 75·75 rials = US$1. This parity is used only in calculating the value of the gold and foreign exchange held as reserve for the note cover. The effective rates for all authorized foreign-exchange payments are: Buying, £1 sterling = 180·50 rials, US$1 = 76·50 rials; selling, £1 = 185·30 rials, $1 = 75·50 rials.

Budget. Budget estimates for years ending 20 March (in 1m. rials):

	1965–66	1967–68	1968–69	1969–70	1970–71	1971–72
Revenue	140,953	175,000	217,232	330,300	454,300	548,500
Expenditure	144,444	176,600	217,232	330,300	454,300	548,500

The main items of estimated revenue in the budget for 1968–69 are (in 1m. rials): Direct taxation, 12,750; indirect taxation, 34,505; treasury share of oil revenues, 15,762,000. Main items of estimated expenditure (in 1m. rials): Education, 42,018; defence, 36,743; police and gendarmerie, 9,691; health, 5,779.

The estimated budget for the fourth 5-year development plan which began in 1968 is more than $11,000m., the major portion of which will be covered by oil revenue.

DEFENCE. Army. The Army consists of about 160,000 men organized in 3 infantry divisions, 4 independent infantry brigades, 3 armoured divisions, and auxiliary units. Two years' military service is compulsory. Gendarmerie strength is about 70,000. Its function is internal security in rural areas. A US Military Mission is attached in an advisory capacity to the Army and another to the Gendarmerie.

Navy. The Navy comprises 3 destroyers, 4 fast frigates, 4 corvettes, 4 coastal minesweepers, 2 inshore minesweepers, 16 patrol boats, 12 hovercraft, 2 landing craft, 2 repair ships, 2 Imperial yachts, 1 oiler, 1 water carrier and 1 tug.

A British destroyer (ex-HMS Sluys) was sold to Iran in 1966 and modernized in 1969, and 4 Vosper Mark 5 frigates were built in Britain in 1967-72.

In 1973 naval personnel totalled 13,000 officers and ratings including cadets and apprentices under training.

Air Force. In Aug. 1955 the Air Force became a separate and independent arm. Its tactical wings are currently equipped with 6 squadrons (each 16 aircraft) of F-5 fighter bombers, 2 squadrons of F-4E Phantom fighter-bombers, 2 interceptor squadrons of F-4D Phantoms and 1 reconnaissance squadron of RF-5s. Four P-3F Orions have been acquired for long-range anti-submarine duties. A transport wing is equipped with 80 C-130E/H Hercules and 24 F-27 Friendship turbo-prop transports and smaller types. Six Boeing 707-320C tanker-transport support the tactical fighter and anti-submarine squadrons. The Air Force also operates some of the many hundreds of new turbine-powered helicopters acquired for the Iranian services, including twin-engined CH-47C Chinooks, armed AH-1Js, JetRangers and Model 214A utility helicopters. The Air Force has a total strength of some 30,000 officers and men, and 200 jet combat aircraft. Current orders for 141 F-5E Tiger II fighter-bombers, F-4E Phantoms and other types will more than double first-line strength. Missiles in service include Rapier and Tigercat surface-to-air weapons.

PRODUCTION. Iran's chief natural products are oil, wool, cotton, silk, fruit, nuts, cereals, vegetables, gum, timber, oil seeds, copper and other metalliferous ores, coal, cattle, sheep and goats. Its principal manufactured or processed products are textiles, carpets, skins, casings, vegetable oil, soap, metal products, plastic products, furniture, beet sugar, tea, tobacco and cigarettes, wine, vodka, soft drinks, caviar, footwear, petroleum products, glass products, tiles, bricks, cement, leather and leather goods, dairy products and manufactured foodstuffs, and printed matter.

DEVELOPMENT. The fourth development plan 1968-73 envisages an expenditure of 610,000m. rials, of which 480,000m. rials is to be allocated to individual projects. Of this amount about 13% is to be allotted to agriculture, 16% to communications, 20% to mining and industry, 19% to waters and power, 8% to education and 4% to telecommunications.

AGRICULTURE. Reliable statistics of production are not available. It is estimated, however, that out of 164.8m. hectares of land area only 16,857,000 are crop land (including 10,300 hectares fallow), 27.8m. hectares are forests and ranges and 32.7m. hectares are potentially cultivable waste.

Tractors in use numbered 12,000 in 1965-66.

Crop returns for 1970-71 (in 1,000 metric tons): Wheat, 3,800; rice, 1,060; cotton, 450; sugar-beet, 4,000; tea, 13.

Wool comes principally from Khorásán, Kermánsháh, Mázarán and Azerbáiján. The most popular carpets are manufactured in the environs of Tabriz, Kermán, Arák, Káshán, Esfahán, Shiráz and Hamadán. Esfahán is the traditional textile manufacturing centre, but in recent years important textile mills, particularly cotton, have been built in other towns, including Tehrán. Exports of carpets were valued at 1,930.6m. rials in 1960-61.

Rice is grown largely on the Caspian shores.

Tobacco is grown along the shores of the Caspian. It is purchased by the Tobacco Monopoly and manufactured in the government factory at Tehrán. Production in 1967 was 22,136 tons.

Opium, until 1955, was an important export commodity in Iran. On 7 Oct.

1955 an Act was approved by Parliament to prohibit the cultivation and usage of opium. The government has been contemplating reintroducing poppy cultivation on a limited scale and under rigid state control in an effort to fight narcotic trafficking and addiction.

Livestock (1972): 31m. sheep, 13.4m. goats, 5.2m. cattle; 470,000 asses and horses, 198,000 camels.

LAND REFORM. Before the enactment of the 1962 land reform law most of the more than 50,000 villages in Iran were owned by absentee landlords. Several earlier land reform laws presented to the Majlis by the government had remained ineffective, and the only large-scale distribution of land to smallholders was that of the Crown property, which the Shah began in 1951. However, as a result of the implementation of the 1962 land reform law, all the large estates coming under the land reform law have been purchased from the landlords by the government and distributed among the farmers. Up to 1968 more than 3m. farm families comprising some 14m. farmers have become the owners of the land they till.

FISHERIES. The Caspian Fisheries Co. (Shilát) is a government monopoly. Exports of caviar (1969–70) were valued at 420m. rials.

MINING. Iran has substantial mineral deposits relatively undeveloped. Production figures for 1966–67 (in 1,000 tons): Iron ore, 3; copper, 11, lead, 88; chromite, 104; coal, 285; salt, 245.

INDUSTRY. Apart from the oil industry, the industries employing most workers are textiles, sugar refining, flour-milling, fruit processing, tea, furniture, printing, leather, matches, glass, building materials and light metal goods. A number of automobile assembly plants have been set up in recent years employing several thousand workers. A steel-mill, a machine-tool factory, a tractor plant and a huge petrochemical complex are also going into production.

OIL. The exploitation of Iran's large oil resources was undertaken by the Anglo-Persian (later Anglo-Iranian) Oil Company, which held a concession for a considerable area of southern Iran, built a large refinery and produced the following quantities of crude oil (in long tons): 1946, 19,189,551; 1948, 24,871,058; 1950, 31,750,147; 1951 (Jan.–Oct.), 16,176,000.

This concession was terminated as a result of the nationalization of the Iranian oil industry in 1951. The ensuing dispute (see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1954, p. 1294) led to the cessation of oil exports in June 1951, and of the company's operations in Iran in Oct. 1951. The dispute was finally settled on 5 Aug. 1954, and on 29 Oct. 1954, the date when the Shah signed it, an agreement came into force between the Iranian Government and the National Iranian Oil Company, on the one hand, and 17 international oil companies, on the other; of these, the British Petroleum Co. Ltd. holds 40% of the shares. These companies came to be known collectively as the Consortium.

The agreement is for 25 years with provision for three 5-year extensions, at the option of the Consortium under specific terms and conditions. Two operating companies—Iraanse Aardolie Exploratie en Productie Maatschappij (Iranian Oil Exploration and Producing Company) NV and Iraanse Aardolie Raffinage Maatschappij (Iranian Oil Refining Company) NV—were formed by Consortium member companies and they received the necessary rights and powers from Iran to be solely responsible respectively for exploration and production in a defined area in South Iran and for the operation of the Refinery of Abadan. While the National Iranian Oil Company, the shares of which are held by the Iranian Government, is the owner of the fixed assets of the oil industry in South Iran, the Operating Companies have the unrestricted use of them. The two Operating Companies do not sell the oil; their function is solely to produce and refine it. So-called Trading Companies, subsidiaries representing Consortium members, deal individually and independently of each other with the buying and selling in Iran of oil for export.

The National Iranian Oil Company was united in Jan. 1955 with the Iran Oil Company, whose object is the exploration and production of oil throughout Iran except in regions subject to special agreements. The National Iranian Oil Company operates the Naft-i-Shah oilfield and the Kermanshah refinery in West Iran and is solely responsible for the distribution and marketing of oil in Iran. The net effect of the financial aspects of the sale of oil by the National Iranian Oil Company to the Trading Companies for export is to bring about an equal sharing between Iran and each Trading Company of the profits arising in Iran from the Trading Companies operations.

The Shah signed a new 20-year agreement with a western Consortium on 31 July 1973 bringing the oil industry totally under the control of the National Iranian Oil Company.

Crude oil production figures since the Consortium began operations in Oct. 1954 have been (in metric tons): 1958, 47.8m.; 1959, 53.6m.; 1960, 50.1m.; 1961, 56.3m.; 1962, 64.5m.; 1963, 66m.; 1964, 84m.; 1965, 92m.; 1966, 106m.; 1967, 121m.; 1968, 133m.; 1969, 153m.; 1970, 222m.

LABOUR. Legislation regulating conditions of employment in certain industrial undertakings was first introduced in 1949. The subsequent adoption of certain international minimum standards led to the enactment of the Labour Act of 1959, which establishes basic provisions dealing with hours of work; holidays with pay; the payment of wages, salaries and overtime; the formation, registration and activities of employers' and workers' organizations; employment contracts and collective agreements; the settlement of disputes; industrial safety, health and welfare; and labour inspection. Regulations concerning safety, health and welfare in industrial premises, conciliation procedure and the settlement of disputes, the formation, registration and activities of trade unions, the duties and powers of labour inspectors have since been promulgated. The employment of foreigners is controlled by regulations promulgated in 1960. Responsibility for the enforcement of the Labour Act, 1959, and supporting legislation is entrusted to provincial and district departments of labour.

According to a survey of manpower undertaken in 1958, the country's non-agricultural work force numbered about 1.37m., of whom nearly 70,000 were women and about 33,000 were under 13 years of age. Just over half (718,000) were engaged in crafts, production process and related occupations, while 18% were employed in sales and related occupations.

COMMERCE. Imports and exports were as follows (1m. rials):

Exports ²	16,268	18,533	17,872

Total trade between Iran and UK (British Board of Trade returns) in £1,000 sterling:

	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	73,768	76,054	109,459	123,827	237,381
Exports and re-exports from UK	71,627	66,335	78,561	117,014	169,412

SHIPPING. During the year ended 21 March 1970, 1,790 vessels of 19,369,000 tons entered at ports on the Persian Gulf, and 619 vessels totalling 195,095 tons entered ports on the Caspian Sea.

Navigation on the Lake of Rezāyeh, from Sharaf-Kháneh to Kolmankháneh, is served by some 5 tugs and 9 barges for the transport of goods and passengers. The service runs twice a week. On the river Karun likewise, from Khorramshahr to Ahwáz, an irregular service for cargo only both ways is run by the Iran Transport Co. and the Karun Navigation Co., and some local firms run daily trips by motor boat, for passengers and merchandise. By changing into lighter-draught boats at Ahwáz both can be taken up to Shallili near Shushtar.

ROADS. In 1970 there were 10,749 km of completely surfaced roads and 1,537 km of roads in the process of surfacing. First- and second-class (graded, all weather) roads total 12,286 km and third-class roads 28,019 km.

In 1967 passenger cars and taxis numbered 169,374; commercial vehicles, 57,735.

RAILWAYS. The Iranian State Railways have a total length of 4,944 km, distributed as follows: Tehrān-Bandar Sháh, 464; Tehrān-Bandar Sháhpoor, 928; Ahwáz-Khorramshahr, 121; Tehrán-Tabriz, 734; Garmsar-Meshed, 813; Qum-Káshán, 98; Tabriz-Julfa, 145; Soofian-Sharaf Kháneh, 52; Záhedán-Mirjáveh, 92; oil company railways, 165; Tehrán-Shahr Rey, 8; Bandar Sháh-Gorgán, 36. The further section from Káshán to Yazd is under construction.

AVIATION. The principal airlines which link Tehrán with Europe and the Middle East are Air France, British Airways, Ariana, Iraqi Airways, Alitalia, PANAM, Swissair, LIA, KLM, PIA, SAS, Qantas, SABENA, El Al, Lufthansa, Aeroflot and Middle East Air Lines. British Airways, Qantas, Lufthansa, PANAM and Air France also connect Tehrán with the Far East. Aryana (Afghánistán) Airline connects Tehrán with Lebanon, Syria and Afghánistán. British Airways, KLM and SAS operate services to Abadán and Iran National Airlines Corporation, registered on 29 March 1962, has monopoly rights on all internal flights and also operates in the Persian Gulf; in 1965 it inaugurated European services. The Iranian Government owns 51% of its shares.

POST. Postal, telegraph and telephone services are administered by the Iranian Ministry of Posts, Telegraphs and Telephones.

The Indo-European Telegraph Company relinquished its lines in Iran in 1931, while the telephone system was nationalized in 1952. There is wireless-telegraph communication between Tehrán and Tabriz, Meshed, Kermánsháh, Kermán, Khorramshahr, Bushehr, Yazd, Shiráz and Lingeh and a wireless-telephone link between Tehrán and Tabriz. Tehrán is also in wireless communication with Europe and is linked by wireless telephone with Baghdad, London, Berne and New York. In 1973 the number of telephones was 447,100, of which some 232,400 were in Tehrán. Wireless sets numbered over 1m. in 1962.

BANKING. The following banks are established in Iran: Bank Markazi (Central Bank), which was officially established in 1961 under the Monetary and Banking Law of May 1960 to implement the monetary and credit policy of the country. The Central Bank took over from the Bank Melli many of its functions, including the issue of bank-notes.

The liabilities and assets of the Bank Markazi on 20 March 1972 were as follows (in rials): Liabilities: notes in circulation, 61,500m.; assets, 324,734m.; bank depositis, 48,770m.; capital, 3,600m.

Bank Melli Iran, founded in 1927, continues to be the leading commercial bank with branches all over the country. The National Savings Bank, founded in 1939, is a branch of the Bank Melli. Bank Keshavarzi Iran (Agricultural Bank), formerly a section of the Bank Melli Iran, was made a separate establishment in 1933. It has a nominal capital of 1,500m. rials and has branches at the principal agricultural centres in Iran. The bank gives assistance for the agricultural development of the country. The Bank Sepah, founded in 1926, deals principally in inland exchange and manages army accounts; paid-up capital, 400m. rials. Bank Rahni Iran (Mortgage Bank), founded in 1939, has an authorized capital of 720m. rials and fulfils the functions of a building society. Bank Tows'eh Sanati va Madani (Industrial and Mining Development Bank), founded in 1959 under the 7-year plan with a paid-up capital of 400m. rials and with the object of assisting the modernization and development of Iran's industries. The Foreign Trade Bank of Iran, with a capital of 275m. rials, of which 51% belong to the Bank Melli, 24% to American and 12½% each to German and Italian banks. Bank Sakhtemani (Building Bank) was formed with an authorized capital of 150m. rials with the object of building and selling houses to the poorer classes. Bank Omran (Development Bank) was founded in 1953 with a nominal capital of 15m. rials to finance farmers and peasants who come into possession of land by virtue of the distribution of Crown lands. Sherkat Sahami Bimeh Iran (The Iran Insurance Co.), in 1954 inaugurated a banking department. In addition, there are 19 privately owned banks.

The Russo-Iran Bank is the oldest foreign bank operating in Iran; it finances Soviet-Iranian trade. An Irano-French bank (Bank Etabarate) opened in 1958.

The Irano-British Bank, the Bank of Iran and the Middle East, the Mercantile Bank of Iran and Holland, and the Bank of Iran and Japan opened in 1959.

Most banks are now authorized to deal in foreign exchange.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. By a law passed on 8 Jan. 1933, the official weights and measures are those of the metric system.

The Iranian year is a solar year running from 21 March to 20 March; the Hejra year 1347 corresponds to the Christian year 21 March 1968–20 March 1969.

IRAQ

al Jumhuriya al 'Iraqia

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. On 14 July 1958 the Republic of Iraq was declared by a group of Army officers, after an armed coup d'état in which the reigning King Faisal II and his uncle, the ex-Regent the Emir Abdul Ilah, and the Prime Minister, Nuri al Said, lost their lives. For the next 4 years the country was under the control of Gen. Qasim, who was executed on 9 Feb. 1963, following a coup d'état by the Army and Air Force on the previous day.

The republican régime terminated the adherence of Iraq to the Arab Federation (see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1958, p. 806).

The provisional constitution on 4 May 1964 declares Iraq to be an 'Arab, Islamic, independent and sovereign republic' based on democracy and socialism; complete Arab unity is the aim. The National Council for the Revolutionary Command, which took office on 8 Feb. 1963, following the overthrow of Gen. Qasim, affirmed its adherence to the spirit of the 14 July Revolution. It abolished the Sovereignty Council, which had exercised the functions of the Presidency since 1958, and appointed a new President and Cabinet. It reached agreement with Kuwait on the question of Kuwaiti sovereignty, which Gen. Qasim had disputed, but failed to find a peaceful solution to the 2-year-old Kurdish revolt. Increasing domination of the government by Ba'ath Party members and consequent estrangement from Egypt led to a military coup d'état on 18 Nov. 1963. In April 1966 Field Marshal Abdul Salam Muhammad Arif, who came to power in Feb. 1963, and survived the revolution of Nov. 1963, was killed in a helicopter crash. His brother, Abdul Rahman Muhammad Arif, was elected President by the National Defence Council.

A cease-fire in Kurdistan was proclaimed on 10 Feb. 1964, but fighting was resumed in April 1965. In June 1966 the Government announced a peace plan which the Kurds accepted in principle. In March 1970 the Revolutionary Command Council announced a complete and constitutional settlement of the Kurdish issue.

On 16 Oct. 1964 an agreement was signed with the United Arab Republic to establish a 'joint political leadership' charged with achieving full constitutional union within 2 years, since increased to 5 or more years. In June 1967 the two countries agreed to the complete elimination of customs duties.

President: Maj.-Gen. Ahmed Hassan Bakr.

Vice-President: Taha Moheddin Marouf.

AREA AND POPULATION. The country has an area of 438,446 sq. km (169,240 sq. miles) and a population (census 14 Oct. 1965) of 8,097,230. Estimated population (1972) 10·07m. The capital is Baghdad.

Each Governorate is administered by a Governor, and is subdivided into qadhas (under Qaimaqams) and nahiyahs (under Mudirs). The following are the area (in sq. km) and population (in 1,000, estimated, 1972) for each Governorate:

Maysan	17,945	358	Thi-Qar	13,900	534

The largest towns are Baghdad, Basra, Nineveh, Kirkuk and Najaf.

On 25 Nov. 1933 the Council of the League of Nations fixed the boundary between Iraq and Syria, including the whole of the Jebel Sinjar in Iraq.

EDUCATION. Primary and secondary education is free but not compulsory. Primary school age is 6–12. Secondary education is for 6 years, of which the first 3 are termed intermediate. The medium of instruction is Arabic; Kurdish is used in primary schools in northern districts.

There were, in 1971–72, 873 government and private secondary schools with 317,106 pupils. Forty-four vocational and primary teachers' training schools had 5,291 students.

There are 5 universities in Iraq; in 1969 Baghdad University had 22,077 students; Basrah, 3,387; Mosul, 4,716; Sulaimaniya, 1,342; Al-Mustransiriya, 12,442.

CINEMAS (1966). There were 29 cinemas in Baghdad.

NEWSPAPERS (1970). In Baghdad there are 6 daily newspapers (one of which is in English).

HEALTH. In 1971 there were 3,593 doctors; 145 hospitals with 18,504 beds.

JUSTICE. The courts are established throughout the country as follows: For civil matters: the court of cassation in Baghdad; 6 courts of appeal at Baghdad (2); Basra, Babylon, Nineveh and Kirkuk; 16 courts of first instance with unlimited powers and 44 courts of first instance with limited powers, all being courts of single judges. In addition, 6 peace courts have peace court jurisdiction only. Tribal law was abolished in Aug. 1958.

For Shara' (religious) matters: the Sunni and Shia benches of revision in Baghdad; Shara' courts at all places where there are civil courts, constituted in some places of specially appointed Qadhis (religious judges) and in other places of the judges of the civil courts. For criminal matters: the court of cassation; 6 sessions courts (2 being presided over by the judge of the local court of first instance and 4 being identical with the courts of appeal). Magistrates courts at all places where there are civil courts, constituted of civil judges exercising magisterial powers of the first and second class. There are also a number of third-class magistrates courts, powers for this purpose being granted to municipal councils and a number of administrative officials. Some administrative officials are granted the powers of a peace judge to deal with cases of debts due from cultivators.

Special religious courts for non-Catholic Christians at Baghdad, Basra and Nineveh which dealt with matters of personal status, such as divorce, separation and maintenance between husband and wife, have now been abolished, cases being dealt with by the civil courts.

The prison population at the end of 1972 was 6,025 men and 83 women, including persons on remand and in the reformatory school.

FINANCE. Currency. The monetary unit is the Iraqi dinar (I.D.) = 1,000 *fil*s = 10 riyals = 20 dirhams = £1.17. Silver alloy coins for 100 and 50 *fil*s (Dirham) and 25 *fil*s are in circulation, and other coins for 10, 5 and 1 *fil*s. Notes are for $\frac{1}{4}$, $\frac{1}{2}$ and 1 dinar, and for 5 and 10 dinars. The total currency in circulation in Dec. 1972 amounted to 207m. dinars. The currency was formerly controlled by an Iraqi Currency Board sitting in London, but was taken over by the National Bank of Iraq on 1 July 1949, which in 1956 was re-named the Central Bank of Iraq.

Budget. Revenue and expenditure (in 1,000 Iraqi dinars) for fiscal years ending 31 March:

	1966-67	1967-68	1968-69	1969-70	1970-71
Revenue	158,648	210,361	220,419	250,591	292,562
Expenditure	192,428	205,506	241,933	289,249	303,425

The above figures relate to the ordinary state budget; development expenditure is financed through a separate budget. Until the 1959-60 budget, 70% of the Iraqi government's share of oil revenues was allocated to development, the remainder going to the ordinary state budget. In 1959, however, the proportions were altered and the amount assigned to development was to be not less than 50% (1967-68: 158m. dinars).

Oil revenues account for nearly 50%, customs and excise for about 26% of the total revenue. The 1970-74 National Development Plan takes about 952.5m. dinars, and education about 20% of the expenditure.

The public debt was 198m. dinars on 31 Dec. 1972.

DEFENCE. Military training is compulsory for all men when they reach the age of 18. This consists of 2 years' service with the colours and 18 years on the reserve. However, a man may volunteer for service in the army or change his conscript service into voluntary service. In such circumstances voluntary service is for 2 years, and he may extend it by periods of 2 years until he reaches the age of 45. The 2-year compulsory service can be extended in a national emergency. Many technicians and technically qualified reserve officers serve up to 4 or 5 years.

Army. The strength of the Iraqi Army is about 90,000, organized into 2 infantry divisions, 1 tank division, 3 independent brigades and Ministry of Defence troops. Three-quarters of all equipment is of Russian origin, including about 900 T-54/55 tanks.

Navy. The Navy comprises 12 ex-Soviet torpedo boats, 3 ex-Soviet submarine chasers, 4 river gunboats, 14 harbour patrol boats, 4 despatch launches, a light-house tender, the presidential yacht and a tug.

In 1973 naval personnel totalled some 2,000 officers and ratings, expected to be increased on the acquisition of patrol vessels and missile boats from the USSR.

Air Force. Except for 2 squadrons of Hunter jet fighter-bombers and 1 each of Wessex helicopters acquired from Britain and Alouette III helicopters from France, the combat and transport squadrons are equipped primarily with aircraft of Soviet design, including 9 Tu-16 medium bombers, 10 Il-28 light bombers, 60 Su-7 fighter-bombers, 120 MiG-21 interceptors, MiG-17d night fighters and MiG-17c day interceptor and ground attack fighters, Mi-4 and Mi-8 helicopters, and An-12 and An-24 transports. A few Il-14s and smaller types are used in a transport-communications role, while Hunter, Jet Provost and L-29 Delfin aircraft are employed with Soviet MiG-15UTI trainers and other types in the Air Force College and operational conversion unit. Total strength is about 9,500 personnel and 225 combat aircraft. Soviet 'Guideline' surface-to-air missiles are operational. A squadron of Tu-22 supersonic bombers was sent to Iraq shortly before the Oct. 1973 war, but may be manned by Soviet aircrew.

PLANNING. Investment in the second 5-year economic plan 1965-70 totalled I.D.446.7m. and the third 5-year plan 1970-74 envisages total investment of I.D.952.5m. including I.D.336.5m. for agricultural projects.

Iraq is a land of great potentialities. The soil of the country is rich, but there are vast areas which can be cultivated only if irrigated by canals or pumps. The Irrigation Ministry operates several canal systems, new dams have been completed and other irrigation works are under construction.

AGRICULTURE. An Agrarian Reform Law, issued in Sept. 1958, limits land ownership to 1,000 dunums for flow-irrigated land and to 2,000 dunums for rain-irrigated land.

In 1957-58, 16m. mesharas, were planted, 13m. lay fallow, 2m. were uncultivable, 595,000 were orchards and vineyards, 18,000 were pasture and 45,000 woodland. About 13m. mesharas were irrigated.

The chief winter crops (1972) are wheat, 2,625,300 metric tons, and barley, 979,600 metric tons. The chief summer crop is rice, 267,800 metric tons. The date crop is important (average yearly production, 350,000 tons), the country furnishing about 80% of the world's trade in dates (exports, 1972, 314,395 tons); the chief producing area is the totally irrigated riverain belt of the Shatt-el-Arab. Wool is also an important export (1972: 3,854 tons). In 1972, 3,071 tons of cotton were exported.

Livestock (1970): Cattle, 1.69m.; buffaloes, 200,000; sheep, 13.1m.; goats, 2.3m.; horses, 124,000; camels, 266,000; chickens, 6.27m.

FORESTRY. Up to 1969, 614,953 dunums have been demarcated and surveyed in Arbil, Mosul and Sulaimaniya Liwas.

INDUSTRY. Industrial and constructional establishments in 1970 numbered 1,494. Constructional establishments employed the largest number of workers. Other large employers were the brick industry, water and electricity services, date packing, the textile industry, cigarette factories, oil refining and the cement industry. Iraq is still relatively under-developed industrially but work has begun on 13 new industrial plants which are being established with Soviet equipment and technical assistance. A light-industries company was formed in 1960 to foster smaller industries.

On 14 July 1964 all banks, insurance companies and 32 of the largest industrial and commercial companies were nationalized. The nationalized industries comprise cement, asbestos, cigarettes, spinning and weaving, steel, paper, leather tanning, flour-mills and trading companies. Small firms in these fields were left in the private sector, except for cement, asbestos and cigarettes, which will be entirely in the public sector. The owners of the nationalized companies are to be compensated for the value of their shares with state bonds maturing in 15 years and bearing 3% interest. From the 1970-74 National Development Plan for industrialization, the sum of 208m. Iraqi dinars has been set aside to improve the country's industries.

OIL. The greater part of Iraq's oil production comes from the Iraq Petroleum Company's field at Kirkuk (found in 1927). This company, an international group, has constructed pipelines to the Mediterranean, including one to Banias on the Syrian coast, with a throughput of about 35m. tons in 1960. The Mosul Petroleum Co. Ltd holds a concession for oil covering Iraqi territory west of the Tigris and north of the 33rd parallel of latitude. Oil was found at Ain Zalah, north-west of Mosul, and the company has laid a pipeline from there to Baiji. The Basra Petroleum Company have been granted a concession for oil covering the southernmost part of Iraq (the old Basra vilayet). High-grade quality oil has been found here, and production started in Dec. 1951. Production at the oilfield of Rumaila started in Dec. 1954; its pipeline is linked to the Zubair-Fao system. An oilfield near Khanaqin, in the area known as the Transferred Territories near the Iranian frontier, was, until Nov. 1958, operated by the Khanaqin Oil Company, a subsidiary of the British Petroleum Company, and is now being operated by the Iraqi Government. There is a pipeline to a refinery near Khanaqin. Oil for consumption in Iraq is refined by the government oil refineries administration (GORA) and is distributed and marketed in Iraq at cheap prices by the Ministry of Oil and Minerals.

Under an agreement dated 3 Feb. 1952 between the Government and the Iraq, Basra and Mosul Petroleum Companies, the Government receives 50% of the profits before the deduction of foreign taxes, and in any case not less than I.D. 25m. in 1955 and thereafter, from which date onward the minimum rate of oil-production will be 30m. tons annually. On 11 Dec. 1961, on the severance of the negotiations with the oil companies, the Iraqi Government enacted a law defining the areas in which the Iraq Petroleum Company and its associates may carry out operations. The defined areas total less than $\frac{1}{2}$ % of the concessions.

The total crude petroleum production was 67m. metric tons in 1972. Revenue received by the Iraqi Government from oil amounted to I.D. 140.8m. in 1966; I.D. 131.7m. in 1967; I.D. 174m. in 1968; I.D. 170m. in 1969.

An oil refinery (annual output, 1m. tons) at Daura near Baghdad, and a bitumen refinery (annual output 60,000 tons) at Gayyarah in the Mosul district both started production in 1955 under the direction of the GORA. The Daura refinery has a capacity of 70,000 bbls per annum. A lubricating oil plant (annual output, 36,000 tons) had been added to the Daura refinery and started production in May 1957.

On 1 June 1972 President Bakr announced the nationalization of the Iraq Petroleum Company's concessions and the formation of a State company to manage the funds, assets and rights of IPC. IPC would be paid compensation although the company's alleged debts would be deducted from the amount. On 1 March 1973 the Mosul Petroleum Company was amalgamated with the Iraq Petroleum Company.

On 7 Oct. 1973 the Government nationalized the 23.75% share in the Basra Petroleum Company which was held by the American Near East Development Corporation.

COMMERCE. Imports and exports for 5 calendar years were as follows (in 1,000 Iraqi dinars):

	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972
Imports	144,165	157,169	181,651	247,870	234,680
Local exports	25,956	25,939	24,729	22,782	28,614
Transit	20,492	22,002	27,942	33,801	65,485

Movements of gold bullion and currency are excluded from the above table. Import values are c.i.f. plus landing charges, and include all goods cleared for home consumption whether subsequently re-exported or not. Exports do not include shipments of oil or re-exports, and are valued f.o.b.

The total trade between Iraq and UK according to the British Board of Trade returns, was as follows for 5 years (in £1,000 sterling):

Imports to UK	31,119	18,729	36,788	34,144	30,678
Exports and re-exports from UK	21,903	23,774	24,790	26,769	27,057

SHIPPING. In 1971, 964 vessels of 3m. NRT entered the Port of Basra.

RAILWAYS. The Iraqi state railway system consists of a metre-gauge line from Basra, at the head of the Arabian Gulf, to Baghdad, 669.2 km. At Baghdad the line crosses the river Tigris by a combined road and rail bridge and then extends through Juloula (Qaraghan), which is 147.8 km from Baghdad on to Kirkuk 321.8 km, thence to the terminal station of Arbil 104.9 km. Khanaqin on the Iraqi-Iranian frontier is served by a branch line from Juloula (27.9 km). There is also a standard gauge (4 ft 8½ in.) line from Baghdad to Tel-Kotchek (528 km) on the Syrian frontier, following the right bank of the Tigris via Nineveh it links with the Syrian railway system at Tel-Kotchek, thus establishing a through service from the Gulf to Turkey, Egypt and Europe. The total length of track opened in 1972 was 2,203 km.

A standard-gauge Baghdad-Basra line was completed in 1968. This mostly runs parallel to the metre-gauge route, which it will eventually replace.

ROADS. About 5,380 miles of roads and tracks have been developed for vehicular traffic. The main surfaced roads are: (1) the road north from Baghdad via Kirkuk, Arbil and Nineveh to a point near the Turkish frontier at Zakho, with branches from Kirkuk to the northern province of Sulaimaniya, from Arbil to the Iranian frontier, and from Nineveh to Sinjar; (2) about 350 miles of the main road west from Baghdad to the Jordan frontier; (3) the road east of Baghdad, which connects the road system of Iran near Khanaqin; and (4) the road south from Baghdad to Hilla and the holy city of Kerbela.

Vehicles registered in 1972 included 52,176 passenger cars, 23,340 taxis, 34,239 lorries, 11,280 buses.

AVIATION. Baghdad and Basra airports are served by British Airways, Lufthansa, Alitalia, Swissair, KLM, Middle East Air Lines, PIA, Iraqi Airways, Iranian Airways, Air Liban, United Arab Airlines and Aeroflot. In 1972 there arrived by air 158,451 passengers; 154,929 passengers left Iraqi airports on 3,549 flights.

POST. In 1966 there were 328 post and telegraph offices. Wireless telegraph services exist with UK, USA, UAR, Lebanon and Saudi Arabia, and wireless telephone services with UK, USA, Italy, UAR and USSR. Telephones, 1972, were estimated at 117,921, of which 77,567 were in Baghdad.

BANKING. The British Bank of the Middle East and the Eastern Bank and all other banks were nationalized on 14 July 1964.

In 1941 the Rafidain Bank, financed by the Iraqi Government, was instituted to carry out normal banking transactions with head office in Baghdad and branches in the chief towns and abroad, including London. In addition, there are 4 government banks which are authorized to issue loans to companies and individuals: the Industrial Bank, the Agricultural Bank the Estate Bank, and the Mortgage Bank.

In March 1972 post office savings amounted to 6,908,000 dinars held by 185,755 depositors.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The metric system is gradually being introduced and is now mandatory for linear measures, native weights and measures having been abrogated.

IRISH REPUBLIC

Éire

HISTORY. In April 1916 an insurrection against British rule took place and a republic was proclaimed. The armed struggle was renewed in 1919 and continued until 1921. The independence of Ireland was reaffirmed in Jan. 1919 by the National Parliament (Dáil Éireann), elected in Dec. 1918.

In 1920 an Act was passed by the British Parliament, under which separate Parliaments were set up for 'Southern Ireland' (26 counties) and 'Northern Ireland' (6 counties). The Unionists of the 6 counties accepted this scheme, and a Northern Parliament was duly elected on 24 May 1921. The rest of Ireland, however, ignored the Act.

On 6 Dec. 1921 a treaty was signed between Great Britain and Ireland by which Ireland accepted dominion status subject to the right of Northern Ireland to opt out. This right was exercised, and the border between Saorstát Éireann (26 counties) and Northern Ireland (6 counties) was fixed in Dec. 1925 as the outcome of an agreement between Great Britain, the Irish Free State and Northern Ireland. The agreement was ratified by the three parliaments.

Subsequently the constitutional links between Saorstát Éireann and the UK were gradually removed by the Dáil. The remaining formal association with the British Commonwealth by virtue of the External Relations Act, 1936, was severed when the Republic of Ireland Act, 1948, came into operation on 18 April 1949.

National flag: Green, white, orange (vertical).

National anthem: The Soldier's Song (words by P. Kearney; music by P. Heaney).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The Irish Republic is a sovereign independent, democratic republic. Its parliament exercises jurisdiction in 26 of the 32 counties of Ireland.

The first constitution of the Irish Free State came into operation on 6 Dec. 1922. Certain provisions which were regarded as contrary to the national sentiments were gradually removed by successive amendments, with the result that at the end of 1936 the text differed considerably from the original document. On 14 June 1937 a new constitution was approved by Parliament (Dáil Éireann) and enacted by a plebiscite on 1 July 1937. This constitution came into operation on 29 Dec. 1937. Under it the name Ireland (Éire) was restored.

The constitution provides that, pending the reintegration of the national territory, the laws enacted by the Parliament established by the constitution shall have the same area and extent of application as those of the Irish Free State.

The Oireachtas or National Parliament consists of the President and two Houses, viz., a House of Representatives, called Dáil Éireann, and a Senate, called Seanad Éireann, consisting of 60 members. The Dáil, consisting of 144 members, is elected by adult suffrage. Of the 60 members of the Senate, 11 are nominated by the Taoiseach (Prime Minister), 6 are elected by the universities and the remaining 43 are elected from 5 panels of candidates established on a vocational basis, representing the following public services and interests: (1) national language and culture, literature, art, education and such professional interests as may be defined by law for the purpose of this panel; (2) agricultural and allied interests, and fisheries; (3) labour, whether organized or unorganized; (4) industry and commerce, including banking, finance, accountancy, engineering and architecture; (5) public administration and social services, including voluntary social activities. The electing body is a college of about 900 members, comprising members of the Dáil, Senate, county boroughs and county councils.

A maximum period of 90 days is afforded to the Senate for the consideration or amendment of Bills sent to that House by the Dáil, but the Senate has no power to veto legislative proposals.

No amendment of the constitution can be effected except with the approval of the people given at a referendum.

Agreement on the establishment of a Council of Ireland was reached at a meeting held at Sunningdale on 6–9 Dec. 1973. Members of the Irish and UK governments attended together with the Northern Ireland Executive-designate.

Irish is the first official language; English is recognized as a second official language.

For further details of the Constitution see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1952, pp. 1123–24.

President: Erskine Childers (installed on 25 June 1973). The President holds office for 7 years.

Former Presidents: Dr Douglas Hyde (1938–45); Seán T. O. Ceallaigh (1945–59; 2 terms); Éamon de Valéra (1959–73; 2 terms).

A general election was held on 28 Feb. 1973: Fianna Fáil, 69 (1969 election, 75); Fine Gael, 54 (50); Labour Party, 19 (18); Independents, 2 (1).

There are no formal party divisions in the Senate.

The coalition Government (Labour and Fine Gael) consists of the following members:

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. The elected local authorities comprise 27 county councils, 4 county borough corporations, 7 borough corporations, 49 urban district councils and 28 town commissions. All the members of these authorities are elected under a system of proportional representation, normally every 5 years. All residents of an area who have reached the age of 18 are entitled to vote in the local election for their area. Women are eligible for election as members of local authorities in the same manner and on the same conditions as men. Elected members are not paid, but provision is made for the payment of travelling expenses and subsistence allowances.

The local authorities are concerned mainly with physical planning and development, the provision of infrastructure, environmental and amenity services and, to lesser extent, with protective and regulatory services. Their principal functions may be classified under the headings Planning and Development, Roads, Housing, Sanitary and Environmental Services, and Public Assistance; Health Services which were administered by local authorities up to 1971 are now administered by regional health boards, but the local authorities continue to finance a proportion of their cost. Because of the small size of their administrative areas the functions which are actually carried out by town commissioners and many of the urban district councils have tended to become increasingly limited, and the more important tasks of local government have become the responsibility of the county councils.

The local authorities have a system of government which combines an elected council and a whole-time manager. The elected members have specific functions reserved to them which include the making of rates (local tax), the borrowing of money, the adoption of development plans, the making, amending or revoking of bye-laws and the nomination of persons to other bodies. The managers, who are paid officers and employees of their authorities, are responsible for the performance of all functions which are not reserved to the elected members, including the employment of staff, making of contracts, management of local authority property, collection of rates (tax) and rents and the day-to-day administration of local authority affairs. The manager for a county council is manager also for every borough corporation, urban district council and board of town commissioners whose functional area is wholly within the county. A central body called the Local Appointments Commission is charged with the duty of selecting suitable persons to be appointed by local authorities to chief executive offices, professional offices and other prescribed offices. Where a prescribed office is not being filled by promotion, the local authority must request the Commissioners to recommend to them a suitable person. The Commissioners normally select persons for appointment by the machinery of selection boards.

The revenue expenditure of local authorities is financed by a local tax on the occupation of property, called rates, grants and subsidies from the central government and payments for certain services which they provide. Capital expenditure is financed mainly by means of borrowing from the Local Loans Fund, which is operated by the central government, and from banking and insurance institutions.

Local authorities use a scheme of combined purchasing to obtain commodities of standard quality at the lowest possible price. Official supply contractors are appointed annually by the Minister for Local Government on the recommendation of an advisory committee.

EDUCATION. ELEMENTARY. Elementary education is free and is given in 3,879 national schools. The average daily enrolment of pupils in 1971-72 was 512,370; the percentage average daily attendance 90.3; the number of teachers of all classes 14,870. There are 5 state-aided training colleges. The estimated state expenditure on elementary education for 1973-74 is £44,504,000, excluding the cost of administration.

Satisfactory progress is being made in the provision of up-to-date facilities and accommodation for primary school children including disadvantaged children. Where feasible 1-teacher and 2-teacher schools are being closed and the pupils conveyed to larger schools by state-aided transport services.

The state is pursuing a policy of grouping children in larger educational units, involving the closing of small schools and the conveyance of pupils to larger schools by state-aided transport services. Over 1,000 small schools have been closed since this policy was initiated.

A new child-centred curriculum was formally introduced into the primary schools in 1971. In-service training of teachers is proceeding to familiarize them with the philosophy and methods of the new programme.

SECONDARY. The secondary schools are under private control and are conducted in many cases by religious orders; all schools receiving grants from the state are open to inspection by inspectors of the Department of Education. The number of recognized secondary schools during the school year 1972-73 was 574, and the number of pupils in attendance was 162,161. Total state expenditure for 1973-74 is £35,788,000.

Grants for the provision of a wide range of audio visual teaching aids are available to secondary schools. The schools television service, Telefis Scoile, provides programmes in Irish, English, history, geography, mathematics and science subjects for senior and junior pupils. The vast majority of secondary schools now have at least one television receiving set which was purchased with the aid of a state grant.

CONTINUATION AND TECHNICAL. Vocational centres provide courses of continuation and technical education, apprentice training, courses of technician training and courses leading to professional qualifications (e.g., architecture, engineering, accountancy). These centres are controlled by the local Vocational Education Committees, and are maintained partly by the rates and partly by state grants. The estimated state expenditure for 1973-74 is £19.7m., excluding the cost of administration, and the expenditure from the local rates, £1,742,320.

COMPREHENSIVE SCHOOLS which are established and financed by the State combine academic and technical subjects in one broad curriculum so that each pupil may be offered an education structured to his needs, abilities and interests. Pupils are prepared for the State examinations and for entrance to universities and institutes of further education. To date, 12 comprehensive schools have been built. The estimated State expenditure on these schools for 1973-74, including building and running costs, is £1m.

COMMUNITY SCHOOLS have been set up in 12 areas and a further number of such schools throughout the country is planned. The establishment of community schools arises from the amalgamation of existing secondary and vocational schools or through the establishment, in new city areas, of a single school instead of setting up separate secondary and vocational schools. These schools will cater for all aspects of second-level education and will provide adult education facilities in the areas in which they are situated. They will also make facilities available to voluntary organizations and to the adult community generally.

REGIONAL TECHNICAL COLLEGES have been set up in 7 provincial centres Athlone, Carlow, Dundalk, Galway, Letterkenny, Sligo and Waterford. An eighth college is expected to open in Cork in Sept. 1974. The colleges provide senior-cycle post-primary, apprentice, technician, professional and other courses. The estimated state expenditure on the colleges for 1972-73, including capital running costs, is £1.83m.

AGRICULTURAL. Full-time instruction in agriculture is provided for all sections of the farming community. There are 4 state agricultural colleges for young men, administered by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries, and 7 private state-aided agricultural colleges, at each of which a 1-year course in agriculture is given. Second-year courses in general agriculture, farm machinery, dairying and beef cattle and sheep production are provided at a number of the colleges. Advanced courses in pig and poultry husbandry and management are also provided. Scholarships tenable at these colleges, all of which are residential, are awarded by the County Committees of Agriculture. These Committees provide a comprehensive agricultural advisory service and also conduct winter classes in agriculture and horticulture at local centres. A more comprehensive course is provided in winter farm schools, which are intended, in general, for persons of not less than 17 years of age who are engaged in farming.

HORTICULTURAL. A 2-year course in commercial horticulture is provided at 3 residential colleges. There is also a 2-year course in amenity horticulture at the National Botanic Gardens in Dublin.

POULTRY-KEEPING AND FARM HOME MANAGEMENT. Advanced 3-year residential courses are provided at the Munster Institute, Cork, for young women who wish to qualify for teaching and advisory posts in poultry-keeping and dairying and in farm home management. The farm home management course includes instruction in poultry-keeping, butter and cheese-making, general farming and home management. A 1-year non-residential course of instruction for the training of young men and women as technicians in poultry husbandry is also provided at the Munster Institute (which is administered by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries).

RURAL DOMESTIC ECONOMY AND RURAL SCIENCE. A year course for young women in poultry-keeping, dairying and rural domestic economy is given at 6 private residential schools of rural domestic economy, 1 private residential school of rural domestic science and Gurteen Agricultural College. The County Committees of Agriculture award scholarships tenable at these institutions. Classes in poultry-keeping and farm home management are also conducted by the County Committees at local centres.

A scheme of farm apprenticeship and a trainee farmer scheme are operated by the Farm Apprenticeship Board, which represents various agricultural interests. The scheme provides for practical training on well-managed commercial farms.

HIGHER EDUCATION IN AGRICULTURE, HORTICULTURE, DAIRY SCIENCE AND VETERINARY SCIENCE. Higher education in general agriculture and horticulture, leading to University degrees, is provided by University College, Dublin, and in dairy science by University College, Cork. Training in veterinary medicine and surgery, leading to University degrees, is provided at the Veterinary College, Ballsbridge, Dublin, by University College, Dublin, and Trinity College.

UNIVERSITY EDUCATION is provided by the National University of Ireland, founded in Dublin in 1908, and by the University of Dublin (Trinity College), founded in 1592. The National University comprises 3 constituent colleges—University College, Dublin, University College, Cork, and University College, Galway—and a 'recognized' college, St Patrick's College, Maynooth, Co. Kildare. St Patrick's College is a national seminary for Catholic priests and a pontifical university with the power to confer degrees up to doctoral level in philosophy, theology and canon law. It now admits lay students (men and women) to the courses in arts, Celtic studies, science and education which it provides as a 'recognized' college of the National University.

The National Institute for Higher Education, Limerick, was officially opened in Sept. 1972. It provides courses primarily of a technological character, with a significant element of the humanities. The courses will lead to the award of degrees and diplomas.

CINEMAS (1961). There were 183 cinemas, with a seating capacity of about 152,000.

NEWSPAPERS (1970). There are 7 daily newspapers (all in English) with a combined circulation of 686,214; 5 of them are published in Dublin (circulation, 593,656).

SOCIAL WELFARE. Social-welfare services concerned primarily with income maintenance are under the general control of the Minister for Social Welfare. The services administered by the Department of Social Welfare are divided into Insurance and Assistance schemes.

Insurance Services. Non-manual employees earning up to £1,600 a year¹ and all manual employees irrespective of their earnings are compulsorily insured from age 16 to 69 years and pay weekly contributions. (The insured population is approximately 818,000.) Subject to appropriate statutory conditions (but without regard to the recipients' means) the following insurance benefits are available: Disability benefit, invalidity benefit, unemployment benefit, widow's pension, deserted wife's benefit, orphan's allowance, maternity benefit, treatment benefit, retirement pension payable at 65, old-age pension payable at the age of 69 and a death grant. The cost of these benefits is borne by a Social Insurance Fund, which is maintained on a tripartite basis by (approximately equal) contributions from employers and employees, supplemented by a state grant sufficient to keep the Fund in equilibrium.

The insurance services also provide for payment of benefits in respect of injury, disablement or death, as well as medical care resulting from an occupational accident or disease. These benefits are available to employees, irrespective of age, other than non-manual workers earning over £1,600 a year,¹ and are paid from an Occupational Injuries Fund which is financed by employers' contributions.

¹ This limit to be abolished in spring 1974 bringing all employees into compulsory insurance.

Assistance Services. Children's allowances are payable without a means test in respect of each child under 16 years of age and children between 16 and 18 who are at school, in apprenticeship or incapacitated for a prolonged period. The following Assistance services are subject to means and, sometimes, residence tests: Non-contributory widows and orphans' pensions to the survivors of persons whose lack of insurance (or inadequate insurance record) precludes payment of contributory pensions; deserted wife's allowance to women under 69 years of age who have been deserted by their husbands and for whom the deserted wife's benefit is similarly precluded; old age pensions payable at age 69 to persons not entitled to insurance pensions; blind pensions (under the same general conditions as apply to old age pensions) payable at age 21; unemployment assistance payable during unemployment to persons not entitled to receive unemployment benefit. A person unable to provide the necessities of life for himself is eligible for public assistance; failing assistance in an institution, such a person must be given home assistance, generally in the form of a cash payment on a weekly basis, but, in particular cases, in kind.

HEALTH SERVICES. Persons in the lower income group (those who are unable to provide medical services from their own resources, and their dependants) are entitled to free general medical practitioner attention, including any medicines or appliances that may be necessary, free hospital and specialist treatment, free maternity care and infant-welfare services, free dental, ophthalmic and aural treatment and appliances, and free mental-hospital treatment. All persons are entitled to hospital (including mental hospital) and specialist treatment, free maternity care and infant-welfare services and help towards the cost of drugs and medicines. Such persons must pay a contribution of £7 a year, or £0.15 a week, towards the cost of these services. Hospital treatment for tuberculosis and certain other infectious diseases is provided free of charge to all classes of the community. All diabetics are eligible for a free supply of drugs and other necessary medicines, etc. Pupils of national (elementary) schools are provided with a free school health-examination service and are also eligible for free hospital and specialist treatment and free dental, ophthalmic and aural services for defects discovered at school health examinations. A free child-welfare clinic service for children under 6 years of age is available in many urban areas. All these services are provided by regional health authorities under the direction and control of the Minister for Health.

JUSTICE. The Constitution provides that justice shall be administered in public in Courts established by law by Judges appointed by the President on the advice of the Government. The jurisdiction and organization of the Courts are dealt with in the Courts (Establishment and Constitution Act, 1961) and the Courts (Supplemental Provisions) Acts, 1961-68 and the Courts Act, 1971. These Courts consist of Courts of First Instance and a Court of Final Appeal, called the Supreme Court. The Courts of First Instance are the High Court with full original jurisdiction and the Circuit and the District Courts with local and limited jurisdiction. A Judge may not be removed from office except for stated misbehaviour or incapacity and then only on resolutions passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas. Judges of the Supreme, High and Circuit Courts are appointed from among practising barristers. Judges of the District Court (called District Justices) may be appointed from among practising barristers or practising solicitors.

The Supreme Court, which consists of the Chief Justice (who is ex officio an additional Judge of the High Court) and 4 ordinary judges, has appellate jurisdiction from all decisions of the High Court. The President may, after consultation with the Council of State, refer a Bill, which has been passed by both Houses of the Oireachtas (other than a money bill and certain other bills), to the Supreme Court for a decision on the question as to whether such Bill or any provision thereof is or are repugnant to the Constitution.

The High Court, which consists of a President (who is ex officio an additional Judge of the Supreme Court) and 7 ordinary judges, has full original jurisdiction in and power to determine all matters and questions, whether of law or fact, civil or criminal. In all cases in which questions arise touching the validity of any law having regard to the provisions of the Constitution, the High Court alone exercises original jurisdiction. The High Court on Circuit acts as an appeal court from the Circuit Court.

The Court of Criminal Appeal consists of the Chief Justice or an ordinary Judge of the Supreme Court, together with either 2 ordinary judges of the High Court or the President and one ordinary judge of the High Court. It deals with appeals by persons convicted on indictment where the appellant obtains a certificate from the trial judge that the case is a fit one for appeal, or, in case such certificate is refused, where the court itself, on appeal from such refusal, grants leave to appeal. The decision of the Court of Criminal Appeal is final, unless that court or the Attorney-General certifies that the decision involves a point of law of exceptional public importance, so that an appeal should be taken to the Supreme Court.

The High Court exercising criminal jurisdiction is known as the Central Criminal Court. It consists of a Judge or judges of the High Court, nominated by the President of the High Court. The Court sits in Dublin and tries criminal cases which are outside the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court or which may be sent forward to it for trial from the Circuit Court on the application of the Attorney-General or the accused person.

The country is divided into a number of circuits for the purposes of the Circuit Court. The President of the Circuit Court is ex officio an additional judge of the High Court. The jurisdiction of the court in civil proceedings is limited to £2,000 in contract and tort, £2,000 in actions founded on hire-purchase and credit-sale agreements, £5,000 in equity and £5,000 in probate and administration, save by consent of the parties, in which event the jurisdiction is unlimited. In criminal matters it has jurisdiction in all cases except murder, treason, piracy and allied offences. The Circuit Court acts as an appeal court from the District Court.

The District Court has a summary jurisdiction in a large number of criminal cases where the offence is not of a serious nature. In civil matters the Court has jurisdiction in contract and tort (except slander, libel, criminal conversation, seduction, slander of title, malicious prosecution and false imprisonment) where the claim does not exceed £250; in proceedings founded on hire-purchase and credit-sale agreements, the jurisdiction is £250.

All criminal cases, except those of a minor nature, are tried by a judge and a jury of 12. Juries are also used in many civil cases in the High Court. In a criminal case the jury must be unanimous in reaching a verdict, but in a civil case the agreement of 9 members is sufficient.

FINANCE. Currency. The unit of currency is the Irish pound, which since June 1972 has been floating in line with the pound sterling against other currencies, the one-for-one relationship between the two currencies being maintained. The dollar rate of the Irish pound at end-Sept. 1973 was £1 = $2.414. The Central Bank has the sole right of issuing legal tender notes; token coinage is issued by the Minister for Finance through the Bank. Decimal currency was adopted in 1971.

The volume of the legal-tender note issue was £185,511,996 on 31 March 1973. Total notes and coins in circulation in March 1973 amounted to £199,857,000.

DEFENCE. Under the direction of the President, and subject to the provisions of the Defence Act, 1954, the military command of the Defence Forces is exercisable by the Government through the Minister for Defence. To aid and counsel the Minister for Defence on all matters in relation to the business of the Department of Defence on which he may consult it, there is a Council of Defence consisting of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister, the Secretary of the Department of Defence, the Chief of Staff, the Adjutant-General and the Quarter-master-General. Establishments provide at present for a Permanent Defence Force of approximately 14,000 all ranks including the Air Corps and the Naval Service. The Defence Estimates for the year ending 31 March 1973 provide for approximately 23,200 all ranks of the Reserve Defence Force. Recruitment is on a voluntary basis. Minimum term of enlistment for the Army is 3 years in the Permanent Defence Force or 3 years in the Permanent Defence Force and 9 years in the Reserve Defence Force. For the Naval Service, enlistment is for 4 years in the Permanent Force or 6 years in the Permanent Defence Force and 6 years in the Reserve Defence Force.

The Naval Service comprises a new all-weather fishery protection vessel completed in the Irish Republic in 1972 and 3 coastal minesweepers acquired from Britain in 1971 for fishery protection.

The Air Corps is for defence and training purposes with a personnel strength of approximately 500 all ranks. Eight Cessna aircraft were delivered in Oct. 1972; there is also a small number of Chipmunk, Provost, Vampire and Dove trainers, and 6 Alouette III helicopters.

The Defence Estimates for the year ending 31 March 1974 provide for an expenditure of £34,172,000.

Since April 1964 an Irish Contingent has formed part of the UN Force in Cyprus. Irish officers have served also with the UN in the Lebanon, New Guinea and, from Sept. 1965 to March 1966, 12 officers served with the UN India-Pakistan Observation Mission. Irish officers are at present serving with the UN Truce Supervision Organization in the Middle East.

TOURISM. Estimated number of visits by foreigners (including cross-border movement) in 1972 was 7.95m.; they spent an estimated £70.4m.

LABOUR. The Department of Labour is responsible for the administration of legislation concerning: (i) the safety, health and welfare mainly of industrial workers, and those employed in mining and quarrying; (ii) conditions of employment and holidays with pay in the non-agricultural sectors; (iii) National Manpower Service; (iv) industrial training (through An Chomhairle Oiliúna—the Industrial Training Authority); (v) redundancy payments and resettlement allowances; (vi) industrial relations; and (vii) trade unions.

An Industrial Training Authority (ANCo) was established by the Minister for Labour under the Industrial Training Act, 1967, to assist in the improvement of industrial training; ANCo's programme covers apprentice recruitment and training, the training and retraining of adult workers in industrial training centres and the designation and levying of industries for training purposes under the Act. Levy-grant schemes, the purpose of which is to stimulate training by industry itself, are in operation for 6 designated industries.

The Redundancy Payments Acts provide for financial compensation to workers who lose their employment as a result of redundancy. Workers with a minimum of 2 years' service with their employers are entitled to benefit under the Act.

The Resettlement Assistance Scheme, administered by the Department of Labour, provides financial assistance for workers who have to move to new areas to take up employment arranged through the manpower service. Grants and allowances are payable towards the costs involved for the workers in transferring dependants and household effects to the new employment areas.

The National Manpower Service is responsible for the development of job placement and post-school guidance work throughout the country and for the collection and dissemination of information on manpower.

Labour and Employment. The total labour force at mid-April 1972 was 1.12m., of which 68,000 persons were out of work.

The number of trade unions holding negotiation licences in 1972 was 92, 71 of which were workers' trade unions and the remainder employers' trade unions. The total membership of these unions was estimated at 364,000, 7,000 of whom were in the employers' trade unions. Of the 357,000 workers in trade unions approximately 230,000 were organized in 6 general unions catering for both white collar and manual workers. Trade unions representing the majority of workers in the Public Service and their membership are not included in these figures as, generally, they are not obliged to hold negotiation licences.

European Social Fund. The Department of Labour has been designated by the Irish Government as the national agency responsible for formulating and transmitting to the EEC Commission Irish applications for assistance from the European Social Fund. Assistance is available from the Fund towards expenditure on certain schemes of training, retraining and resettlement of workers and of vocational rehabilitation of the handicapped, provided that those schemes receive financial assistance from public funds.

BANKING. The Central Bank, which was established as from 1 Feb. 1943, in accordance with the Central Bank Act, 1942, replaced the Currency Commission, which was set up under the Currency Act, 1927, and had been responsible inter alia for the regulation of the note issue. In addition to the powers and functions of the Currency Commission the Central Bank has the power of receiving deposits from banks and public authorities, of rediscounting Exchequer bills and bills of exchange, of making advances to banks against such bills or against Government securities, of fixing and publishing rates of interest for rediscounting bills, of buying and selling certain Government securities and securities of any international bank or financial institution formed wholly or mainly by governments. The Bank also collects and publishes information relating to monetary and credit problems. The Central Bank Act, 1971, gives further powers to the Central Bank in the regulation of banking including licensing of banks, the supervision of their operators and control of liquidity and reserve ratios. The capital of the Bank is £40,000, of which £24,000 has been paid up and is held by the Minister for Finance.

The Board of Directors of the Central Bank consists of a Governor, appointed by the President of the Republic on the advice of the Government, and 8 directors, all appointed by the Minister for Finance, 6 direct and 2 from a panel selected by the Associated Banks (the term applied to the 8 shareholding banks associated with the former Currency Commission).

STATISTICAL INFORMATION. The Central Statistics Office (Earlsfort Terrace, Dublin, 2) was established in June 1949, and is attached to the Department of the Taoiseach; Director: T. P. Linehan, B.E., B.Sc.

The Central Statistics Office took over the work carried out since 1922 by the Statistics Branch, Department of Industry and Commerce, which in turn had continued the statistical work carried out by the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction (since 1900) and by the Irish Department of the Ministry of Labour, London (since 1919). Vital statistics from 1864, annual agricultural statistics prior to 1900 and decennial census of population were compiled by the Registrar-General for Ireland. The population censuses were carried out in 1926, 1936 and 1946 by the Statistics Branch of the Department of Industry and Commerce and are now the responsibility of the Central Statistics Office, which has also, as from July 1950, taken over from the Registrar-General the compilation of Vital Statistics. The Statistics Act 1926 confers wide powers for the collection, compilation and publication of statistics. Other Acts under which statistics are collected are Workmen's Compensation Act, Merchant Shipping Act, Customs Consolidation Act and Road Transport Act.

Principal publications of the Central Statistics Office are National Income and Expenditure (annually), Statistical Abstract (annually), Census of Population Reports, Census of Industrial Production Reports, Trade and Shipping Statistics (annually and monthly), Trend of Employment and Unemployment (annually), Reports on Vital Statistics (annually), Irish Statistical Bulletin (quarterly).

ISRAEL

Medinat Israel—State of Israel

In 1967, following some years of uneasy peace, local clashes on the Israeli-Syrian border were followed by Egyptian mass concentration of forces on the borders of Israel. The UN emergency force was expelled and a blockade of shipping to Israel was imposed by Egypt in the Red Sea. Israel struck out at Egypt on land and in the air on 5-6 June 1967. Jordan joined in the conflict which spread to the Syrian borders. By 11 June the Israelis had occupied the Gaza Strip and the Sinai peninsula as far as the Suez Canal in Egypt, West Jordan as far as the Jordan valley and the heights east of the Sea of Galilee, including the town of Quneitra in Syria.

A further war broke out on 8 Oct. 1973 when an Egyptian offensive was launched across the Suez Canal and Syrian forces struck on the Golan Heights. Following UN Security Council resolutions a ceasefire finally came into being on 24 Oct. In Dec. agreement was reached by Egypt and Israel on disengagement. By April 1974 no agreement had been reached with Syria and fighting on the Golan Heights again broke out.

Some of the following statements and statistics refer to the situation existing before these wars.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. Israel is an independent sovereign republic, established by proclamation on 14 May 1948. For the history of the British Mandate, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1920-49, under PALESTINE.

In 1950 the Knesset (Parliament), which in 1949 had passed the Transition Law dealing in general terms with the powers of the Knesset, President and Cabinet, resolved to enact from time to time fundamental laws, which eventually, taken together, would form the Constitution. The first of these fundamental laws, dealing with the Knesset, Israel Lands and the President, were passed in 1958, 1960 and 1964 respectively.

National flag: White with 2 horizontal blue stripes, the blue Shield of David in the centre.

National anthem: Hatikvah (The Hope). Words by N. N. Imber (1878); adopted as the Jewish National Anthem by the first Zionist Congress (1897).

The Knesset, a one-chamber Parliament, consists of 120 members. It is elected for a 4-year term by secret ballot and universal direct suffrage. The system of election is by proportional representation. In Dec. 1973 the Knesset was composed as follows: 'Labour Alignment', consisting of the Labour Party (a merger of Mapai, Abduth Ha'avoda and Rafi) and left wing Mapam, 51; Aguda-Poale Aguda, 5; Likud, 39; Beduin and villagers, 1; Moked-Maki, 1; Progressive and Development, 2; Citizens Rights, 3; National Religious Party, 10; Independent Liberals, 4; New Communist list, 4. The President is elected by the Knesset by secret ballot by a simple majority; his term of office is 5 years. He may be re-elected once.

Former Presidents of the State: Zalman Shazar, elected on 21 May 1963 (re-elected 26 March 1968), after the death of President Izhak Ben-Zvi.

President: Ephraim Katchalski, elected 10 April 1973 by 66 to 41 votes.

On 11 April 1974 Golda Meir resigned as Prime Minister. The Israel Labour Party chose Gen. Yizhak Rabin by 298 votes to 294 to succeed Golda Meir as Prime Minister. At the time of going to press Gen. Rabin was attempting to reconstitute a coalition government. Failure to form a government would cause a general election.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. Local authorities are of three kinds, namely, municipal corporations, local councils and regional councils. Their status, powers and duties are prescribed by statute. Regional councils are local authorities set up in agricultural areas and include all the agricultural settlements in the area under their jurisdiction. All local authorities exercise their authority mainly by means of bye-laws approved by the Minister of the Interior. Their revenue is derived from rates and a surcharge on income tax. Local authorities are elected for a 4-year term of office.

There are 29 municipalities (2 Arab), 118 local councils (47 Arab and Druze) and 48 regional councils (1 Arab) comprising 695 villages.

AREA AND POPULATION. The area of Israel, within the boundaries defined by the 1949 armistice agreements with Egypt, Jordan, the Lebanon and Syria, is 20,700 sq. km (7,993 sq. miles), with a population (May 1972 census, provisional) of 3,164,000. The area within the ceasefire lines is 89,359 sq. km (34,493 sq. miles). Population of areas which came under Israeli administration as a result of the 6-day war was approximately 1m. Judaea and Samaria (West Bank), 600,000. Gaza Strip, 365,000. Northern Sinai, 33,000 and a few thousand on the Golan Heights.

Crude birth rate per 1,000 population of Jewish population (1969), 23.4; non-Jewish, 46.4; crude death rate, Jewish, 7.2; non-Jewish, 5.9; infantile mortality rate per 1,000 live births, Jewish, 19; non-Jewish, 40.3.

On 23 Jan. 1950 the Knesset proclaimed Jerusalem the capital of the State. Population of the main towns (31 Dec. 1971): Tel-Aviv/Jaffa, 383,200; Jerusalem, 301,300; Haifa, 219,200; Ramat Gan, 119,300; Holon, 93,400; Bat-Yam, 90,700; Petach Tikva, 87,300; Beersheba, 81,100; Netanya, 67,700.

The official languages are Hebrew and Arabic.

IMMIGRATION. The following table shows the numbers of Jewish immigrants entering Palestine (Israel), including persons entering as travellers who subsequently registered as immigrants. For a year-by-year breakdown, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1951, p. 1167.

1919-32	84,093	1940-47	92,563	1952-61	334,000

During the period 1948-68, 43.3% of the immigrants came from Europe, America and Oceania, and 56.7% from Asia and Africa.

The Jewish Agency for Palestine, which, in accordance with Article IV of the Palestine Mandate, played a leading role in laying the political, economic and social foundations on which the State of Israel was established, continues to be instrumental in organizing immigration.

RELIGION. Religious affairs are under the supervision of a special Ministry, with departments for the Christian and Moslem communities. The religious affairs of each community remain under the full control of the ecclesiastical authorities concerned: in the case of the Jews, the Sephardi and Ashkenazi Chief Rabbis, in the case of the Christians, the heads of the various communities, and in the case of the Moslems, the Qadis. The Druzes were officially recognized in 1957 as an autonomous religious community.

The Jewish Sabbath and Holy Days are observed as days of rest in the public services. Full provision is, however, made for the free exercise of other faiths, and for the observance by their adherents of their respective days of rest and Holy Days.

The General Assembly of the United Nations proposed, in its resolution of 29 Nov. 1947, the establishment of an international regime for the Jerusalem area. Following the war of June 1967 the State of Israel, in spite of repeated protests by the UN, undertook the responsibility for all Holy Sites and places of worship of all faiths in Jerusalem and the areas under military administration.

EDUCATION. The school system is under the direction of the Ministry of Education and Culture, and comprises kindergarten, primary, secondary and technical schools.

A law passed by the Knesset on 12 Sept. 1949 provides for free and compulsory primary education from 5 to 14 years of age. Youths in the age groups 14–18, who have not completed their primary schooling, must attend special classes.

The State Education Law of 12 Aug. 1953 established a unified state-controlled elementary school system with a provision for special religious schools. The standard curriculum for all elementary schools is issued by the Ministry with a possibility of adding supplementary subjects comprising not more than 25 % of the total syllabus. Many schools in towns are private, a number are maintained by municipalities and some are administered by teachers' co-operative or trustees.

There are also a number of private schools maintained by religious foundations—Jewish, Christian and Moslem—and also by private societies.

The Hebrew University of Jerusalem, founded in 1925, comprises faculties of the humanities, social sciences, law, science, medicine and agriculture. In 1973 it had a teaching staff of 1,500 and 16,000 students.

The Technion in Haifa had, in 1971, 18 faculties and departments with 1,220 teachers and 20,525 students. The Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovoth is engaged in research in chemistry, physics and biology; founded in 1949, it had a staff of 1,100 in 1971.

In 1973 the Tel Aviv University had 9 faculties, some 1,900 teachers and 9,000 students. The religious Bar-Ilan University at Ramat Gan, opened in 1965 had, in 1969, 4 faculties (Jewish studies, natural sciences, social sciences, philology), 800 teachers and 5,000 students. There are university colleges at Haifa and Beersheba.

CINEMAS (1971). There were 270 cinemas with a seating capacity of 185,000.

NEWSPAPERS (1969). There were 23 daily newspapers, including 13 in Hebrew, 2 in Arabic, 1 each in Yiddish, German, English, French, Hungarian, Polish, Bulgarian, Romanian, with a total circulation of over 500,000.

SOCIAL WELFARE. In 1971 Israel had 158 hospitals with 22,866 beds. The 'Malben' organization cares for sick, aged or handicapped immigrants. The Women's International Zionist Organization has a number of children's homes, crèches and kindergartens as well as vocational schools and training institutions for nurses.

The National Insurance Law, which took effect in April 1954, provides for old-age pensions, survivors' insurance, work-injury insurance, maternity insurance and family allowances. In 1971 there were plans for unemployment insurance.

JUSTICE. LAW. Under the Law and Administration Ordinance, 5708/1948, the first law passed by the Provisional Council of State, the law of Israel is the law which was obtaining in Palestine on 14 May 1948 in so far as it is not in conflict with that Ordinance or any other law passed by the Israel legislature and with such modifications as result from the establishment of the State and its authorities.

Capital punishment was abolished in 1954, except for support given to the Nazis and for high treason.

The law of Palestine was derived from three main sources, namely, Ottoman law, English law (Common Law and Equity) and the law enacted by the Palestine legislature, which to a great extent was modelled on English law. The Ottoman law in its turn was derived from three main sources, namely, Moslem law which had survived in the Ottoman Empire, French law adapted by the Ottomans and the personal law of the non-Moslem communities.

CIVIL COURTS. Municipal courts, established in certain municipal areas, have criminal jurisdiction over offences against municipal regulations and bye-laws and certain specified offences committed within a municipal area.

Magistrates courts, established in each district and sub-district, have limited jurisdiction in both civil and criminal matters.

District courts, sitting at Jerusalem, Tel-Aviv and Haifa, have jurisdiction, as courts of first instance, in all civil matters not within the jurisdiction of magistrates courts, and in all criminal matters, and as appellate courts from magistrates courts and municipal courts.

The Supreme Court has jurisdiction as a court of first instance (sitting as a High Court of Justice dealing mainly with administrative matters) and as an appellate court from the district courts (sitting as a Court of Civil or of Criminal Appeal).

In addition, there are various tribunals for special classes of cases, such as the Rents Tribunals and the Tribunals for the Prevention of Profiteering and Speculation. Settlement Officers deal with disputes with regard to the ownership or possession of land in settlement areas constituted under the Land (Settlement of Title) Ordinance.

RELIGIOUS COURTS. The rabbinical courts of the Jewish community have exclusive jurisdiction in matters of marriage and divorce, alimony and confirmation of wills of members of their community other than foreigners, concurrent jurisdiction with the civil courts in such matters of members of their community who are foreigners if they consent to the jurisdiction, and concurrent jurisdiction with the civil courts in all other matters of personal status of all members of their community, whether foreigners or not, with the consent of all parties to the action, save that such courts may not grant a decree of dissolution of marriage to a foreign subject.

The courts of the several recognized Christian communities have a similar jurisdiction over members of their respective communities.

The Moslem religious courts have exclusive jurisdiction in all matters of personal status over Moslems who are not foreigners, and over Moslems who are foreigners, if under the law of their nationality they are subject in such matters to the jurisdiction of Moslem religious courts.

Where any action of personal status involves persons of different religious communities, the President of the Supreme Court will decide which court shall have jurisdiction, and whenever a question arises as to whether or not a case is one of personal status within the exclusive jurisdiction of a religious court, the matter must be referred to a special tribunal composed of 2 judges of the Supreme Court and the president of the highest court of the religious community concerned in Israel.

FINANCE. Currency. The unit of currency is the Israeli £ (I£), divided into 100 agorot (up to 31 Dec. 1959; 1,000 prutah). There are coins of I£½ and I£1 as well as of 1 agora, 5, 10 and 25 agorot and bank-notes of I£1, 5, 10, 50 and 100; Currency in circulation (in I£1m.) on 31 Dec. 1971 was 1,552.

Budget. The budget year runs from 1 April to 31 March (in I£m.):

	1970-71	1971-72
Revenue	7,567	10,167
Revenue for development budget	3,633	4,654
Expenditure	11,200	14,821

In 1971-72 the main items of expenditure (in I£1m.) were: Security, 6,184; education, 770; communications, 445; agriculture and water, 159; industry, 276; health, 254; social welfare, 225; housing, 804.

Income tax is levied progressively up to a maximum of 71.9%. A Defence Levy of 10% on income tax paid was introduced during the 6-day war.

DEFENCE. The Defence Service Law of 8 Sept. 1949, as amended, provides a compulsory 30-month conscription (extended to 36 months in 1968) for men between the ages of 18 and 26 and a 2-year conscription for men in the age-group of 27-29 years. Unmarried women aged 18-26 serve 20 months. After their term of military service, men and childless women are on the reserves until the ages of 55 and 34 years respectively. In addition, all are liable to 1 day's service per month. Officers and n.c.o.s are liable to an additional 1 month's service each year.

Men over 49 years are exempted from service in the reserves, but may volunteer for civil defence.

Army. The regular army had a strength, at the outbreak of the 4th Arab-Israeli war, of 95,000 (including 12,000 women), organized in 10 armoured, 9 mechanized, 9 infantry and 5 parachute brigades. The reserve army of about 200,000 men is organized in 26 brigades.

The highest army rank is that of Lieut.-General (Rav Alouf), and the Chief-of-Staff, who is the C.-in-C., holds that rank. A divisional commander is a Brigadier (Tat Alouf), and a brigade commander a Colonel (Alouf Mishne).

Navy. The Navy includes 2 submarines (acquired from Britain), 14 missile boats, 9 torpedo boats, 30 patrol craft, 7 firefish craft and 10 landing craft.

New construction includes 3 diesel-electric patrol submarines being built in Britain and 4 steel-hulled guided-missile boats of 415 tons displacement each being built in Israel.

The former Nautical School in Haifa has been reorganized as a Naval Officers' School in Acre. Naval personnel (1973) totalled 250 officers and 3,750 men including commandos and reserves.

Air Force. The Air Force has a regular personnel strength of about 15,000, with nearly 500 first-line aircraft. All first-line combat aircraft are jets, mostly of French and US manufacture. Three squadrons operate a total of about 35 Mirage III supersonic multi-mission fighters (some armed with Matra R. 530 missiles), reportedly supplemented by Israeli-built J79-engined 'Super Mirages'; and more than 150 F-4E Phantom fighters, 6 RF-4E reconnaissance fighters and about 250 A 4E/H/N Skyhawk light bombers are believed to have been acquired from the USA, of which some 27 Phantoms and 52 Skyhawks were lost in the Oct. 1973 war, as well as 8 Mirages and 20 other aircraft. Two reserve fighter-bomber squadrons are equipped with Mystère IVAs. One interceptor squadron has supersonic Super Mystères. There are also a reconnaissance attack squadron of twin jet Vautours (reported to be in store), 2 transport squadrons of Noratlas, C-47 and locally modified Boeing 707 and 'swing tail' Stratocruiser aircraft (used also for ECM and flight refueling duties), about 30 C-130 Hercules turboprop transports, helicopter squadrons of CH-53, S-61R, CH-47C Chinook, Super Frelon, Agusta Bell 205 and Alouette aircraft, and training units, the last-named having locally built Magister jet trainers, which can also be used in a light ground attack role. Hawk surface to air missiles are in service.

AGRICULTURE. In the coastal plain (Sharon, Emek Hefer and the Shephelah) mixed farming, poultry raising, citriculture and vineyards are the main agricultural activities. The Emek (the Valley of Jezreel) is the main agricultural centre of Israel. Mixed farming is to be found throughout the valleys; the sub-tropical Beisan and Jordan plainlands are also centres of banana plantations and fish breeding. In Galilee mixed farming, olive and tobacco plantations prevail. The Hills of Ephraim are a vineyard centre; many parts of the hill country are under afforestation. In the northern Negev farming has been aided by the Yarkon-Negev water pipeline. This has become part of the overall project of the 'National Water Carrier', which is to take water from the Sea of Galilee (Lake Kinnereth) to the south. The plan includes a number of regional projects such as the Lake Kinnereth-Negev pipeline which came into operation in 1964; it has an annual capacity of 320m. cu. metres.

A land-utilization survey has graded the country as follows: 3,392,000 dunams under dry farming and 3,938,000 dunams under irrigation suitable for all types of cultivation, 697,000 dunams under dry farming and 1,339,000 dunams under irrigation suitable for plantations, 8.49m. dunams suitable for pasture, 882,000 dunams suitable for afforestation, 470,000 dunams unfit for any type of cultivation.

The area under cultivation (in 1,000 dunams) in 1972-73 was 4,220, of which 1,815 were under irrigation. Of the total cultivated area 2,670 dunams were under field crops, 415 under vegetables, potatoes and melons, 860 under citrus and orchards, 56 under fish ponds and 185 under miscellaneous crops.

Industrial crops, such as cotton and sugar-beet, have successfully been introduced. In 1966 the area under cotton totalled 220,000 dunams and under sugar-beet 50,000.

Livestock (1972) included 267,150 cattle, 182,000 sheep and goats, 7.55m. laying hens.

Characteristic types of rural settlement are, among others, the following: (1) The Kibbutz and Kvutza (communal collective settlement), where all property and earnings are collectively owned and work is collectively organized. (2) The Moshav Ovdim (workers' co-operative smallholders' settlement) which is founded on the principles of mutual aid and equality of opportunity between the members, all farms being equal in size; hired labour is prohibited. (3) The Moshav Shitufi (co-operative settlement), which is based on collective ownership and economy as in the Kibbutz, but with each family having its own house and being responsible for its own domestic services. (4) The Moshav (smallholders' settlement), which resembles the moshav ovdim but lacks the latter's rigid ideological basis; hired labour, for instance, is permitted. (5) The Moshava (village), in which land and property are privately owned and every resident is responsible for his own well-being. In 1967, of the 801 rural settlements in Israel, 232 were kibbutzim (population, 82,000), 343 moshvei ovdim and other smallholder settlements (121,000), 22 moshavim shitufiim (4,900), 60 moshavot and other villages based on private marketing (50,000), 99 Arab villages (181,000, not including 32,500 Bedouin); the rest were temporary settlements and educational institutions.

MINING. The most valuable natural resources of the country are the potash, bromine and other salt deposits of the Dead Sea, which are exploited by the Dead Sea Works, Ltd. Geological research and exploration of the natural resources in the Negev are undertaken by the Israel Mining Corporation. Copper is being worked at Timna near Eilat. Potash production in 1970-71 was 909,300 tons.

A plant for the production of 46,000 tons of magnesium and 80,000 tons of hydrochloric acid per annum is being erected in the Arod area.

Oil was first discovered in Sept. 1955 at Heletz in the Negev. Thirty-four oil-wells were in operation in 1971 with output of 83,000 tons. Natural gas is being exploited at Rosh Zohar, near the Dead Sea; output in 1970 equalled 123,000 tons of fuel oil.

INDUSTRY. A wide range of products is manufactured, processed or finished in the country, including chemicals, metal products, textiles, tyres, diamonds, paper, plastics, leather goods, glass and ceramics, building materials, precision instruments, tobacco, foodstuffs, electric goods, including refrigerators and radios.

A law for the encouragement of capital investment, passed on 29 March 1950, grants substantial privileges to foreign investors. An Investment Centre was established in May 1950, and had by early-1971 approved investments totalling I£1,000m.

POWER. Electric-power consumption amounted during 1970-71 to 6,769m.kwh.

LABOUR. The General Federation of Labour (Histadrut) founded in 1920, had, in 1972, about 1.16m. members (including 73,000 Arabs); including workers' families, this membership represents 56.8% of the Jewish population. Several trades unions of lesser importance also exist.

Histadrut participates in over 70% of Israeli agriculture and 23% of industrial production; it runs the Kupat Holim (workers' health service) and has large interests in banking, insurance, retail business, construction and building.

In 1970 the average daily number of registered unemployed was 2,211.

SHIPPING. Israel has 3 commercial ports, Haifa, Ashdod and Eilat. The deep-water port at Ashdod came into use at the end of 1965, when the ports of Tel-Aviv and Jaffa were closed for freight services. An Israel Ports Authority began to operate in 1962. In 1966 2,310 ships anchored in Israeli ports; 4.6m. tons of freight (not including fuel) were handled. The Israeli merchant fleet consisted at 1 Jan. 1971 of 119 vessels, totalling 3.3m. GRT and 52 new ships are on order for delivery 1974 when total capacity will be 4.5m. GRT.

RAILWAYS. Internal communications are provided by 664 km of main railway lines and 285 km of branch lines (1969). The 30-km line Beersheba-Dimona was extended to Oran and from Mamshit to Tzefa in 1970. In 1969, 5m. passengers and 3m. tons of freight were carried by rail.

BANKING. On 24 Aug. 1954 the Knesset passed the Bank of Israel Law, establishing a state-owned central bank. The Bank of Israel started operations on 1 Dec. 1954; it is the bank of issue and sole banker of the Government. Other principal banks are Bank Leumi le Israel BM, the Israel Discount Bank, Barclays Bank International and the Workers' Bank, Ltd. Assets and liabilities in the 28 commercial banks and the 18 Co-operative Credit Societies operating in Israel totalled I£4,819m. at 31 July 1969.

ITALY

Repubblica Italiana

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. On 10 June 1946 Italy became a republic on the announcement by the Court of Cassation that a majority of the voters at the referendum held on 2 June had voted for a republic. The final figures, announced on 18 June, showed: For a republic, 12,718,641 (54·3 % of the valid votes cast, which numbered 23,437,143); for the retention of the monarchy, 10,718,502 (45·7 %); invalid and contested, 1,509,735. Total 24,946,878, or 89·1 % of the registered electors, who numbered 28,005,449. For the results of the polling in the 13 leading cities, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1951, p. 1175. Voting was compulsory, open to both men and women 21 years of age or older, including members of the Civil Service and the Armed Forces; former active Fascists and a few other categories were excluded.

On 18 June the then Provisional Government without specifically proclaiming the republic, issued an 'Order of the Day' decreeing that all court verdicts should in future be handed down 'in the name of the Italian people', that the Gazzetta Ufficiale del Regno d'Italia should be re-named Gazzetta Ufficiale della Repubblica Italiana, that all references to the monarchy should be deleted from legal and government statements and that the shield of the House of Savoy should be removed from the Italian flag.

Thus ended the reign of the House of Savoy, whose kings had ruled over Piedmont for 9 centuries and as Kings of Italy since 18 Feb. 1861. (For fuller account of the House of Savoy, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1946, p. 1021.) The Crown Prince Umberto, son of King Vittorio Emanuele III, became Lieut.-Gen. (i.e., Regent) of the kingdom on 5 June 1944. Following the abdication and retirement to Egypt of his father on 9 May 1946, Umberto was declared King Umberto II; his reign lasted to 13 June, when he left the country. King Victor Emmanuel III died in Alexandria on 28 Dec. 1947.

The new constitution was passed by the constituent assembly by 453 votes to 62 on 22 Dec. 1947; it came into force on 1 Jan. 1948. The constitution consists of 139 articles and 18 transitional clauses. Its main dispositions are as follows:

Italy is described as 'a democratic republic founded on work'. Parliament consists of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate. The Chamber is elected for 5 years by universal and direct suffrage and it consists of 630 deputies. The Senate is elected for 5 years on a regional basis; each Region having at least 6 senators, consisting of 315 elected senators; the Valle d'Aosta is represented by 1 senator only. The President of the Republic can nominate 5 senators for life from eminent men in the social, scientific, artistic and literary spheres. On the expiry of his term of office, the President of the Republic becomes a senator by right and for life, unless he declines.

The President of the Republic is elected in a joint session of Chamber and Senate, to which are added 3 delegates from each Regional Council (1 from the Valle d'Aosta). A two-thirds majority is required for the election, but after a third indecisive scrutiny the absolute majority of votes is sufficient. The President must be 50 years or over; his term lasts for 7 years. The President of the Senate acts as his deputy. The President can dissolve the chambers of parliament, except during the last 6 months of his term of office.

The Cabinet can be forced to resign only on a motivated motion of censure; the defeat of a government bill does not involve the resignation of the Government.

A Constitutional Court, consisting of 15 judges who are appointed, 5 each, by the President of the Republic, Parliament (in joint session) and the highest law and administrative courts, has rights similar to those of the Supreme Court of the USA. It can decide on the constitutionality of laws and decrees, define the powers of the State and Regions, judge conflicts between the State and Regions and between the Regions, and try the President of the Republic and the Ministers. The court was set up in Dec. 1955.

The reorganization of the Fascist Party is forbidden. Direct male descendants of King Victor Emmanuel are excluded from all public offices, have no right to vote or to be elected, and are banned from Italian territory; their estates are forfeit to the State. Titles of nobility are no longer recognized, but those existing before 28 Oct. 1922 are retained as part of the name.

National flag: Green, white, red (vertical).

National anthem: Fratelli d'Italia (words by G. Mameli; tune by M. Novaro, 1847).

The peace treaty was signed in Paris on 10 Feb. 1947, and ratified on 15 Sept. 1947. Italy ceded to France 4 frontier districts on the Little St Bernard Pass, the Mont-Cenis Plateau, the Mont-Thabor and Chaberton areas, and the upper valleys of the Tinée, Vésubie and Roya (see map in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1948); to Yugoslavia, nearly the whole of the province of Venezia Giulia, the commune of Zara and the island of Pelagosa; to Greece, the Dodecanese; to Albania, the island of Saseno; to China the Italian concession at Tientsin. Italy also gave up her former colonies.

Under the peace treaty Italy was to pay reparations to the following states: Greece, $105m.; Yugoslavia, $125m.; USSR, $100m.; Ethiopia, $25m.; Albania, $5m. By 30 Nov. 1967 the whole debt had been paid.

Head of State: On 24 Dec. 1971 Chamber and Senate in joint session elected by an absolute majority (518 votes out of 1,008 votes cast) Giovanni Leone (Christian Democrat; born 1908), President of the Republic.

Former Presidents of the Republic: Luigi Einaudi (1948–55); Giovanni Gronchi (1955–62); Antonio Segni (1962–64); Giuseppe Saragat (1964–71).

General elections for the Senate and Chamber of Deputies took place on 7 May 1972.

REGIONAL ADMINISTRATION. Italy is administratively divided into regions, provinces (province) and municipalities (comuni). The division into 20 autonomous regions (regioni), as envisaged in the 1948 constitution, has been completed.

These special regions have their own parliaments (consiglio regionale) and governments (giunta regionale e presidente) with certain legislative and administrative functions adapted to the circumstances of each region. A government commissioner is in charge for the co-ordination between regional and national activities.

RELIGION. The treaty between the Holy See and Italy, of 11 Feb. 1929, confirmed by article 7 of the constitution of the Republic, lays down that the Catholic Apostolic Roman Religion is the only religion of the State. Other creeds are permitted, provided they do not profess principles, or follow rites, contrary to public order or moral behaviour.

The appointment of archbishops and of bishops is made by the Holy See; but the Holy See submits to the Italian Government the name of the person to be appointed in order to obtain an assurance that the latter will not raise objections of a political nature.

Catholic religious teaching is given in elementary and intermediate schools. Marriages celebrated before a Catholic priest are automatically transferred to the civil register. Marriages celebrated by clergy of other denominations must be made valid before a registrar. In 1971 there were 279 dioceses with 28,045 parishes and 42,215 priests. There were 181,741 members (150,396 women) of about 20,000 religious houses.

In 1962 there were about 100,000 Protestants and about 50,000 Jews.

EDUCATION. Education is compulsory from 6 to 14 years of age. An optional pre-school education is given to the children between 3 and 5 years in the preparatory schools (kindergarten schools). Illiteracy of males over 6 years was 9.6% in 1961, of females 10%.

Compulsory education can be classified as primary education (5-year course) and junior secondary education (3-year course).

Senior secondary education is subdivided in classical (ginnasio and classical liceo), scientific (scientific liceo) and technical education: agricultural, industrial, commercial, technical, nautical institutes, institutes for surveyors, institutes for girls (5-year course) and teacher-training institutes (4-year course).

University education is given in Universities and in University Higher Institutes (4, 5, 6 years, according to degree course).

JAPAN

Nippon (or Nihon)

HISTORY. The house of Yamato, from about 500 B.C. the rulers of one of several kingdoms, in about A.D. 200 united the nation; the present imperial family are their direct descendants. From 1186 until 1867 successive families of Shoguns exercised the temporal power. In 1867 the Emperor Meiji recovered the imperial power after the abdication on 14 Oct. 1867 of the fifteenth and last Tokugawa Shogun Keiki (in different pronunciation: Yoshinobu). In 1871 the feudal system (Hōken Seido) was abolished; this was the beginning of the rapid westernization.

At San Francisco on 8 Sept. 1951 a Treaty of Peace was signed by Japan and representatives of 48 countries. For details see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1953, p. 1169. On 26 Oct. 1951 the Japanese Diet ratified the Treaty by 307 votes to 47 votes with 112 abstentions. On the same day the Diet ratified a Security Treaty with the US by 289 votes to 71 votes with 106 abstentions. The treaty provided for the stationing of American troops in Japan until she was able to undertake her own defence. The peace treaty came into force on 28 April 1952, when Japan regained her sovereignty. In 1960 Japan signed the Japan-US Mutual Security Treaty, valid for 10 years, which was renewed in 1970. In June 1971 the Okinawa Reversion Agreement providing for the return from the US to Japan of Okinawa on 15 May 1972 was signed.

EMPEROR. The Emperor bears the title of Nihon-koku Tennō ('Emperor of Japan'). Hirohito, born in Tōkyō, 29 April 1901; succeeded his father, Yoshihito, 25 Dec. 1926; married 26 Jan. 1924, to Princess Nagako, born 6 March 1903. Living sons: (1) Prince Akihito (Tugunomiya), born 23 Dec. 1933; formally installed as Crown Prince on 10 Nov. 1952; married to Miss Michiko Shoda (born 20 Oct. 1934), 10 April 1959. Offspring: Prince Naruhito (Hironomiya), born 23 Feb. 1960; Prince Fumihito (Ayanomiya), born 30 Nov. 1965; Princess Sayako (Norinomiya), born 18 April 1969. (2) Prince Masahito (Hitachinomiya), born 28 Nov. 1935; married to Miss Hanako Tsugaru, 30 Sept. 1964.

By the Imperial House Law of 11 Feb. 1889, revised on 16 Jan. 1947, the succession to the throne was fixed upon the male descendants.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. Japan's Government is based upon the Constitution of 1947 which superseded the Meiji Constitution of 1889. In it the Japanese people pledge themselves to uphold the ideas of democracy and peace. The Emperor is the symbol of the States and of the unity of the people. Sovereign power rests with the people. The Emperor has no powers related to government. Japan renounces war as a sovereign right and the threat or the use of force as a means of settling disputes with other nations. Fundamental human rights are guaranteed.

National flag: White, with a red sun (without rays).

National anthem: Kimi ga yo wa (words 9th century, tune by Hiromori Hayashi, 1881).

Legislative power rests with the Diet, which consists of the House of Representatives (of 486 members), elected by men and women over 20 years of age for a 4-year term, and the House of Councillors of 250 members (100 elected at large and 150 from prefectural districts), one-half of its members being elected every 3 years. The Lower House controls the budget and approves treaties with foreign powers.

The former House of Peers is replaced by the House of Councillors, whose members, like those of the House of Representatives, are elected as representatives of all the people. The House of Representatives has pre-eminence over the House of Councillors.

At Feb. 1974 the House of Representatives consists of 283 Liberal-Democrats, 118 Socialists, 29 Komeito, 20 Democratic Socialists, 39 Communists, 2 Independents.

Executive power is vested in the Cabinet, which is collectively responsible to the Diet. Prime Ministers must be civilians.

The Cabinet, as constituted in Feb. 1974, is composed as follows:

Prime Minister: Kakeui Tanaka.

Justice: Umekichi Nakamura. Foreign Affairs: Masayoshi Ohira. Finance: Takeo Fukuda. Education: Seisuke Okuno. Health and Welfare: Kunikichi

Saito. Agriculture and Forestry: Tadao Kuraishi. International Trade and Industry: Yasuhiro Nakasone. Transport: Masatoshi Tokunaga. Posts and Telecommunications: Ken Harada. Labour: Takashi Hasegawa. Construction: Takao Kameoka. Home Affairs: Kingo Machimura. Ministers of State: Takeo Miki; Susumu Nikaido; Tokusaburo Kosaka; Shigeru Hori; Sadanori Yamanaka; Tsuneo Uchida; Kinji Moriyama.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT. The country is divided into 46 prefectures (Todōfuken), including Tōkyō-to (the capital), Ōsaka-fu and Kyōto-fu, Hokkai-dō, and 42 Ken. Each Todōfuken has its governor (Chiji) elected by the voters in the area. The prefectural government of Tōkyō-to is also responsible for the urban part (formerly Tōkyō-shi) of the prefecture. Each prefecture, city, town and village has a representative assembly elected by the same franchise as in parliamentary elections.

New legislation, which came into effect on 1 July 1954, has given the central government complete control of the police throughout the country.

AREA AND POPULATION. Japan, in 1971, had a land area of 369,662 sq. km (142,726.5 sq. miles). The 4 main islands are Honshū (mainland), Kyūshū, Hokkaidō and Shikoku.

On 26 June 1968 the USA retroceded to Japan the Bonin and Volcano Islands groups (see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1968-69, pp. 781-83). In May 1972 Okinawa reverted to Japan.

Census population, 1 Aug. 1973, was 108.43m. (including Okinawa) with density of 290.7 per sq. km (53m. males, 55m. females). Estimate (1 Nov. 1973) 108.83m. (including Okinawa). Foreigners registered, Oct. 1973, were 737,370, of whom 635,452 were Koreans, 46,270 Chinese, 21,394 Americans, 3,700 British, 2,695 Germans, 1,620 Canadians.

The Northern Army, stationed in Hokkaidō, consists of 4 divisions (1 of which is mechanized), an artillery brigade (including 1 Hawk anti-aircraft missile battalion), a tank group and an engineering group. The Western Army stationed in Kyūshū, consists of 2 divisions. The North-Eastern Army (2 divisions), the Eastern Army (2 divisions), the Central Army (3 divisions) and an independent parachute brigade are stationed in Honshū. The infantry division establishment is approximately 9,000 with 4 infantry regiments or 7,000 (lower establishment) with 3 infantry regiments. Each infantry division has an artillery unit, an anti-tank unit, a tank battalion and an engineering battalion in addition to administrative units.

Navy. The 'Maritime Self-Defence Force' comprises 14 submarines, 2 so-called destroyers of 4,700 tons standard displacement (as big as light cruisers) each carrying 3 helicopters, a guided-missile destroyer, 28 destroyers, 15 frigates, 3 minelayers, 2 modern purpose-built training ships, 39 coastal minesweepers, 1 minesweeper support ship, 2 submarine rescue vessels, 10 minesweeping boats, 20 patrol vessels, 7 torpedo-boats, 4 landing ships, 6 landing craft, 1 oiler and 88 auxiliaries and minor craft.

A guided missile destroyer, 2 submarines, 4 frigates and 3 missile boats are under construction, only part of the schedule of 70 ships projected under the fourth 5-year defence programme (1973-77).

Personnel in 1973 numbered 44,000 (7,000 officers, 32,000 ratings, 5,000 civil).

The Navy has a strong air arm, including 22 S2F and 67 P2V anti-submarine patrol, 65 trainers, 69 helicopters and 11 other aircraft.

The 'Maritime Safety Agency' (Coast Guard) controls 10 large patrol vessels, 40 medium patrol vessels, 38 small patrol vessels, 213 patrol craft, 28 survey ships and 118 navigation supply vessels. Personnel in 1973 numbered 11,100 officers and men.

Air Force. An 'Air Self-Defence Force' was inaugurated on 1 July 1954. In 1973 its equipment included 7 squadrons (each 18-25 aircraft) of F-104J Starfighters, 1 squadron of F-4EJ Phantoms, 6 squadrons of F-86F Sabre day fighters, 1 squadron of RF-86F reconnaissance fighters and 2 squadrons of NAMC YS-11 and C-46 transports, some of which are equipped with special electronic systems for ECM duties. The F-86s and the RF-86Fs are being replaced by F-4EJ and RF-4EJ Phantoms respectively; the C-46s will be replaced by Kawasaki C-1

twin-turboprop transports. About 30 helicopters, including S-62 and V107s, and MU-2S twin-turboprop aircraft do search, rescue and general duties. Training units use piston-engined T-34 Mentor basic trainers, Fuji T-1 jet intermediate trainers and T-33 jet advanced trainers, with the supersonic Mitsubishi T-2 scheduled for service from 1974. Five surface-to-air missile battalions are in service. Total strength is about 910 aircraft and 40,000 officers and men.

PLANNING. The National Income Doubling Plan 1961-70 was replaced by the Economic and Social Development Programme, 1967-1972, which has been superseded by the Plan for Social and Economic Development 1973-78. The Plan envisages an annual growth rate of 9.4%.

AGRICULTURE. Agricultural workers in full-time employment in 1972 decreased to 5.2m.; 17.8% of the labour force as opposed to 24.7% in 1962. The arable land area in 1972 was 5.7m. hectares (6m. in 1965). Diversion of ordinary fields to non-agricultural uses accounted largely for this decrease. Rice cultivation accounted for 2.6m. hectares. The area planted with industrial crops such as tea, mulberry, hemp, etc., was 247,000 hectares in 1972.

In 1972 there were 3.5m. power cultivators and tractors in use together with 1m. power sprayers and 1.3m. power dusters.

For post-war land reform, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1955, p. 1791. Holdings average 2 acres (0.8 hectare); only 5% are more than 10 acres.

While rice is still Japan's most important crop, occupying 47% of the cultivated area, efforts are now being made to encourage farmers to diversify into other crops. Until recently Japan was obliged to import 15-20% of her rice requirements, but the situation is now one of serious over-production. Decline in demand owing to changes in diet, combining with vastly improved yields from new strains to produce a large surplus. Average daily per capita consumption dropped to 300 grammes per annum in 1969 from the peak demand of 400 grammes per annum in the fifties. Output of rice was 14m. tons in 1969 and 12.7m. in 1970.

Production in 1972 (in 1,000 metric tons) of barley was 250; wheat, 284, and soybeans, 126. Sweet potatoes, which in the past mitigated the effects of rice famines, has, in view of rice over-production, decreased from 4.96m. tons in 1965 to 2.56m. tons in 1970. Domestic sugar-beet production accounts for only 20% of requirements. In 1968, 2.05m. metric tons were imported, 75% of this being imported from Cuba, Australia and South Africa.

Fruit production, 1971 (in 1,000 metric tons): Peaches 265.4; pears, 424.5; apples, 1,007; grapes 245.5; persimmons, 308.8, and mandarins, 248.9.

Livestock (Feb. 1972): 3.57m. cattle (including 1.82m. milch cows), 97,000 horses, 6.9m. pigs, 28,000 sheep, 124,000 goats, 222.44m. chickens. Milk output is increasing—in 1971, 4.82m. metric tons of milk.

FORESTRY. Forests and grasslands cover about 24.48m. hectares (70% of the whole land area), with an estimated timber stand of 2,079,072 cu. metres in 1971. In 1970, 66m. cu. metres of industrial timber were felled.

FISHERIES. Before the War, Japanese catch represented one-half to two-thirds of the world's total fishing; in 1968 it was 13.5%. The catch in 1970 was 9.3m. metric tons, excluding deep-sea fishing and whaling. Japan is the leading whaling nation. Output of whale-oil, 1970-71, 72,606 metric tons from 16,877 whales caught.

MINING. Ore production in metric tons, 1971, of copper, 121,029; lead, 70,586; aluminium, 887,100; manganese, 285,005; iron, 830,000; zinc, 294,419; tungsten, 1,283; antimony, 3; coal, 35.6m.; chromite, 31,642; molybdenum, 552; gold, 7,939; silver, 351,258 kg.

Output of crude petroleum, 1971, was 879,000 kilolitres, almost entirely from oilfields on the island of Honshū, but 221m. kilolitres of crude oil had to be imported. Output of natural gas, 1971, 2.4m. cu. metres.

INDUSTRY. Japan's industrial equipment, 1970, numbered 652,900 plants of all sizes, employing 11.2m. production workers.

Since 1920 there has been a shift from light to heavy industries. The production of electrical appliances and electronic machinery has made great strides: television sets (1972: 13m.), radio sets (1972: 26.8m.), cameras (1972: 5.3m.), computing machines, automation equipment are produced in increasing quantities. The chemical industry ranks third in production value after textiles and iron and steel. Production, 1971, included (in metric tons): Ammonium sulphate, 2m.; calcium superphosphate, 708,000; sulphuric acid, 6.7m.; caustic soda, 2.8m.

Output (1971), in 1,000 metric tons, of pig-iron was 72,745; crude steel, 88,557; hot rolled steel, 75,933.

In 1971 paper production was 7.1m. tons; paperboard, 5.8m., and pulp production, 7.1m. tons.

Japan's textile industry before the War had 13m. cotton-yarn spindles. After the War she resumed with 2.78m. spindles; in 1964, 8.42m. spindles were operating. Output of cotton yarn, 1971, 534,000 metric tons, and of cotton cloth, 2,482m. sq. metres.

In wool, Japan aims at wool exports sufficient to pay for the imports of raw wool. Output, 1971, 173,000 metric tons of woollen yarns and 424m. sq. metres of woollen fabrics.

Output, 1971, of rayon woven fabrics, 1,432m. sq. metres; synthetic woven fabrics, 2,818m. sq. metres; silk fabrics, 189m. sq. metres.

Since 1955 Japan has led the world in shipbuilding and now accounts for 50% of the world's launchings. In 1970, 10.1m. gross tons were launched, of which 6.2m. were exported. In Oct. 1972 the world's largest oil tanker, the Globtik Tokyo (477,000 DWT) was launched from a Japanese shipyard.

POWER. In 1971 generating facilities were capable of an output of 76.5m. kw.; electricity produced was 385.67m. kwh.

TOURISM. In 1971, 660,700 foreigners visited Japan, while the number of Japanese travelling abroad totalled 868,600; 314,300 visitors came from USA, 34,500 from UK. Japanese tourist payments showed a deficit of US$337m.

LABOUR. Total labour force, 1972 was, 51.09m., of which 9.29m. were in agriculture and forestry, 561,000 in fishing, 204,000 in mining, 3.93m. in construction, 13.17m. in manufacturing, 9.81m. in commerce and finance, 3.17m. in transport and other public utilities, 7.5m. in services (including the professions) and 1.74m. in government work.

In June 1972 there were 11.9m. workers organized in 63,718 unions. The largest federation is the 'General Council of Japanese Trade Unions' (Sōhyō) with 4.27m. members. The 'Japanese Confederation of Labour' (Domei Kaigi) had 2.23m. members. The 'Federation of Independent Unions' (Churitsu Roren) founded in 1956 had 1.39m. members.

In 1970, 590,000 (1.2%) were unemployed. In 1972, 5.1m. working days were lost in industrial stoppages.

THE HASHEMITE KINGDOM OF JORDAN

Al Mamlaka al Urduniya al Hashemiyah

The official statistics given for the calendar year 1967 include estimates for the West Bank and East Jerusalem, at present under Israeli occupation, but the figures for 1968-73 relate only to that part of Jordan under the direct control of the Jordanian Government.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The Kingdom is a constitutional monarchy headed by His Majesty King Hussein, GCVO, eldest son of King Talal, who, being incapacitated by mental illness, was deposed by Parliament on 11 Aug. 1952 and died 8 July 1972. The King was born 14 Nov. 1935, and married Princess Dina Abdul Hamid on 19 April 1955 (divorced 1957). Toni Avril Gardiner (Muna al Hussein) on 25 May 1961 (divorced 1972) and Alia Toukan on 26 Dec. 1972. Offspring: Princess Alia, born 13 Feb. 1956; Prince Abdulla, born 30 Jan. 1962; Prince Faisal, born 11 Oct. 1963; Princesses Zein and Aisha, born 23 April 1968. Crown Prince (appointed 1 April 1965): Prince Hassan, younger brother of the King.

By a treaty, signed in London on 22 March 1946, Great Britain recognized Transjordan as a sovereign independent state. A new Anglo-Transjordan treaty was signed in Amman on 15 March 1948. The treaty was to remain in force for 20 years, but by mutual consent was terminated on 13 March 1957.

The Arab Federation between the Kingdoms of Iraq and Jordan, which was concluded on 14 Feb. 1958, lapsed after the revolution in Iraq of 14 July 1958, and was officially terminated by royal decree on 1 Aug. 1958.

On 25 May 1946 the Amir Abdullah assumed the title of King, and when the treaty was ratified on 17 June 1946 the name of the territory was changed to that of 'The Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan'. The legislature consists of a lower house of 60 members elected by manhood suffrage (30 from East Jordan and 30 from West Jordan), and a senate of 30 members nominated by the King. Elections took place on 16 April 1967.

The constitution passed on 7 Nov. 1951 provides that the Cabinet is responsible to Parliament.

The cabinet, at 21 Aug. 1973, is composed as follows:

AREA AND POPULATION. The part of Palestine remaining to the Arabs under the armistice with Israel 3 April 1949, with the exception of the Gaza strip, was in Dec. 1949 placed under Jordan rule and formally incorporated in Jordan on 24 April 1950; for the frontier lines see MAP in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1951. On 10 Aug. 1965 a treaty with Saudi Arabia provided for an exchange of about 6,000–7,000 sq. km in order to facilitate the development of the port of Aqaba.

Area, 95,000 sq. km (37,730 sq. miles): census population (18 Nov. 1961), 1,706,226; estimate, 1972, 2,467,000. The road from Amman to Ma'an and Aqaba (394 km) has branches to Karak, Tafileh, Shobak and Wadi Musa (Petra). The town of Jerash is joined by a good road to Amman. The normal asphalted route from Amman to Deraa (in Syria) and thence to Damascus is through Jerash. The oasis of Azraq may be reached by motor car from Mafraq, Zarka or Amman. KHMER REPUBLIC

Cambodia

HISTORY. The recorded history of Cambodia, now known officially as the Khmer Republic, starts at the beginning of the Christian era with the Kingdom of Fou-Nan, whose territories at one time included parts of Thailand, Malaya, Cochin-China and Laos. The religious, cultural and administrative inspirations of this state came from India. The Kingdom was absorbed at the end of the 6th century by the Khmers, under whose monarchs was built, between the 9th and 13th centuries, the splendid complex of shrines and temples at Angkor. Attacked on either side by the Vietnamese and the Thai from the 15th century on, Cambodia was saved from annihilation by the establishment of a French protectorate in 1863. Thailand eventually recognized the protectorate and renounced all claims to suzerainty in exchange for Cambodia's north-western provinces of Battambang and Siem Reap, which were, however, returned under a Franco-Thai convention of 1907, confirmed in the Franco-Thai treaty of 1937. In 1904 the province of Stung Treng, formerly administered as part of Laos, was attached to Cambodia. For history to 1949 see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1973-74, p. 1112.

In 1949 Cambodia was granted independence as an Associate State of the French Union. The transfer of the French military powers to the Cambodian government on 9 Nov. 1953 is considered in Cambodia as the attainment of sovereign independence. In Jan. 1955 Cambodia became financially and economically independent, both of France and the other two former Associate States of French Indo-China, Vietnam and Laos.

Anti-French guerilla bands had operated in the jungle from 1945, the most important being a nationalist group known as the Khmer Issarak led by Son Ngoc Thanh, who had, briefly, been Prime Minister during the Japanese occupation. By 1953 Communist bands drawn from the Vietnamese minority and controlled by the Vietminh were active, and in 1954 regular Vietminh forces invaded Cambodia. Fighting came to an end with the conclusion on 21 July 1954, at the Geneva Conference, of the agreement on Cambodia, which ensured the withdrawal of French and Vietminh troops, and most of the Khmer Issarak bands then surrendered. The International Control Commission composed of Canadian and Polish representatives with an Indian chairman and responsible for the implementation of the Geneva Agreements was withdrawn in Dec. 1969 at the request of Prince Sihanouk.

Following a period of increasing economic difficulties and growing indirect involvement in the Vietnamese war Prince Sihanouk was deposed in March 1970 and on 9 Oct. 1970 the Kingdom of Cambodia became the Khmer Republic. Between 1970-73 the country became subject to what steadily developed into civil war with anti-republican forces including communists receiving strong support from the North Vietnamese and the republican government received support from the US in the form of large-scale military and economic aid. In 1973 the Republican Government effectively controlled only the more populated areas while Sihanouk's 'government in exile' based in Peking claimed to control large areas of the country not under the day to day control of the Government in Phnom Penh.

GOVERNMENT. A republican constitution providing for an executive President and a bicameral Parliament was adopted by referendum on 4 May 1972. Marshal Lon Nol, who had previously been acting as President in the absence of a constitution, became the first elected President of the Republic as a result of elections held on 4 June 1972. A new National Assembly and Senate were elected in Sept. 1972. As a result of the withdrawal from the elections of the two main opposition parties all elective seats (all except 8 seats in the Senate) were won by members of the Socio-Republican Party supporting Lon Nol. In April 1973 a state of 'national danger' was declared and several clauses of the Constitution suspended and the activities of Parliament suspended.

President: Marshal Lon Nol.

Prime Minister: Long Boret.

AREA AND POPULATION. The Khmer Republic has an area about 181,000 sq. km (71,000 sq. miles), divided into 17 provinces: Kompong Thom (population, in peacetime 322,000), Kompong Cham (820,000), Battambang (551,860), Kampot (337,879), Siem Reap (313,000), Kompong Chhang (273,000), Kompong Speu (307,000), Takeo (467,000), Kratié (136,000), Stung Treng (136,000), Svay Rieng (287,000), Prey Veng (492,000), Pursat (180,000), Kandal (population, excluding Phnom Penh, 706,000), Ratanakiri (49,400), Mondulkiri (14,300), Koh Kong (38,700).

The total population of 6.8m. (1970) includes Vietnamese, Chinese, Chams and Europeans. In the uplands and in the north-east live various groups of hillmen, known as Khmer-Loeu.

The chief towns are Phnom Penh, the capital (population (estimated), 1.8m.), located at the junction of the Mekong and Tonle Sap rivers, and Battambang (population 60,000). Populations of major towns have fluctuated greatly since 1970 by flows of refugees from rural areas and from one town to another.

Khmer is the official language; the secondary language is French.

RELIGION. The majority of the population practise Theravada Buddhism. There are small Roman Catholic and Mohammedan minorities.

EDUCATION. (1970-71). There were 1,490 primary schools (337,290 pupils) compared with 5,699 and 989,464 in 1969-70, 95 secondary schools (81,611 pupils) and 12,453 students in higher education. These figures show the disruption caused by the spread of war in 1970 which lead to the concentration of all university education in Phnom Penh and closed many schools in rural areas and provincial towns. The situation continued to deteriorate during 1973.

FINANCE. Currency. Under the Paris agreements of 29 Dec. 1954, between the Associate States and France, the parity of the Cambodian piastre (henceforth to be known as a riel) was to be maintained for the time being at 10 francs = 1 riel. On 31 Dec. 1954 the quadripartite Institut d'Emission ceased operations and a new Cambodian National Bank became responsible for the issue of currency. In Nov. 1955 Vietnamese and Laotian bank-notes ceased to be legal tender in Cambodia.

The rates of exchange were £1 = 610 riels; US$1 = 250 riels in Oct. 1973.

Budget. In 1973 estimated total government revenue was 24,658m. riels and estimated total expenditure at 34,000m. riels. US economic aid has been the vital factor in sustaining the war effort and economy.

DEFENCE. The armed forces, styled Forces Armées Nationales Khmères (FANK), which consisted in Jan. 1970 of about 49,000 officers and men in the 3 services, has been expanded to meet the operational situation existing in the country, to a force of slightly over 200,000.

Army. The Army has 1 armoured brigade, 1 engineer brigade, 1 parachute brigade, 1 engineer brigade and 28 infantry brigades (about 175 battalions), and the normal communications, logistic and training elements. Strength (1973) 150,000-200,000.

Navy. The Navy, officially founded on 20 April 1954, includes 2 patrol vessels, 2 torpedo boats presented by Yugoslavia, 2 support gunboats (ex-landing ships), 3 landing craft, 20 minor landing craft, 3 seaward patrol craft, 3 coastal boats and 70 small craft, gunboats, converted junks, etc. Personnel in 1973: Navy, 3,400 officers and men; Marine Corps, 2,000 officers and men.

Air Force. Following the destruction of virtually all its aircraft in an enemy attack on Pochentong Air Force Base in Jan. 1971, the Air Force has been re-equipped with US and Australian assistance. It now has 24 A-37B light strike aircraft, about 40 T-28 piston-engined ground attack aircraft, at least 6 AC-47 gunships, 16 C-47 and at least 20 C-123B Provider transports, 32 UH-1 Iroquois helicopters, 9 Alouette II and III helicopters and about 30 Cessna, 14 AU-24 Stallion and 4 GY-80 Horizon light aircraft for tactical command and liaison duties. There are training and support elements. Total personnel in 1972: 5,900.

AGRICULTURE. The overwhelming majority of the population is normally engaged in agriculture, fishing and forestry. Of the country's total area of 44m. acres, about 20m. are cultivable and over 20m. are forest land. Some 4m. acres are cultivated, well over half being devoted to rice production. Before the spread of war the high productivity provided for a low, but well-fed, standard of living for the peasant farmers, the majority of whom owned the land they worked. A relatively small proportion of the food production entered the cash economy. The war and unwise pricing policies have led to a disastrous reduction in production to a stage in which the country has become a net importer of rice in 1972 and 1973 and will continue to be so in 1974.

A crop of about 3.8m. metric tons of paddy were produced in 1969-70. Rubber production in 1968 amounted to 49,000 metric tons but less than 10,000 metric tons in 1972.

Other products are maize, and, in usual order of value, livestock, timber, pepper, haricot beans, soybeans and fish.

FORESTRY. Much of Khmer's surface is covered by potentially valuable forests, 3.8m. hectares of which are reserved by the government to be awarded to concessionaires, and are not at present worked to an appreciable extent. The remainder is available for exploitation by the local residents, and as a result some areas are over-exploited and conservation is not practised. There are substantial reserves of pitch pine.

FISHERIES. Khmer has the greatest fresh-water fish resources in South-East Asia but production in 1970 (30,000 tons) was about a third of that for 1966.

MINING. A phosphate factory, jointly controlled by the state and private interests, was set up in 1966 near a deposit of an estimated 350,000 tons. Another deposit of about the same size is earmarked for exploitation. High-grade iron-ore deposits (possibly as much as 2.5m. tons) exist in Northern Khmer, but are not exploited commercially because of transportation difficulties. Some small-scale gold panning (6,687 troy oz. in 1963) and gem (mainly zircon) mining is carried out at Pailin where there is potential for considerable expansion. In Sept. 1972 a French company began drilling for oil in off-shore waters.

INDUSTRY. Some development of industry had taken place before the spread of open warfare in 1970. Industry producing basic requirements have continued to operate and in Phnom Penh there have been some further expansion. of minor processing industry and in the manufacturing of pharmaceuticals. Much industry outside the capital has been badly damaged. Industry established and in operation in Jan. 1970 included a motor-vehicle assembly plant, 3 cigarette manufacturing concerns, a modern factory, several metal fabricating concerns, a distillery, a saw-mill, textile, fish canning, plywood, paper, cement, sugar sack, tyre, pottery and glassware factories and a cotton-ginnery. In the private sector there are about 3,200 manufacturing enterprises, producing a wide range of goods; most of them are small family concerns. An oil refinery at Kompong Som came into production in 1969 but was put out of action by an attack in early 1971.

COMMERCE. Principal imports by order of value (1972) were petroleum products, metals and machinery (including vehicles), general foodstuffs and chemicals.

The only recorded export in 1972 was 7,328 metric tons of rubber. Much of the country's trade is with Hong Kong and Singapore.

Total trade with UK, in £1,000 sterling (British Board of Trade returns):

	1967	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	657	651	328	—	23	4
Exports and re-exports from UK	1,474	1,541	1,067	1,443	592	204

ROADS. There were, in 1970, 2,574 km of asphalt roads (including the 'Khmer-American Friendship Highway' from outside Phnom Penh to close to Kompong Som, built under the United States aid programme and opened in July 1959), 359 km of macadamized roads, and about 1,213 km of improved dirt roads. Since 1970 many road bridges have been destroyed and long stretches of highway closed to traffic or open only to escorted convoys.

RAILWAYS. A line of 385 km (1-metre gauge) links Phnom Penh to Poipet (Thai frontier). In 1969 traffic amounted to 170m. passenger-km and 76m. ton-km. Work was completed during 1969 on a line Phnom Penh-Kompong Som via Takeo and Kampot. Total length, 552 km but by 1973 only a short stretch between Battambang and the Thai border remained in operation. The remainder having been closed by military action.

SHIPPING. The port of Phnom Penh can be reached by the Mekong (through Vietnam) by ships of between 3,000 and 4,000 tons. In 1970, 97 ocean-going vessels imported 51,300 tons of cargo at Phnom Penh and exported 86,400 tons.

A new ocean port has been built under the French aid programme at Kompong Som (formerly Sihanoukville) on the Gulf of Siam and is being increasingly used by long-distance shipping. In 1970, 339,288 tons were imported and 257,659 tons were exported in 175 vessels (279 in 1969).

AVIATION. Pochentong airport, 10 km from Phnom Penh, gives direct services to Colombo, New Delhi, Bombay, Karachi, Athens, Nouméa, Tōkyō, Vientiane, Saigon, Bangkok, Hong Kong, Singapore, Rome and Paris. The airport accepts aircraft up to the Boeing 707.

The airport at Siemreap has been closed to international traffic since 1971. Minor airports have been expanded since 1970 and there are regular services between Phnom Penh and provincial capitals using DC 3 aircraft.

POST. There were 58 post offices functioning in 1968. There are telephone exchanges in all the main towns; number of telephones in 1968, 6,325. Phnom Penh has a direct telephone link with Hong Kong, Paris and Tokyo; and is linked by teletype with Hong Kong, Osaka, Paris and Saigon. Hong Kong is by far the most important link for both systems. There is an International Telex network in Phnom Penh and direct telephone and telegraphic links with Singapore.

BANKING. In 1964 all bank functions were taken over by government banks. In 1972 legislation permitted the re-opening of foreign banks but by the end of Dec. 1973 only a few representational offices had opened.

Note circulation was 26,082m. riels at 30 June 1973.

KOREA

Han Kook

HISTORY. Korea was united in a single kingdom under the Silla dynasty from 668. China, which claimed a vague suzerainty over Korea, recognized Korea's independence in 1895. Korea concluded trade agreements with the USA, Great Britain, Germany (1883), Italy and Russia (1884). After the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-5 Korea was virtually a Japanese protectorate until it was formally annexed by Japan on 22 Aug. 1910, thus ending the rule of the Yi dynasty which had begun in 1392.

Following the collapse of Japan in 1945, American and Russian forces entered Korea to enforce the surrender of the Japanese troops there, dividing the country for mutual military convenience into two portions separated by the 38th parallel of latitude. Negotiations between the American and Russians regarding the future of Korea broke down in May 1946.

On 25 June 1950 the North Korean forces crossed the 38th parallel and invaded South Korea. The same day, the Security Council of the United Nations asked all member states to render assistance to the Republic of Korea. When the UN forces had reached the Manchurian border Chinese troops entered the war on the side of the North Koreans on 26 Nov. 1950 and penetrated deep into the south. By the beginning of April 1951, however, the UN forces had regained the 38th parallel.

On 23 June 1951 Y. A. Malik, President of the Security Council, suggested a cease-fire, and on 10 July representatives of Gen. Ridgway met representatives of the North Koreans and of the Chinese Volunteer Army. An agreement was signed on 27 July 1953.

For the contributions of member-nations of the United Nations to the war, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1954, p. 1195, and 1956, p. 1180.

On 9 Aug. 1953 the USA and Korea signed a mutual defence pact and on 28 Nov. 1956 a treaty of friendship, commerce and navigation.

On 4 July 1972 it was announced in Seoul and Pyongyang (North Korea) that talks had taken place aimed at 'the peaceful unification of the fatherland as early as possible'.

GOVERNMENT. The first general election was held, under United Nations observation, on 10 May 1948. The National Assembly adopted a constitution on 17 July, elected Dr Syngman Rhee President of the Republic on 20 July and proclaimed the Republic of Korea on 15 Aug., when US military government ended.

President Syngman Rhee was re-elected on 5 Aug. 1952, 15 May 1956 and 15 March 1960, but was forced to resign and leave the country at the end of April 1960. The National Assembly on 15 June 1960 amended the constitution, changing the presidential-government system to a cabinet system, with the president as the symbolic head of state. A joint session of both Houses of Parliament on 12 Aug. 1960 elected the Democratic leader, Posun Yun, president.

The elections held on 29 July 1960 gave the Democratic Party 31 out of 58 seats in the House of Councillors and 181 out of 233 seats in the National Assembly.

The democratically elected government of Dr Myun Chang was overthrown by a military revolution on 16 May 1961. The National Assembly was dissolved and political parties were banned. The rule of the 'Supreme Council for National Reconstruction' under Gen. Chung Hee Park ended on 15 Oct. 1963 with his election as President of the Republic.

A new constitution was approved by a referendum on 17 Dec. 1962. On 14 Sept. 1969, the National Assembly passed a constitutional amendment bill, and the revision of the constitution was approved by a referendum on 17 Oct. 1970. The principle contents of the constitutional revision bill were that the number of members of the National Assembly shall be determined by law and shall not be more than 250 persons and the President may be elected for a maximum of 3 consecutive terms. The elections held on 26 Nov. 1963 and on 8 June 1967 gave Gen. Park's Democratic Republic Party a large majority.

Martial law was lifted on 13 Dec. 1972 and a new National Assembly was formed on 7 March 1973.

President of the Republic: Chung Hee Park (re-elected 27 April 1971).

Premier: Chong Pil Kim. Foreign Minister: Yong Shik Kim.

Severe inflation followed until on 17 Feb. 1953 President Rhee abolished the won, substituting a new unit, the hwan, equal to 100 won. The hwan depreciated from 60 in Feb. 1953 to 1,300 to US$1 in April 1961. On 10 June 1962 the hwan was revalued at the rate of 10 hwan = 1 won. The exchange rate is determined daily by the Foreign Exchange Bank of Korea; it is about 371 won = US$1.

NORTH KOREA

Chosun Minchu-chui Inmin Konghwa-guk

HISTORY. In northern Korea the Russians, arriving on 8 Aug. 1945, one month ahead of the Americans, established a Communist-led 'Provisional Government'. The newly created Korean Communist Party merged in 1946 with the New National Party into the Korean Workers' Party. In July 1946 the KWP, with the remaining pro-Communist groups and non-party people, formed the United Democratic Patriotic Front. On 25 Aug. 1948 the Communists organized elections for a Supreme People's Assembly, both in Soviet-occupied North Korea (212 deputies) and in US-occupied South Korea (360 deputies, of whom a certain number went to the North and took their seats). A People's Democratic Republic was proclaimed on 9 Sept. 1948. On 17 May 1973 North Korea was admitted to the World Health Organization by 66 votes to 41 with 22 abstentions, and in June 1973 was granted observer status at the UN.

AREA AND POPULATION. The area of North Korea is 47,225 sq. miles (122,370 sq. km). Population in 1973, 14.7m. Rate of population increase, 2.8% per annum. The capital is Pyongyang, with 1.5m. inhabitants.

The country is divided into 11 administrative units: 2 cities (Pyongyang and Kaesong) and 9 provinces (capitals in brackets): South Pyongan (Nampo), North Pyongan (Sinuiji), Jagang (Kanggye), South Hwanghai (Haeju), North Hwanghai (Sariwon), North Kangwon (Wonsan), South Hamgyong (Hamhung), North Hamgyong (Chongjin), Yanggang (Hyesan). The leading ports are Chongjin (200,000 inhabitants) and Heungnam, near Hamhung (150,000).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The political structure is based upon the Constitution of 27 Dec. 1972, which supersedes that of 1948 as amended in 1954 and 1955. The Constitution provides for a Supreme People's Assembly elected every 4 years by universal suffrage. Elections were held in 1948, 1957, 1962 and on 12 Dec. 1972. At the latter it was claimed that 100% of the electorate voted for the candidates presented. There are 541 deputies.

In practice the country is ruled by the Korean Workers' (i.e., Communist) Party which elects a Central Committee which in turn appoints a Politburo. In March 1974 this was composed of: Marshal Kim Il Sung, General Secretary of the Party, President of the Republic, Supreme Commander of the Armed Forces; Vice-Marshal Choi Yong Kun, Chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme People's Assembly, Vice-President of the Republic; Kim Il, Prime Minister; Pak Sung Chul, First Deputy Prime Minister; Gen. Choe Hyon, Defence Minister; Kim Yong Ju; O Jin Yu; Kim Dong Gyu; So Chol; Kim Jung Rin; Han Ik Su. There are also 4 'alternate members'.

Ministers not in the Politburo include Ho Dam (Foreign Minister); Kye Ung Tae (Foreign Trade); Kim Gyong Ryon (Finance); Kim Su Duk (Education); Choe Jae U (Chairman, State Planning Commission); Kim Byong Ha (Public Security).

In 1972 the Party had some 1.5m. members.

There are also the puppet religious Chongu and North Korean Democratic Parties, and various organizations combined in a Fatherland Front.

National flag: Blue, red and blue horizontal stripes separated by narrow white bands. The red stripe bears a white circle within which is a red 5-pointed star.

National anthem: The Song of General Kim Il Sung.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT is administered by People's Assemblies at city (or province), county (or district) and ri (town, workers' or rural commune) level. The latest elections were on 12 Dec. 1972.

EDUCATION. In 1972-73 the 9-year system of free compulsory technical education was extended to 10 years (5 years primary education starting at the age of 6, followed by 5 years secondary).

In 1970-71, 9,260 schools of all grades were attended by 3.2m. pupils, including 214,000 students in 569 institutes of higher education, two-thirds of whom were studying technical and engineering subjects. There were some 100,000 teachers. Kindergartens and crèches looked after 1.32m. infants.

There are 3 universities—Kim Il Sung University (founded 1946), Kim Chaek Technical University, Pyongyang Medical School—and an Academy of Sciences (founded 1952).

In 1971–72 Kim Il Sung University had some 1,000 teachers, 10,000 students and 5,000 evening or correspondence students.

NEWSPAPERS. The Party newspaper is Nodong (or Rodong) Sinmun (Labour News).

JUSTICE. The judiciary consists of the Supreme Court, whose judges are elected by the Assembly for 3 years; provincial courts; and city or county people's courts. The prosecutor-general, appointed by the Assembly, has supervisory powers over the judiciary and the administration; the Supreme Court controls the judicial administration.

FINANCE. Currency. The monetary unit is the won, divided into 100 jun. Official rate of exchange: US$1 = 0.996 won.

Budget (in 1m. won) for calendar years:

	1967	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973 ¹
Revenue	3,960	5,215	..	6,232	6,357	7,430	8,544

In 1972, 17% of budget expenditure was on defence, and in 1973, 15%. Average monthly income was 70 won in 1970.

DEFENCE. Military service is compulsory at the age of 17 and lasts 3–4 years.

Army. In 1973 the Army was believed to number about 408,000 men, organized in 1 armoured and 24 infantry divisions, with 800 Soviet tanks; it has about 300 Guideline surface-to-air missiles.

Navy. The Navy comprises 4 ex-Soviet submarines, 10 missile boats, 16 fast gunboats, 14 patrol vessels, 31 submarine chasers, 53 torpedo boats, 20 mine-sweeping boats, 30 auxiliaries and 100 armed junks. Personnel in 1973: 17,000 officers and men.

Air Force. With Chinese and Soviet assistance, the Air Force has been increased to a total of approximately 600 combat aircraft and 40,000 personnel. Equipment is believed to include about 125 supersonic MiG-21 interceptors, a few MiG-19s, 350 MiG-17s for ground attack and reconnaissance, at least 40 Su-7 fighter-bombers, 60 Il-28 twin-jet light bombers, and a variety of transport and training aircraft and helicopters.

PLANNING. Past plans: 3-year plan, 1954–56, rehabilitated the country after the Korean War (1950–53); 5-year plan, 1957–61; 7-year plan, extended in 1966 to 1970. The period 1957–70 is referred to as the 'period of industrialization', and an annual industrial growth rate of 19% is claimed.

The present, 6-year, plan runs from 1971 to 1976. It aims at a steady introduction of technical innovations and the expansion of consumer industries by local, small-scale plant. Priority is given to the power, mining, metallurgical and chemical industries. An electronics industry is being developed. Industrial output is expected to grow by 14% per annum. Plan targets for 1976: Electricity, 30,000m. kwh.; (in metric tons) coal, 50m.; pig-iron, 3.5m.; steel, 3.8m.; rolled steel, 3m.; chemical fertilizers, 2.8m., and total grain, 7m. (3.5m. rice).

AGRICULTURE. 20% of the land is cultivable; the rest is mountains and forests. Intensive water and soil conservancy is practised. In 1946 all Japanese-owned and landowners' property above 5 jungbo was distributed among some 724,500 landless peasants and smallholders.

Full-scale collectivization was begun in 1954 and completed in 1958, when there were 13,309 'co-operatives' averaging 130 jungbo. In 1958 these were merged into 3,843 larger units (ri), averaging 500 jungbo, modelled on the Chinese communes. 90% of the cultivated land is farmed by co-operatives; some 5% is in private plots. Livestock farming is mainly carried on by large state farms.

Some 3m. jungbo are under cultivation, of which 1m. jungbo have regular irrigation. There are 8,000 km of irrigation canals. The 6-year plan (1971-76) aims to extend irrigation so as to make possible 2 rice harvests a year. In 1972 the number of tractors (15 h.p.) per 100 jungbo was 1.8. The technical revolution in agriculture (nearly 95% of ploughing, etc., is mechanized) considerably increased the yield of grain (sown on 2.3m. jungbo of land); this amounted to some 6m. tons in 1971 (mainly rice).

Livestock (FAO estimates for 1970): 730,000 cattle; 1.3m. pigs. 700m. eggs are produced a year.

FORESTRY. Between 1961 and 1970 800,000 hectares were afforested 500,000 hectares of oil-bearing trees are scheduled for planting.

FISHERY. The annual catch is about 1.2m. metric tons. There are about 3,000 modern motor and sailing fishing craft. In 1967 a development plan was started to equip the deep-sea fleet with factory and refrigerator ships, and to provide more cold storage at fishing ports.

MINING. North Korea is rich in minerals (coal, iron, lead, zinc, copper, tungsten, nickel, manganese and graphite) and has important metallurgical works. Oilwells went into production in 1957. Coalmines are being enlarged and modernized. There are large open-cast workings at Yonghung. 27.5m. metric tons of coal were mined in 1970. 7.4m. metric tons of iron ore and 12,000 metric tons of copper ore were extracted in 1969.

INDUSTRY. Industries were intensively developed by the Japanese, notably cotton spinning, hydro-electric power, cotton, silk and rayon weaving, and chemical fertilizers. Production (in metric tons) in 1970: Chemical fertilizers, 1.5m.; cement, 4m.; steel, 2.2m.; rolled steel, 1.6m.; pig-iron, 2.2m.; textiles, 400m. sq. metres. Industrial workers make up some 40% of the total work force.

POWER. There are thermal power stations at Pyongyang, Kanggye and Unbong, and others are under construction at Chongjin, Kaechon, Namhung, Pukchang, Sodusu and Unggi. Output in 1970 was 16,600m. kwh. Hydro-electric potential exceeds 8m. kw. In 1972 thermal power generation accounted for 38% of total output.

COMMERCE. Foreign trade is almost exclusively with Communist countries. A 5-year trade agreement was signed with the USSR in 1971, and with Japan in 1972. A trade agreement with China was signed in 1970. Total trade with non-communist countries, mainly with Japan, amounted to US$200m. in 1972. The chief exports are metal ores and products

Exports to the USSR in 1971 (and 1972) were worth 122.2m. (128.4m.) roubles; imports from the USSR, 330.1m. (251.6m.) roubles.

Total trade between North Korea and UK (British Board of Trade returns, in £1,000 sterling):

	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Exports and re-exports from UK	154	302	157	333	409	826

RAILWAYS. Extensive railway construction was carried out under the Japanese occupation. Because these lines served strategic purposes, however, and because of the separation of North and South Korea, not all of them were suitable for inclusion in the present railway network. The two trunk-lines Pyongyang-Sinuiji and Pyongyang-Myongchon are both electrified. The

'Wonra' line runs from Wonsan to Rajin and is electrified from Myongchom to Rajin. The Sepo-Inchon line was opened in 1972 and the Sinchon-Unryul line in 1973. A line is under construction from Kanggye via Hyesan to Musan. The Hyesan-Samsok section opened to traffic in 1971. In 1971 there were some 15,000 km of track, about 35% electrified. In 1969, 55% of trains were hauled by electricity and 30.6m. metric tons were transported.

ROADS. Motor transport is very important, as about one-third of the inhabited places are without railway communications. Roads are bad and mostly unpaved; statistics about their length, etc., are lacking. In 1961 lorries and coaches transported 17.7m. tons of freight.

SHIPPING. There are excellent and important seaports, predominantly on the east coast (Japan Sea). However, west coast ports (Yellow Sea) also play their role, and Nampo, the port of Pyongyang, has been dredged and expanded. Pyongyang is connected to Nampo by railway and river.

The biggest navigable river is the Yalu, 698 km up to the Hyesan district.

AVIATION. There are weekly flights to Moscow and Peking. Domestic lines: Pyongyang-Hamheung-Chongjin.

RADIO. In 1961 there were 600,000 radio receivers. The Pyongyang Central Broadcasting Station was rebuilt about 1955.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. While the metric system is in force traditional measures are in frequent use. The jungbo = 1 hectare; the ri = 3,927 metres.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS are maintained with all Communist countries and with Algeria, Argentina, Bangladesh, Brazil, Burundi, Cameroun, Central African Republic, Congo, Costa Rica, Dahomey, Denmark, Egypt, Finland, Gabon, Gambia, Guinea, Iceland, India, Iran, Iraq, Liberia, Libya, Malagasy Republic, Malaysia, Mali, Malta, Mauritania, Mauritius, Norway, Pakistan, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, Somalia, Sweden, Syria, Tanzania, Togo, Uganda, Upper Volta, Zaïre and Zambia.

KUWAIT

Dowlat al Kuwait

HISTORY. The independent and sovereign State of Kuwait is situated on the north-western coast of the Arabian Gulf. The ruling dynasty was founded by Shaikh Sabah al-Owel, who ruled from 1756 to 1772. In 1899 the then ruler Shaikh Mubarak concluded a treaty with Great Britain wherein, in return for the assurance of British protection, he undertook not to alienate any of his territory without the agreement of Her Majesty's Government. In 1914 the British Government recognized Kuwait as an independent government under British protection. On 19 June 1961 an agreement reaffirmed the independence and sovereignty of Kuwait and recognized the government of Kuwait's responsibility for the conduct of internal and external affairs; the agreement of 1899 was terminated and Her Majesty's Government expressed their readiness to assist the government of Kuwait should they request such assistance.

The Neutral Zone (3,560 sq. miles, 5,700 sq. km), jointly owned and administered by Kuwait and Saudi Arabia from 1922 to 1966, was partitioned between the two countries in May 1966, but the exploitation of the oil and other natural resources will continue to be shared.

Budget. The financial year runs 1 April-31 March. In 1970-71 revenue, KD 319.4m.; expenditure, 319.4m.; in 1971-72 revenue and expenditure balanced at KD 359.6m. In 1971-72 oil accounted for approximately KD 332.9m. of the revenue derived from the Kuwait Oil Company.

The Kuwait Fund for Arab Economic Development, founded in 1961 with a capital of KD 50m., was increased to KD 200m. on 25 June 1966. By the middle of 1967, Algeria, Egypt, Jordan, Lebanon, Morocco, Sudan and Tunisia had been granted loans, totalling over KD 170m. In Aug. 1967 Kuwait contributed nearly half of the KD 140m. aid extended by Kuwait, Libya and Saudi Arabia to Jordan, Syria and Egypt.

DEFENCE. Kuwait maintains a small (8,000 men), well-equipped and mobile army of 3 brigades.

The first operational air-force unit consisted of 4 Hunter ground-attack fighters and 2 Hunter 2-seat fighter-trainers. It has been followed by a squadron of 12 British-built Lightning F.53 supersonic fighters and 2 Lightning T.55 2-seat trainers. Other equipment includes C-130 Hercules turboprop transports, 2 Caribou twin-engined STOL transports, 12 BAC 167 Strikemaster armed jet trainers, 6 armed Jet Provost trainers, 6 Agusta-Bell 204B and 4 Agusta-Bell JetRanger helicopters.

INDUSTRY. Oil. Kuwait oil comes mainly from the Burgan oilfields, the residential and administrative centre for oil operations being at Ahmadi. Oil reserves in Kuwait and its share of the neutral zone were estimated at 10,400m. tons in Dec. 1968. Kuwait is the seventh largest oil producer in the world, the fifth in the quantity of exported oil and the third largest crude oil producer in the Middle East. Its production amounted to 1,011.8m. bbls in 1969 for an average of 2,772,000 bbls per day, with an increase of 5.81 % over 1968. Of this total (1969) Kuwait Oil Co. Ltd produced the largest share, which was 940,040,972 bbls for an average of 2,575,455 bbls per day. American Independent Oil Co. (Amin-oil), operating onshore of the divided Kuwait-Saudi Arabia Zone, produced 12,894,673 bbls or an average of 35,328 bbls per day. The third producing company, the Arabian Oil Co. (Japan) Ltd, operating in the Continental Shelf of the divided Kuwait-Saudi Arabia Zone increased its production to 117,688,722 bbls, half of which (58,844,361 bbls) or an average of 161,217 bbls per day is Kuwait share.

Six oil companies are engaged in exploration and production activities in Kuwait and the divided Kuwait-Saudi Arabia Zone: (i) Kuwait Oil Co. Ltd; (ii) American Independent Oil Co.; (iii) Arabian Oil Co. (Japan) Ltd; (iv) Kuwait Shell Petroleum Development Co. Ltd; (v) Kuwait National Petroleum Co.; (vi) Kuwait Spanish Petroleum Co.

At present the first 3 companies are engaged in producing and marketing oil and products, while Kuwait Shell Petroleum Co. which was awarded the concession for offshore Kuwait, suspended its exploration activities in 1963 pending settlement of overlapping territorial rights in the Continental Shelf among Kuwait, Iran and Saudi Arabia. Kuwait National Petroleum Co. has the exclusive right of marketing petroleum products locally in Kuwait and completed its refinery in Shuaiba in 1968. Kuwait Spanish Petroleum Co., which was granted a concession of 3,500 sq. miles in 1968, started its exploration in 1969.

COMMERCE. The port of Kuwait formerly served mainly as an entrepôt for goods for the interior, for the export of skins and wool, and for pearl fishing. Entrepôt trade continues but, with the development of the oil industry, is declining in importance. Pearl fishing is now on a small scale. Dhows and launches of traditional construction are still built.

LAOS

HISTORY. The Kingdom of Laos, once called Lanxang (the Land of a Million Elephants), was founded in the 14th century. The kingdom has always depended on the maintenance of good relations with its more powerful neighbours, Thailand, Burma and Vietnam, and in 1827 accepted Thai suzerainty.

In 1893 Laos became a French protectorate and in 1907 acquired its present frontiers. In 1945 French authority was suppressed by the Japanese. When the Japanese withdrew in 1945 an independence movement known as Lao Issara (Free Laos) set up a government under Prince Phetsarath, the Viceroy of Luang Prabang. This government collapsed with the return of the French in 1946 and the leaders of the movement fled to Thailand.

Under a new Constitution of 1947 Laos became a constitutional monarchy under the Luang Prabang dynasty, and in 1949 became an independent sovereign state within the French Union. Most of the Lao Issara leaders returned to Laos but a few remained in dissidence under Prince Souphannouvong, who allied himself with the Vietminh and subsequently formed the 'Pathet Lao' (Lao State) rebel movement.

The almost continuous state of war since 1953 between the Royal Lao Government and the Pathet Lao, with North Vietnamese support, is linked to the hostilities in Vietnam. For a short time the Pathet Lao joined governments formed in 1957, following the 1954 Geneva Conference, and again immediately before the 1962 Geneva Agreements on Laos were signed, but broke away soon afterwards. Peace talks between the Pathet Lao and Prince Souvanna Phouma's Government resumed in 1972. These resulted in the signature of an Agreement on Restoring Peace and National Concord on 21 Feb. 1973. The Agreement provided for (a) a cease-fire and a timetable for the formation of a provisional Government of National Union and a National Political Council in which the Lao Patriotic Forces and the Vientiane Government were to have equal numbers of representatives; (b) the withdrawal of foreign troops and exchanges of prisoners of war; and (c) the neutralization of Vientiane and Luang Prabang in which joint police and military security forces were to be stationed. The Agreement also confirmed the de facto division of Laos into 2 zones. On 14 Sept. 1973 a Protocol dealing with implementation of the Feb. Laos Agreement was signed in Vientiane. For the history of Pathet Lao and the military intervention of the Vietminh, see THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1971-72, pp. 1126-28.

National flag: Red background in the centre of which is a 3-headed white elephant, standing on a pedestal with 5 steps, surmounted by a 7-tiered white parasol.

National anthem: Peng Sat Lao (Hymn of the Lao People).

GOVERNMENT. Laos is a constitutional monarchy, in which the people are sovereign. The King's powers are defined in the Constitution of 11 May 1947. The Crown Prince or male descendants of the ruling dynasty inherit the throne. The King appoints the Prime Minister, who is responsible for forming a government which should be approved by the Legislative Assembly. Elections for the assembly are held every 5 years by universal suffrage.

KING. HM Savang Vatthana, succeeded to the throne on 29 Oct. 1959 on the death of his father, King Sisavang Vong.

Prime Minister: HH Prince Souvanna Phouma.

PROVINCIAL ADMINISTRATION. Laos is divided into 16 provinces. Province Chiefs (Chao Khoueng) are appointed by the Minister of the Interior.

AREA AND POPULATION. Laos is a land-locked country of about 91,000 sq. miles (235,700 sq. km) bordered on the north by China, the east by North and South Vietnam, the south by Cambodia and the west by Thailand and Burma. Apart from the Mekong River plains along the border of Thailand, the country is mountainous, particularly in the north, and in places densely forested. The climate is of a tropical monsoon type with a wet season from May to Oct. and a dry one from Nov. to April. Most of northern Laos receives about 40-80 in. of rainfall annually, while parts of the Bolovens Plateau in southern Laos have over 150 in.

There has been no complete census in Laos, but estimates place the population at about 2.9m. The most heavily populated areas are the Mekong River plains by the Thailand border. Otherwise, the population is sparse and scattered, particularly in the northern provinces, and the eastern part of the country has been depopulated by war. The majority of the population is officially divided into 4 groups: about 40% Lao-Lum (Valley-Lao), 16% Lao-Tai (tribal Tai); 34% Lao-Theung (Lao of the mountain sides); and 9% Lao-Soung (Lao of the mountain tops), who comprise the Meo and Yao. Other minorities include Vietnamese, Chinese, Europeans, Indians and Pakistanis.

The Lao-Lum and Lao-Tai belong to the Lao branch of the Tai peoples, who migrated into South-East Asia at the time of the Mongol invasion of South China. The valley Lao are Buddhists, following the Hinayana (Theravada) form. The Lao-Tai, who live mainly in northern Laos, are mostly patrilineal, believing in ancestral deities. The majority of the Lao-Theung—a diverse group consisting of many tribes—are animists.

The Meo and Yao live in northern Laos. Far greater numbers live in both North Vietnam and China, having migrated over the last century. Their religions have strong Confucian and animistic features but some are Christians.

Compared with other parts of Asia, Laos has few towns. The administrative capital and largest town is Vientiane, with a population of about 150,000. Other important towns are Luang Prabang, the royal capital (about 22,000), Pakse (about 35,000) in the extreme south, and Savannakhet (about 36,000).

LANGUAGE. Lao is the official language of the country, but French is also widely used in the various administrative departments and English is becoming more widely spoken, particularly by the young. Pali or Nang Xu Tham, a Sanskrit language of Hindu origins, is generally used by the priests.

EDUCATION. At the end of the 1971-72 school year there were 3,239 elementary schools and 108 private schools (estimated 275,000 pupils); 22 colleges, 4 lycées and 3 technical schools provided secondary education for an estimated 9,000 pupils.

There are 9 teachers' training colleges, 1 college of education, 1 school of medicine, 1 institute of law and administration and an advanced school of Pali.

JUSTICE. The King is the final arbiter of justice. There are magistrates' courts, courts of first instance, 3 courts of appeal and a court of annulment.

FINANCE. Currency. The Laotian National Bank is responsible for the issue of currency. The unit of currency, which is tied to the US dollar, is the kip (K.). The official exchange rate is K.600 = US$1; K.1,500 = £1 (approximately). A 40% tax is imposed on most non-commercial and commercial transactions.

Budget. The budget for the Laotian fiscal year 1973-74 (ended 30 June) was estimated as follows: Revenue K.12,500m.; expenditure K.27,500m., of which the military budget appropriates K.13,000m. The deficit is made up by foreign aid in the form of donations to a Foreign Exchange Operations Fund (Stabilization Fund). The fund is administered by agreement between the Laotian Government and the donor countries who are the USA, UK, Australia, France and Japan, and maintains the free market value of the kip.

DEFENCE. Army. The Vientiane Government army uses US Army equipment. The Pathet Lao and dissident neutralist army uses Communist equipment including a few PT76 light tanks. In 1973 the Government forces numbered about 80,000 including irregulars. Pathet Lao strength is estimated at 30,000 men and North Vietnamese strength in Laos about 50,000.

Navy. In 1973 there were 4 river squadrons comprising 52 craft of 8 different types, of which 47 were in commission and 5 in reserve.

Air Force. The Royal Lao Air Force is equipped with about 170 aircraft, including 79 T-28D piston-engined light strike aircraft, some AC-47 ground-attack aircraft, 10 C-123 and 15 C-47 transports, about 30 UH-34 and Alouette III helicopters, observation and light communications aircraft. Personnel strength, about 1,500. The Pathet Lao have no integral air arm.

PLANNING. There is a development plan for the period 1969-74 comprising about 12 large projects costing some £40m. and some 80 lesser projects costing just under £10m. About half the funds for the large projects have been promised in external aid. The large projects include the Nam Ngum Dam, a bridge across the Mekong and development of the infrastructure. The other projects, particularly the project for the integrated agricultural development of the Vientiane Plain, emphasize development of the productive sector, particularly agriculture.

AGRICULTURE. The chief products are rice (average annual production about 520,000 tons), maize (average production 24,000 tons), tobacco (4,000 tons), cotton (3,000 tons), citrus fruits, sticklac, benjohn tea and in the Boloven plateau coffee (3,000 tons), potatoes, cardamom and cinchona. Opium is produced but is the subject of new legislation designed to control its manufacture and trafficking. Cattle, buffalo and pigs are numerous.

FORESTRY. The forests in the north produce valuable woods, teak in particular; the logs are floated southwards on the Mekong. Elephants are trained in forest work.

MINING. Various minerals are found, but only tin is mined at present, and only at 2 mines (1972 production, just under 1,900 metric tons of 50% concentrate). There are extremely rich deposits of high-quality iron ore in Xieng Khouang province.

INDUSTRY. Industry is limited to rubber sandals, cigarettes, matches, soft drinks, plastic bags, saw-mills, rice-mills, weaving, pottery, distilleries, ice, bricks, etc.

POWER. Only a few towns in Laos have an electricity service. A power plant with a capacity of 8,000 kw. is installed at Vientiane, but there are only small thermo-electric plants in other towns. The Nam Ngum Dam situated about 45 miles north of Vientiane was inaugurated in Dec. 1971 with an initial installed capacity of 30,000 kw. and a planned ultimate capacity of 135,000 kw. Transmission lines to Vientiane and to Thailand have been constructed. Other sources of electric power are the dams on the Sedone River about 20 miles north of Pakse and on the Nam Dong about 5 miles south of Luang Prabang with installed capacities of 2,400 and 1,200 kw. respectively.

COMMERCE. For the first 9 months of 1972 imports amounted to K.19,352m. and exports for the full 12 months to K.1,540m. The main imports were agricultural products, petroleum products and agricultural and other machinery. The chief supplying countries were Thailand, Japan, USA and Indonesia. The main exports were tin, timber and raw cotton. In addition the (mainly entrepôt) trade in gold yielded import taxes amounting to K.186m. in 1972-73.

Total trade with UK (British Board of Trade returns, in £1,000 sterling):

	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	—	2	3	4	2	16
Exports and re-exports from UK	611	589	313	159	283	557

SHIPPING. The river Mekong and its tributaries are an important means of transport, but rapids, waterfalls and narrow channels often impede navigation and make transshipments necessary.

ROADS. In 1972 there were 3,300 km of all-weather, asphalted or permanent roads and 4,000 km of non-all-weather roads.

RAILWAYS. There is no railway in Laos, but the Thai railway system extends to Nongkhai, on the Thai bank of the Mekong, which is connected by ferry with Thadeua about 12 miles east of Vientiane.

AVIATION. Royal Air Lao and Lao Airlines provide scheduled domestic air services linking major towns in Laos. Royal Air Lao and Air Vietnam maintain services between Vientiane and Saigon; Royal Air Lao and Thai Airways between Vientiane and Bangkok; Royal Air Lao Airlines between Vientiane, Hong Kong, Chiang Mai and Phnom Penh. Aeroflot has a twice-weekly service to Hanoi which calls at Vientiane, and Air France have begun a Paris to Vientiane service.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS. The British Government has provided a radio network for Laos (with contributions of equipment from the USA, Australia and West Germany) and a team of technical experts to advise on and assist in the running of the system. The main station in Vientiane became operational on 6 Aug. 1968.

In 1969 there were 1,081 telephones in Laos. A telephone link with Bangkok was opened in 1967, and telephonic communication was established with most parts of the world in 1968.

LEBANON

al-Jumhuriya al-Lubnaniya

HISTORY. After 20 years' French mandatory régime, the Lebanon was proclaimed independent at Beirut on 26 Nov. 1941. On 27 Dec. 1943 an agreement was signed between representatives of the French National Committee of Liberation and of Lebanon, by which most of the powers and capacities exercised hitherto by France were transferred as from 1 Jan. 1944 to the Lebanese Government. The evacuation of foreign troops was completed in Dec. 1946.

In early May 1958 the opposition to President Chamoun, consisting principally (though not entirely) of Moslem pro-Nasserist elements, rose in insurrection; and for 5 months the Moslem quarters of Beirut, Tripoli, Sidon and the northern Bekaa were in insurgent hands. On 15 July the USA Government acceded to President Chamoun's request and landed a considerable force of army and marines who re-established the authority of the government.

In the subsequent presidential elections, Gen. Fouad Chehab replaced President Chamoun and a return to normality enabled US forces to be withdrawn.

In 1970 Suleiman Frangié succeeded President Helou. His term of office ends in 1976.

Israeli attacks on Lebanon and some internal problems have resulted from the presence and activities of armed Palestinian resistance units on Lebanese territory. But a secret Cairo agreement in 1969 and new agreements in 1972 and 1973 have regulated these activities.

AREA AND POPULATION. The Lebanon is a mountainous country about 135 miles long and varying between 20 and 35 miles wide, bounded on the north and east by Syria, on the west by the Mediterranean and on the south by Israel. Between the two parallel mountain ranges of Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon lies the fertile Bekaa Valley. About one-half of the country lies at an altitude of over 3,000 ft.

The area of Lebanon is estimated at 10,400 sq. km (3,400 sq. miles) and the population at 2,854,636 (1971). The principal towns, with estimated population, are: Beirut (the capital), 702,000; Tripoli, 175,000; Zahlé, 46,800; Saïda (Sidon), 24,740; Tyre, 14,000.

Vital statistics, 1971: Births, 76,099; deaths, 12,799; marriages, 16,516; divorces, 1,382.

The official language is Arabic. French and, increasingly, English are widely spoken in official and commercial circles.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. Lebanon is an independent republic and a member of the United Nations and the Arab League. The first constitution was established under the French Mandate on 23 May 1926. It has since been amended in 1927, 1929, 1943 (twice) and 1947. It is a written constitution based on the classical separation of powers, with a President, a single chamber elected by universal adult suffrage, and an independent judiciary. The Executive consists of the President and a Prime Minister and Cabinet appointed by him. The system is, however, adapted to the peculiar communal balance on which Lebanese political life depends. This is done by the electoral law which allocates deputies according to the confessional distribution of the population, and by a series of constitutional conventions whereby, e.g., the President is always a Maronite Christian, the Prime Minister a Sunni Moslem and the Speaker of the Chamber a Shia Moslem. There is no highly developed party system.

President of the Republic: Suleiman Frangié (elected on 17 Aug. 1970 by 50 to 49 votes).

The government, formed 8 July 1973, was composed as follows:

Prime Minister and Finance: Takiéddin Solh.

Deputy Prime Minister and Public Works: Fouad Ghosn. Health: Osman

Dana. Planning: Hassan Rifai. Economy: Nazih Bizri. Foreign Affairs: Fouad Naffah. Education: Edmond Rizk. PTT: Antoine Frangié. Labour and Social Affairs: Emile Rouhana Sakr. Agriculture: Sabri Hamade. Justice: Kazem Khalil. Information: Fahmi Chahine. Interior: Bahij Takieddin. Industry and Oil: Toufic Assaf. Defence: Nasri Maalouf. Hydro-electric resources: Joseph Skaff. Housing and Co-operatives: Michel Sassine. Tourism: Souren Khanamirian. Ministers of State: Majid Arslan, Ali Khalil, Albert Moukhaibar and Joseph Chader.

National flag: Red, white, red (horizontal), with a green cedar on the white stripe.

National anthem: Kullu na lil watan lil 'ula lil' alam (words by Rashid Nachleh, tune by Mitri El-Murr).

RELIGION. About half the population are Christians, who have been indigenous since the earliest time of Christianity. There were in 1958, 792,000 Christians, of whom 424,000 were Maronites, 150,000 Greek Orthodox, 69,000 Armenians, 91,000 Greek and Roman Catholics, 14,500 Armenian Catholics, 14,000 Protestants. Moslems numbered 536,000, of whom 286,000 were Sunnis and 250,000 Shiites. There were also 88,000 Druzes and 6,600 Jews.

EDUCATION. Government schools in 1970 comprised 1,290 primary and secondary schools. There were also 1,484 private primary and secondary schools. There are also 5 teachers' training colleges and 4 universities, namely the Lebanese (State) University, the American University of Beirut, the French University of St Joseph (founded in 1875) and the Arab University, a branch of Alexandria University. The French Government runs the École Supérieure de Lettres and the Centre d'Études Mathématiques.

The Lebanese Academy of Fine Arts includes schools of architecture, art, music, political and social science.

CINEMAS (1964). There were over 100 cinemas with a seating capacity of about 50,000.

NEWSPAPERS (1972). There were about 30 daily newspapers in Arabic, 3 in French, 1 in English and 4 in Armenian, with a total circulation of 215,000.

HEALTH. In 1965 there were 1,430 physicians and (1964) 7,649 hospital beds.

FINANCE. Currency. The Lebanese pound, divided into 100 piastres, is issued by the Banque du Liban, which commenced operations on 1 April 1964. There is a fluctuating official rate of exchange, fixed monthly (Dec. 1973: £Leb. 6.12 = £1 sterling), but this in practice is used only for the calculation of ad-valorem customs duties on Lebanese imports and for import statistics. For other purposes the free market is used; the rate of the £ sterling on 31 Dec. 1973 was £Leb.5.74 = £1; the US$ rate was £Leb.2.49 = $1.

On 31 Dec. 1972 the note circulation was £Leb.1,104m., the gold cover being 85%.

Budget. The general budget for 1973 provides for a total expenditure of £Leb.1,080.8m. (980.4m. in 1972).

DEFENCE. Army. The Army strength is about 14,000, the gendarmerie about 5,000, the police force about 600 and the security force about 350 men. Army and gendarmerie use mainly British, American and French equipment.

Navy. The Navy consisted in 1973 of 8 patrol vessels and 1 landing craft. Personnel about 250 men.

Air Force. The Air Force has about 1,000 men and 40 aircraft. In addition to a single combat squadron of Hunter jet fighter-bombers, it has 10 Mirage III supersonic fighters. Other aircraft include 1 Dove light transport, 8 Alouette II and III helicopters, and Tonga Magister trainers.

PLANNING. A 6-year public sector development plan for the period 1972-77 is in progress. Total investment envisages £Leb.1,704m. The plan aims at a growth rate of GNP of 7% per annum.

AGRICULTURE. Lebanon is essentially an agricultural country, although owing to its physical character only about 38% of the total area of the country is at present cultivated. The forests of the past have been denuded by exploitation and the unrestricted grazing of goats, and only about 80,000 hectares of in-different timber remain, and soil erosion is considerable.

The estimated yield (in 1,000 metric tons) of the main crops in 1970 was as follows: Citrusfruits, 275; apples, 95; grapes, 110; potatoes, 105; sugar-beet, 117; olives, 18; bananas, 26.

Livestock (estimated, 1969): Goats, 348,088; sheep, 219,904; cattle, 85,715 (including 45,809 dairy cows); camels, 400; hogs, 13,160; horses, 2,950; donkeys, 27,970; mules, 3,445; egg-laying hens, 2.7m.; broilers, 14.75m.

MINING. Iron ore exists but is difficult to work. Other minerals known to exist are iron pyrites, copper, bituminous shales, asphalt, phosphates, ceramic clays and glass sand; but the available information is of doubtful value.

INDUSTRY. Manufacturing industry is still small but has doubled in the last 10 years. At the end of 1968 the total capital invested was estimated at £Leb.1,068m. and the total number of employees, 68,460. The most important sectors invested in 1965 (in £Leb.1m.) were: Food and drink, 150; textiles, 80; tobacco, 76; foundries, 48; cement, bricks, etc., 48; petroleum, 45; chemicals, 30.

There are 2 oil refineries in Lebanon, one at Tripoli, which refines oil brought by pipeline from Iraq, and the other at Sidon, which refines oil brought from Saudi Arabia by a pipeline owned by the Trans-Arabian Pipeline Company. These refineries received over 2m. metric tons of crude oil in 1972 and their production is sufficient to meet the country's requirements of refined fuel.

COMMERCE. Foreign as well as local wholesale and retail trade is the principal source of income in Lebanon and provides about 31% of the total. Because of the protectionist policies followed in some neighbouring countries, this sector has been declining, the sectors to gain being those of banking, real estate, government and services (especially tourism, £Leb.610m., 1972).

In 1971 imports were valued at £Leb.2,358.7m.; exports were valued at £Leb.815.4m. Imports came mainly from USA, West Germany, France, Italy and UK. Exports went mainly to Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Syria, Jordan, Iraq and Libya.

Total trade with UK (British Board of Trade returns, in £1,000 sterling):

	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	3,995	3,124	3,885	6,501	8,012
Exports and re-exports from UK	21,382	23,013	26,265	35,566	41,959

Customs duties are usually imposed on an ad valorem basis: the receipts are the Lebanese Government's main source of income; actual yield in 1972, £Leb.305m. The considerable adverse balance of trade is offset by invisible receipts, including foreign capital investment in Lebanese real estate, remittances from émigrés and receipts from tourism and international arbitrage operations.

Receipts from tourism was £Leb.610m. in 1972.

SHIPPING. Beirut is by far the largest and busiest port. In 1972, 3,187 vessels (total tonnage 5,691,361) were handled. Activity in the port of Tripoli is growing due to increased movements in goods and petroleum. The small port of Sidon in the south, near to the closed Lebanese-Israeli frontier, is at present of little importance.

RAILWAYS. There are 3 railway lines in Lebanon, all operated by the Office des Chemins de Fer de l'Etat Libanais (CFL): (1) Nakoura-Beirut-Tripoli (standard gauge); the Nakoura-Sidon section has been idle since the establishment of Israel; (2) a narrow-gauge line running from Beirut to Riyak in the Bekaa Valley and thence to Damascus, Syria; (3) a standard-gauge line from Tripoli to Homs and Aleppo in Syria, providing access to Ankara and Istanbul. From Homs a branch of the CFL line extends south and re-enters Lebanon, terminating at Riyak.

The railway system is operated at a considerable annual loss, attributable largely to unrestricted competition from road transport. 55,000 passengers and 417,000 tons of goods were carried in 1972.

ROADS. The main roads in Lebanon are good. The surface is normally of asphalt and they are normally well maintained. In Dec. 1971 there were 570 km of international roads, 1,420 km of main roads and 4,310 km of secondary and local roads, all asphalted. The main arterial routes are the north-south coastal road and the west-east trunk road (Beirut to Damascus).

Passenger transport outside the town of Beirut is provided by a great number of small private companies running cheap and regular bus services and long-distance taxi services. Most goods traffic is hauled by road.

At 31 Dec. 1972 there were 164,790 cars and taxis, 2,067 buses and 17,130 commercial vehicles.

AVIATION. Beirut International Airport is used by many international airlines which connect Lebanon with most countries in the world. Extensive local services cover the Middle East, Persian Gulf and Europe. There are 2 national airlines, Middle East Airlines/Air Liban and Trans-Mediterranean Airways. In 1972, 38,735 flights passed through Beirut international airport, carrying a total of 2,090,634 passengers (1971: 1,832,514) and 87,991 tons of freight (1971: 69,742).

POST. There is an automatic telephone system in Beirut, Tripoli, Sidon, Zahlé and several other towns and villages, which is being extended to all parts of the country. There are no telegraph, postal or telephone communications with Israel. Number of telephones (1971), 192,000.

The state radio transmits in Arabic, French and English. There are 2 commercial television stations, transmitting in Arabic, French and English.

BANKING. Beirut is an important international financial centre, and there were 74 banks registered with the central bank at 31 Dec. 1971, including 2 British banks, the British Bank of the Middle East and the Chartered Bank.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. The use of the metric system is legal and obligatory throughout the whole of the country. In outlying districts the former weights and measures may still be in use. They are: 1 okiya = 0.47 lb.; 6 okiyas = 1 oke = 2.82 lb.; 2 okes = 1 rottol = 5.64 lb.; 200 okes = 1 kantar.

LIBERIA

HISTORY. The Republic of Liberia had its origin in the efforts of several American philanthropic societies to establish freed American slaves in a colony on the West African coast. In 1822 a settlement was formed near the spot where Monrovia now stands. On 26 July 1847 the state was constituted as the Free and Independent Republic of Liberia. The new state was first recognized by Great Britain and France, and ultimately by other powers.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The constitution of the Republic is modelled on that of the US. The executive power is vested in a President and the legislative power in a legislature of 2 Houses, the Senate (18 members) and the House of Representatives (65 members). The President is elected for 8 years in the first instance, the House of Representatives for 4 and the Senate for 6 years.

The President may be re-elected for any number of subsequent 4-year terms. He must be a citizen of over 25 years' residence and have unencumbered real estate to the value of US$2,500. Electors must be citizens and owners of land. By the end of 1945, legislation was passed granting manhood suffrage to the tribes in the hinterland who are now represented in the legislature. In 1947 the franchise was extended to women.

The official language is English.

National flag: Six red and 5 white horizontal stripes alternating. In the upper corner, nearest the staff, is a square of blue covering a depth of 5 stripes. In the centre of this blue field is a 5-pointed white star.

National anthem: All hail, Liberia, hail! (words by President Warner; tune by O. Luca, 1860).

On 22 Dec. 1950 an agreement of assistance and co-operation was signed in Washington whereby a development programme is implemented under control of a joint American-Liberian Commission. In 1963 the US Agency for International Development announced loans for the construction of a hydro-electric project (US$24.3m.), schools (US$1.7m.) and hospitals (US$4.7m.); West Germany made a loan for road construction (US$8.2m.).

AREA AND POPULATION. Liberia has about 350 miles of coastline, extending from Sierra Leone, on the west, to the Ivory Coast, on the east, and it stretches inland to a distance, in some places, of about 250 miles. The boundaries were determined by the Anglo-Liberian agreement of 1885 and the Franco-Liberian agreements of 1892 and 1907-10. In 1911 the territory of Kailahun was transferred to Sierra Leone in exchange for a strip on the south side of Mano River, which now is the boundary.

The total area is about 43,700 sq. miles (112,820 sq. km). A census taken in 1962 gave the total population as 1,016,000 (estimated population in 1972, 1.5m.). The indigenous natives belong in the main to 4 principal stocks: Mende-tan, West Atlantic, Mande-fu, and Kru. These are in turn subdivided into 16 major tribes, namely: Bassa, Belle, Gbandi, Mende, Gio, Dey, Mano, Gola, Kpelle, Kissi, Krahn, Kru, Loma, Mandingo, Vai and Grebo.

Monrovia, the capital, has an estimated population of 100,000 and is administered as a commonwealth district by a mayor appointed by the President. It is one of the 4 ports of entry along the 350 miles of coast, the others being Buchanan (Grand Bassa), River Cess, Greenville (Sinoe), Harper (Maryland). Other towns are Kolahun, Voinjama, Tubmanburg, Bentol, Zorzor, Kakata, Suakoko, Gbarnga, Ganta, Sanniquellie, Saclape and Tappita.

The country is divided into 9 counties and 5 territories.

RELIGION. The main denominations represented in Liberia are Methodist, Baptist, Episcopalian, African Methodist, Pentecostal, Seventh Day Adventist, Lutheran and Roman Catholic, working through missionaries and mission schools. There is also a fairly large Muslim community.

EDUCATION. Schools are classified as: (1) Public schools, maintained and run by the Government; (2) Mission schools, supported by foreign Missions and subsidized by the Government, and operated by qualified Missionaries and Liberian teachers; (3) Private schools, maintained by endowments and sometimes subsidized by the Government; (4) Tribal schools, maintained by tribal authorities.

By the end of 1972 there were estimated to be 1,155 schools with 4,756 teachers and 342,146 pupils. In 1972, 335 US Peace Corps Volunteers were teaching in schools throughout the country.

JUSTICE. Justice is administered by a Supreme Court of 5 judges, circuit courts and lower courts. A new Liberian code of laws has been published (5 vols. to 1956).

FINANCE. Currency. The legal currency of Liberia is the dollar which is equivalent to US$1 which itself has been in circulation since 3 Nov. 1942, but there is a Liberian coinage in silver and copper. Official accounts are kept in dollars and cents. The Liberian coins are as follows: Silver, US$1, 50-, 25-, 10- and 5-cent pieces; alloy, 2- and 1-cent pieces. The Government has not yet issued paper money.

British currency ceased to be legal tender after the end of 1943, and on 1 Jan. 1944 the Liberian dollar was raised to parity with the US$.

Budget. The budgets for calendar years were as follows (in US$1,000):

	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972
Revenue	51,400	58,000	66,500	69,900	80,900
Expenditure	55,900	60,100	55,100	71,800	78,000

DEFENCE. For defence every citizen from 16 to 45 years of age capable of bearing arms is liable to serve. The establishment organized on a militia basis numbers 5,000, divided into 5 infantry regiments. There is in addition an enlisted frontier force, the Liberian National Guard, of 93 officers and 2,200 men. An American Military Mission to train these forces arrived in Sept. 1951.

The small naval service or coastguard comprises 2 motor gunboats, 2 small patrol boats, and a few landing craft for transport and general utility. Personnel about 150 officers and men.

On 31 March 1942 an agreement was signed between the USA and Liberia by which the US were given the right to construct, control, operate and defend airports in Liberia for the duration of the war. On 8 June 1943 a further mutual aid agreement was concluded with the US, which extended lend-lease aid to Liberia for the purpose of defence and enabled it to increase its Armed Forces.

AGRICULTURE. The soil is productive, but due to excessive rainfall (from 160 to 180 in. per year), there are large swamp areas. Rice, cassava, coffee, citrus and sugar-cane are cultivated. Rice production is inadequate for local needs, but strenuous efforts are being made to increase production by the substitution of swamp rice for hill rice cultivation. Sugar-cane is grown for manufacture of locally consumed rum. Coffee production is considerable (exports, 1972, 12.3m. lb.).

FORESTRY. Many forest products are gathered for export, of which palm-kernels (exports, 1972, 9.9m. lb.) is the most important. The Firestone Plantation Co. have large rubber plantations, employing about 40,000 men. Their concession comprises about 1m. acres and expires in the year 2025. About 100,000 acres have been planted. Independent producers have a further 65,000 acres planted.

The Liberian Producing Marketing Corporation (LPMC) operates an oil mill in Monrovia. It processes most of the palm kernels.

The B. F. Goodrich Co. was, on 9 July 1954, granted an 80-year concession to produce rubber; part of the 12,300 acres planted came into production in 1963. Rubber exports, in 1972, 182.9m. lb.

There are timber concessions now operating and they are expanding rapidly.

MINING. Mineral resources have not been completely surveyed. However, the Liberia Mining Co. at Bomi Hills, the National Iron Ore Co. near the Mano River, the Liberian American-Swedish Mineral Co. in the Nimba Mountains and the Bong Mining Co. (DELMCO) at Bong Mountain Range are exploiting their iron-ore concession areas. Iron ore exports amounted to 22.6m. long tons in 1972. Gold and diamonds are found on a small scale.

A pelletizing and washing plant was inaugurated in 1968 for the American-Swedish Minerals Co. near the port of Buchanan. Another pelletizing and washing plant was inaugurated in 1971 for the Bong Mining Co.

INDUSTRY. There are a number of small factories (brick and tile, soap, nails, mattresses, shoes, plastics, paint, oxygen, acetylene, tyre retreading, a brewery, soft drinks, cement, matches, candy and biscuits).

COMMERCE. Foreign trade for 5 calendar years was as follows (in US$1m.):

	1968	1969	1970	1971	1972
Imports	108.5	114.7	149.7	162.4	178.7
Exports	169.0	195.9	213.7	224.0	244.4

The principal exports in 1972 were: Rubber, US$29m.; iron ore, and concentrates, US$182.1m. The principal imports in 1972 were machinery and transport equipment (US$63.4m.) and manufactured goods (US$40.6m.). Main suppliers in 1972 were: USA (US$54.2m.), West Germany (US$20.7m.), UK (US$16.4m.), Japan (US$13.9m.).

According to British Board of Trade returns, the value of the trade between UK and Liberia was as follows (in £1,000 sterling):

	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Exports to UK	8,693	11,972	6,113	7,373	7,381
Exports and re-exports from UK	13,874	13,628	5,772	22,382	17,625

The figures for exports from the UK include the value of shipping transferred to the Liberian flag; the genuine exports are considerably lower.

Liberia was placed in the American account area in 1952.

SHIPPING. In 1972, 655 main-line ships entered Monrovia.

The Liberian merchant navy, in 1972, consisted of 2,275 ships of 43,911,283 GRT. The Liberian Government requires only a modest registration fee and an almost nominal annual charge and maintains no control over the operation of ships flying the Liberian flag.

Constructed under the auspices of the USA Government under lend-lease terms, the port of Monrovia, a free port, was opened on 26 July 1948.

A modern port for the shipment of iron-ore from the mines at Nimba has been built at Lower Buchanan, capable of accommodating vessels up to 75,000 tons.

The river St Paul is navigable for a distance of 8 miles from its mouth for small craft of shallow draught. The Cavalla River is navigable for 8 miles.

RAILWAY. A railway (for freight only) was built in 1951, connecting Monrovia with the Bomi Hills iron-ore mines about 43 miles distant; this has been extended to the National Iron Ore Co. area by 49 miles. A line from Nimba to Lower Buchanan (165 miles) was completed in 1963 and another line from Bong to Monrovia (47 miles) was completed in 1965.

ROADS. There are over 4,098 miles of state roads, suitable for motor traffic, as well as roads on private plantations. The principal highway connects Monrovia with the road system of Guinea, with branches leading into the Eastern and Western areas of Liberia. The latter branch reaches the Sierra Leone border and joins the Sierra Leone road system. A bridge over the St Paul River carries road and rail traffic to the iron-ore mines at Bomi Hills.

In the interior, communication is maintained by tracks, all goods being carried by native porters, but secondary roads are being constructed by native chiefs with state assistance, and transportation by vehicle is becoming increasingly common. A 5-year road improvement plan is in operation until 1977.

AVIATION. The airport for Liberia is Roberts Airport (30 miles from Monrovia). The James Spriggs Payne Airfield, 5 miles from Monrovia, can be used by light aircraft and mini jumbo jets. Air services are maintained by PANAM, Ghana Airways, Nigeria Airways, UTA, Middle East Airlines, Air Mali, Air Afrique, SAS, KLM, Swissair, Liberian National Airlines, British Caledonian and Air Guinée.

POST. There is cable communication (French) with Europe and America via Dakar, and a wireless station is maintained by the Government at Monrovia. There is a telephone service (3,600 telephones, 1972), in Monrovia, which is gradually being extended over the whole country.

There are wireless stations at Monrovia, Bassa, Harper, Kolahun, Cape Mount and Sinoe. The wireless stations at Harbel and Gedetarbo, near Cape Palmas, have since 1928 been operated as a public utility by the US-Liberia Radio Corporation, a subsidiary of Firestone Plantations Co.

A commercial broadcasting station opened in Dec. 1959 and a television service on 1 Jan. 1964.

BANKING. The Bank of Monrovia, Inc., previously owned by the Firestone Plantation Co., was taken over by the First National City Bank of New York on 15 Sept. 1955.

The Bank of Liberia, Inc., was founded on 28 July 1955. An Italian bank, Tradevco, started business in 1955. The International Trust Co. of Liberia opened a commercial banking department at the end of 1960. The Commercial Bank of Liberia and a branch of the Chase Manhattan Bank opened in 1961. The Union National Bank (Liberia) Inc., opened in 1962.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. Weights and measures are the same as in Great Britain and US.

LIBYAN ARAB REPUBLIC

Al-Jumhuriya al-Arabia allibya

HISTORY. Tripoli fell under Turkish domination in the 16th century, and though in 1711 the Arab population secured some measure of independence, the country was in 1835 proclaimed a Turkish vilayet. In Sept. 1911 Italy occupied Tripoli and on 19 Oct. 1912, by the Treaty of Ouchy, Turkey recognized the sovereignty of Italy in Tripoli.

After the expulsion of the Germans and Italians in 1942 and 1943, Tripolitania and Cyrenaica were placed under British, and the Fezzan under French, military administration. Britain recognized the Amir Mohammed Idris Al-Senussi as Amir of Cyrenaica in June 1949.

Libya became an independent, sovereign, federal kingdom under the Amir of Cyrenaica, Mohammed Idris Al-Senussi, as King of the United Kingdom of Libya, on 24 Dec. 1951, when the British Residents in Tripolitania and Cyrenaica and the French Resident in the Fezzan transferred their remaining powers to the federal government of Libya, in pursuance of decisions passed by the United Nations in 1949 and 1950. The King is married to his cousin Fatima and to Aliyah Lamlun. In Nov. 1956 the King announced the appointment of HRH Prince Al Hassan Rida as Crown Prince unless he himself should have an heir.

On 1 Sept. 1969 King Idris was deposed by a group of army officers, and now lives in exile in Egypt. Twelve of the group of officers formed the Revolutionary Command Council which rules the country with the assistance of a, mainly, civilian cabinet. One member died in Aug. 1972 and has not been replaced.

The Confederation of Arab Republics, comprising Libya, Egypt and Syria was created in 1971. Libya and Egypt announced in Aug. 1972 their intention of complete union of their two countries by 1 Sept. 1973

A decision to bring about political union between Libya and Egypt by 1 Sept. 1973 was announced on 2 Aug. 1972. The formation of a unified State was announced in Aug. 1973 and machinery to implement the union was established.

A proposed merger between Tunisia and Libya was announced on 12 Jan. 1974.

National flag: Red, white, black (horizontal) with Quraish eagle in gold.

CONSTITUTION. Until 1963 Libya was a federal state, each of the 3 provinces, Tripolitania, Cyrenaica and Fezzan, being administered by a governor assisted by an executive and legislative council. In April 1963, however, comprehensive unity was proclaimed and the federal system (together with the governors and the executive and legislative councils) abolished. The country is divided into 10 divisions, each administered by a commissioner (muhafidh).

Arabic is the official language. Tripoli is the capital.

Chairman of the Revolutionary Command Council: Col. Muammar al-Qadhafi.

AREA AND POPULATION. The area is estimated at 1,759,540 sq. km (679,358 sq. miles). The population, according to the census of 1964, was 1,564,364. Estimate, 1973, 2m.

According to an arrangement with France (12 Sept. 1919), the western frontier extends in a curve from west of Ghadames to south of Tummo, including Ghat. According to the agreement with France of 7 Jan. 1935, the southern frontier runs along a line between Tummo and a cross-point indicated by 24° E. long.

from Greenwich and 18° 45' N. lat. Further frontier agreements with France were signed on 10 Aug. 1955 and 26 Dec. 1956. In 1926 Egypt ceded the oasis of Jarabub to Italy, in exchange for a rectification of the frontier near Sollum. The eastern boundary follows in general the 25° parallel E. long. (See map in THE STATESMAN'S YEAR-BOOK, 1952.)

The country is administratively divided into the following 10 divisions (with population in brackets): Tripoli (376,177), Benghazi (279,665), Sebha 46,700), Western Mountain (181,334), Zawia (189,032), Homs (137,205), Misurata (145,468), Derna (84,001), Green Mountain (87,803), Ubari (32,014).

The 2 most important towns are Tripoli (245,000 inhabitants) and Benghazi (140,000).

RELIGION. Islam is declared the State religion, but the right of others to practise their religions is provided for.

EDUCATION. Pupils spend 6 years in elementary schools, 3 in primary and 3 in secondary. In 1972-73 there were 536,366 pupils in government and private schools. The Libyan University had, in 1961, 8,220 undergraduates studying arts and teaching, commerce and economics, engineering and science. In 1960 Libyan university students abroad numbered 279 (135 in Egypt, 54 in the UK, 26 in USA, 24 in Italy, 17 in Turkey, the remainder in western Europe).

There are several schools, mainly in Tripoli, providing British, French, Italian, American and Dutch curricula, mainly on elementary and intermediate levels and chiefly for the non-Libyan communities.

JUSTICE. The Civil, Commercial and Criminal codes are based mainly on the Egyptian model. Matters of personal status of family or succession matters affecting Moslems are dealt with in special courts according to the Moslem law. All other matters, civil, commercial and criminal, are tried in the ordinary courts, which have jurisdiction over everyone.

There are civil and penal courts in Tripoli and Benghazi, with subsidiary courts at Misurata and Derna; courts of assize in Tripoli and Benghazi, and courts of appeal in Tripoli and Benghazi.

FINANCE. Currency. The Libyan dinar, which is equivalent to £1.35 sterling, is divided into 1,000 dirhams.

Budget. The budget for the fiscal year ending 31 March 1972 balanced at LD632.3m. Estimated revenue included LD560m. from petroleum.

DEFENCE. Army. The Army, of 20,000 men, is organized in 1 armoured, 1 infantry, and 2 mechanized brigades, 1 commando and 5 artillery battalions.

Navy. A fast frigate was completed by Vosper-Thornycroft in 1973. Three fast patrol boats of the gas-turbine Vosper MTB type and a logistic support ship (Vosper-Thornycroft) were completed in Britain in 1968-69. Four patrol boats (Brooke Marine) were completed in Britain in 1969-70. A corvette was built in Britain in 1965-66. Two inshore minesweepers were acquired from Britain in 1963. There are also a maintenance repair craft purchased from Britain in 1966 and 9 coastguard patrol boats. Personnel in 1973 totalled 2,000 officers and ratings, including coastguard.

Air Force. The creation of an Air Force began in 1959. In 1973, delivery continued of a total of 110 Mirage III/5 combat aircraft and trainers, to supplement earlier equipment of 7 F-5A and 2 F-5B supersonic combat and training aircraft, 3 T-33A jet trainers, 8 C-130E Hercules and 9 C-47 transports, and 9 Super Frelon and 18 Bell 47, Alouette II/III and JetRanger helicopters. A Dassault Falcon equipped with Mirage avionics and controls is used for operational training of combat pilots. Other new equipment includes 20 Magister jet basic trainers.

PLANNING. A new development plan was published in 1973 which envisages expenditure of LD1,965m. in the period from April 1973 to Dec. 1975.

AGRICULTURE. Tripolitania has 3 zones from the coast inland—the Mediterranean, the sub-desert and the desert. The first, which covers an area of about 17,231 sq. miles, is the only one properly suited for agriculture, and may be further subdivided into: (1) the oases along the coast, the richest in North Africa, in which thrive the date palm, the olive, the orange, the peanut and the potato; (2) the steppe district, suitable for cereals (barley and wheat) and pasture; it has olive, almond, vine, orange and mulberry trees and ricinus plants; (3) the dunes, which are being gradually afforested with acacia, robinia, poplar and pine; (4) the Jebel (the mountain district, Tarhuna, Garian, Nalut-Yefren), in which thrive the olive, the fig, the vine and other fruit trees, and which on the east slopes down to the sea with the fertile hills of Msellata. Of some 25m. acres of productive land in Tripolitania, nearly 20m. are used for grazing and about 1m. for static farming. The sub-desert zone produces the alfa plant. The desert zone and the Fezzan contain some fertile oases, such as those of Ghadames, Ghat, Socna, Sebha, Brak.

Cyrenaica has about 10m. acres of potentially productive land, most of which, however, is suitable only for grazing. Certain areas, chief of which is the plateau known as the Barce Plain (about 1,000 ft above sea-level), are suitable for dry farming; in addition, grapes, olives and dates are grown. With improved irrigation, production, particularly of vegetables, could be increased, but stock raising and dry farming will remain of primary importance. About 143,000 acres are used for settled farming; about 272,000 acres are covered by natural forests. The Agricultural Development Authority plans to reclaim 6,000 hectares each year for agriculture.

In the Fezzan there are about 6,700 acres of irrigated gardens and about 297,000 acres are planted with date palms.

A 10-year agricultural plan totalling over LD700m. was announced in May 1973. The plan aims to reclaim and develop land in the Gefara plain, the Jebel Akhdar, the Fezzan and the Kufra/Sarir areas. Future agricultural activity will concentrate on building up local production of cereals, dairy farming, sheep rearing, poultry farming and the cultivation of fruits and vegetables.

The average annual cereal production of the whole of Libya is about 110,000 tons. Olive trees number about 3.4m. and productive date-palm trees about 3m. Livestock: 931,000 sheep, 1,236,000 goats, 93,500 camels.

INDUSTRY. Among the traditional industries of Tripolitania and Cyrenaica are sponge fishing, tunny fishing, tobacco growing and processing, dyeing and weaving of local wool and imported cotton yarn, and olive oil. Tripolitania also produces bricks, salt, leather and esparto grass for paper-making. Home industries of both territories include the making of matting, carpets, leather articles and fabrics embroidered with gold and silver. The government has embarked on a ambitious programme of industrial development aimed at the local manufacture of building materials (steel and aluminium pipes and fittings, electric cables, cement, bricks, glass, etc.), foodstuffs (dairy products, flour, tinned fruits and vegetables, dates, fish processing and canning, etc.), textiles and footwear (ready-made clothing, woollen and cotton cloth, blankets, leather footwear etc.) and development of mineral desposits (iron ore, phosphates, mineral salts). Private sector industrialization is encouraged by government loans and subsidies.

The preliminary results of the first industrial census (1965) show that there are 622 manufacturing establishments with 5 or more employees, employing a total of 11,106 workers; production in 1964 exceeded £24m. Fifteen establishments employed 100 or more persons and 22 between 50 and 99 persons. On 21 Sept. 1969 a decree laid down that all business concerns should be 100% Libyan-owned, but oil companies and banks were excluded.

OIL. In 1968, 41 companies were working concession areas; the most important discoveries so far made are: (i) Zeltan, about 200 miles south from Benghazi and 100 miles from the nearest point on the coast; discovered by Esso (the local subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey) in April 1959.

Exports from this field began at the end of 1961, the oil being piped to the port of Marsa Bregha. (ii) Dahra, roughly midway between Tripoli and Benghazi and about 90 miles from the coast, discovered in 1958-59; a pipeline to Ras El Sidr was completed in 1962. (iii) Beida, about 140 miles from the coast and just east of the Tripolitanian/Cyrenaican border, discovered by Caltex in 1959. (iv) Other discoveries, either non-commercial or not yet evaluated, have been made by Mobiloil of Canada, Shell, Gulf, CPTL. British Petroleum has also discovered oil in commercial quantities in southern Cyrenaica some 400 miles from the coast, connected to the Tobruk terminal by pipeline. Occidental Oil Company have made 2 high-yield strikes and are planning the construction of a pipeline and terminal at Zueitina.

In 1972 production averaged 2.2m. bbls per day with total annual production of 949m. bbls. On 7 Dec. 1971 the British Petroleum Exploration (Libya) Company was nationalized. The rights and concessions were listed in the Arabian Gulf Exploration Company. The Oasis and Occidental companies agreed in Aug. 1973 to 51% participation by the Libyan National Oil Company in their rights and operations. A decree of 1 Sept 1973 nationalized 51% of the rights and assets of the following companies: Mobil, Exxon, Amoco and Shell. On 11 Feb. 1974 these companies were totally nationalized.

MINING. The production of cement is 300,000 tons per annum, though the existing 2 cement plants are being expanded to give a future combined production of 740,000 tons per annum. Studies are now being carried out to build a third cement factory in eastern Libya. A limestone factory is also to be built shortly in Benghazi.

POWER. Power output capacity in 1972 was 190 mw and will be increased to 581 mw by the end of 1975.

COMMERCE. Total imports into Libya in 1971 were valued at LD250m. (c.i.f.) and exports at LD957m. (f.o.b.), mostly crude oil.

Total trade between Libya and UK (British Board of Trade returns, in £1,000 sterling):

	1969	1970	1971	1972	1973
Imports to UK	151,557	166,876	191,603	144,236	164,515
Exports and re-exports from UK	43,150	24,346	30,992	46,659	61,057

ROADS. Good motor roads connect Tripoli through Zuara with Tunis, and through Homs and Misurata with Benghazi and thence with Tobruk and Alexandria. Other roads go south and south-west from Tripoli to Tiagura, Garian, Yefren, Nalut and Ghadames. A road connects Sebha in the south with the main coastal road. An ambitious road building programme is being implemented and a road will eventually link Libya with Chad and Niger through Sebha. A further main road is being built to link Kufra, a major agricultural centre in the south-eastern part of Libya with the coastal road.

Surface communication between Benghazi and Tripoli is by frequent bus service, and there are also bus services between Benghazi and Alexandria, and between Tripoli, Tunis and Algiers.

AVIATION. Benghazi and Tripoli are both served by international airlines, linking them with each other and Athens, Cairo, Rome, Malta, Tunis, Frankfurt, Paris, Amsterdam, Algiers, Khartoum, Lagos and London. British Caledonian has 2 flights weekly between Tripoli and London.

A national airline, the Libyan Arab Airlines (LAA), was inaugurated on 30 Sept. 1965. Apart from internal flights LAA operate to Athens, London, Rome, Beirut, Cairo, Paris, Malta, Algiers, Khartoum and Tunis.

POST. Tripoli is connected by telegraph cable with Malta and by microwave link with Bengardane (Tunis). There are overseas wireless-telegraph stations at Benghazi and Tripoli, and radio-telephone services connect Libya with the UK and most countries of western Europe. In 1971 some 41,495 telephones were in use.

BANKING. A National Bank of Libya was established in 1955; it was renamed the Central Bank of Libya in 1972. On 31 Dec. 1972, its assets amounted to LD1,055.8m. and currency in circulation to LD151,586. All foreign banks were nationalized by Dec. 1970. In 1972 the Libyan Government set up the Libyan Arab Foreign Bank whose function is overseas investment and to participate in multinational banking corporations. The National Agricultural Bank, which has been set up to give loans and subsidies to farmers to develop their land and to assist them in marketing their crops, has offices in Tripoli, Benghazi, Sebha and other agricultural centres. The National Industrial and Real Estate Bank, which has been established to give loans to house buyers and to give short and medium loans to private sector industrial ventures, also has offices in Tripoli and Benghazi.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. Although the metric system has been officially adopted and is obligatory for all contracts, the following weights and measures are still used: oke = 1.282 kg; kantar = 51.28 kg; draa = 46 cm; handaza = 68 cm.

LIECHTENSTEIN

HISTORY. The Principality of Liechtenstein, situated between the Austrian province of Vorarlberg and the Swiss cantons of St Gallen and Graubünden, is a sovereign state whose history dates back to 3 May 1342, when Count Hartmann I became ruler of the county of Vaduz. Additions were later made to the count's domains, and by 1434 the territory reached its present boundaries. It consists of the two former counties of Schellenberg and Vaduz (until 1806 immediate fiefs of the Roman Empire). The former in 1699 and the latter in 1712 came into the possession of the house of Liechtenstein and, by diploma of 23 Jan. 1719, granted by the Emperor Charles VI, the two counties were constituted as the Principality of Liechtenstein.

REIGNING PRINCE. Francis Joseph II, born 16 Aug. 1906; succeeded his great uncle, 25 July 1938; married on 7 March 1943 to Countess Gina von Wilczek; there are 4 sons, Princes Hans Adam (heir apparent, born 14 Feb. 1945; married on 30 July 1967 to Countess Marie Kinsky), Philip Erasmus (married on 11 Sept. 1971 to Isabelle de l'Arbre de Malander), Nikolaus Ferdinand and Franz Josef Wenzel, and one daughter, Princess Nora Elisabeth. The monarchy is hereditary in the male line.

The capital and seat of government is Vaduz (population, 1972, 4,020), and there are 10 more villages all connected by modern roads. Since Feb. 1921 Liechtenstein has had the Swiss currency, and since 29 March 1923 has been united with Switzerland in a customs union. Switzerland has also since 1919 represented the Principality diplomatically.

At the elections for the Diet, on 3 Feb. 1974, the Progressive Citizens' Party obtained 8 seats, the opposition Patriotic Union Party, 7 seats.

Head of Government: Dr Walter Kieber.

Liechtenstein has during the past 30 years changed from a predominantly agricultural country to a highly industrialized country. The farming population has gone down from 70% in 1930 to only 3% in 1971. The rapid change-over has led to the immigration of foreign workers (Austrians, Germans, Italians, Spaniards). LUXEMBOURG

Grand-Duché de Luxembourg

REIGNING GRAND DUKE. Jean, born 5 Jan. 1921, son of Grand Duchess Charlotte and the late Prince Felix of Bourbon-Parma; succeeded 12 Nov. 1964 on the abdication of his mother; married to Princess Joséphine-Charlotte of Belgium, 9 April 1953. Offspring: Princess Marie Astrid, born 17 Feb. 1954; Prince Henri, heir apparent, born 16 April 1955; Prince Jean and Princess Margareta, born 15 May 1957; Prince Guillaume, born 1 May 1963.

The civil list is fixed at 300,000 gold francs per annum, to be reconsidered at the beginning of each reign.

On 28 Sept. 1919 a referendum was taken in Luxembourg to decide on the political and economic future of the country. The voting resulted as follows: For the reigning Grand Duchess, 66,811; for the continuance of the Nassau-Braganza dynasty under another Grand Duchess, 1,286; for another dynasty, 889; for a republic, 16,885; for an economic union with France, 60,133; for an economic union with Belgium, 22,242. But France refused in favour of Belgium, and on 22 Dec. 1921 the Chamber of the Grand Duchy passed a Bill for the economic union between Belgium and Luxembourg. The agreement, which is for 50 years, provides for the disappearance of the customs barrier between the two countries and the use of Belgian, in addition to Luxembourg, currency as legal tender in the Grand Duchy. It came into force on 1 May 1922.

The Grand Duchy was under German occupation from 10 May 1940 to 10 Sept. 1944. The Grand Duchess Charlotte and the Government carried on an independent administration in London. Civil government was restored in Oct. 1944.

The constitution of 17 Oct. 1868 was revised in 1919, 1948 and 1956. The revision of 1948 has abolished the 'perpetually neutral' status of the country and introduced the concepts of right to work, social security, health services, freedom of trade and industry, and recognition of trade unions. The revision of 1956 provides for the devolution of executive, legislative and judicial powers to international institutions.

The national language is Luxemburgish; French, German and English are widely used.

The country forms 4 electoral districts. An elector must be a citizen (male or female) of Luxembourg and have completed 18 years of age; to be eligible for election the citizen must have completed 21 years of age.

The Council of State is composed of 21 members chosen for life by the sovereign, who also chooses a president from among them each year.

MADAGASCAR

République Malgache—Republika Malagasy

HISTORY. Madagascar was discovered by the Portuguese, Diego Diaz, in 1500. On the return of Diaz to Portugal the King concluded that the island must be Madagascar, about which he had read in Marco Polo's 'Voyages'. Polo, however, had not been there, but believing his Arab informants, ascribed to an island what was really the kingdom of Mogadisho, on the east coast of Africa. Mispronouncing and mis-spelling the name, he coined the word Madagascar.

The last native sovereign in Madagascar, Queen Ranaivalona III (born 1845, died 1917), succeeded in 1883. The French claimed a portion of the north-west coast as having been transferred to them by local chiefs, and hostilities were carried on in 1883-85 against the Merina, who refused to recognize the cession. In 1885 peace was made, Diégo-Suarez having been surrendered to France. A French expedition was dispatched in May 1895 to enforce the claims of France and on 1 Oct. the Queen accepted the protectorate. By a law promulgated 6 Aug. 1896 the island and its dependencies were declared a French colony.

On 14 Oct. 1958 Madagascar was proclaimed a republic. The republic was admitted to the UN on 21 Sept. 1960.

AREA AND POPULATION. Madagascar is situated off the south-east coast of Africa, from which it is separated by the Moçambique Channel, the least distance between island and continent being 250 miles; its length is 980 miles; greatest breadth, 360 miles. The area is 594,180 sq. km (229,233 sq. miles). On 1 Jan. 1972 the population was 7.7m. (48% under 18 years).

On 1 Jan. 1971 there were 105,000 foreigners resident on the island. These were mainly French but Indians and Chinese carry on small retail trade.

Population of the provinces (1 Jan. 1971): Diégo-Suarez, 621,549; Fianarantsoa, 1,861,492; Majunga, 918,263; Tamatave, 1,223,377; Tananarive, 1.86m.; Tuléar, 1,168,872.

The populations of the chief towns were in 1971, the capital Tananarive, 382,000; Tamatave, 59,100; Majunga 57,500; Fianarantsoa, 55,500; Diégo-Suarez, 48,000; Tuléar, 34,000.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT. The constitution of the republic was promulgated on 29 April 1959 and amended in June 1960. It provided for a national assembly of 107 and a senate of 52 members. The government consisted of a president and 38 ministers. On 18 May 1972 the government was dissolved. A decree issued later gave Gen. Ramanantsoa supreme power for up to 5 years. A provisional Constitutional law was issued on 8 Oct. 1972.

Chief of Government, Minister of Defence and Plan: Maj.-Gen. Gabriel Ramanantsoa.

The republic is divided into the 6 provinces of Fianarantsoa, Majunga, Tamatave, Diégo-Suarez, Tuléar and Tananarive. Each province is under the supervision of a field officer. The provinces are subdivided into prefectures, sub-prefectures, arrondissements and cantons. Each canton comprises a number of fokontany.

REPUBLIC OF MALDIVES

The Republic of Maldives, 400 miles to the south-west of Sri Lanka, consists of some 2,000 low-lying coral islands (only 220 inhabited), grouped into 12 clearly defined clusters of atolls but divided into 19 for administrative purposes. Area 115 sq. miles (298 sq. km). Population (census 1971), 118,818. Capital Malé (15,000 inhabitants). The people are Moslems, and Islam is reflected in the constitution and the judicial system. The islands are covered with coconut palms and yield millet and fruit as well as coconut produce.

The official language is Divehi, which is akin to Elu or old Sinhalese.

President: Amir Ibrahim Nasir.

Prime Minister: Ahamed Zaki.

British Ambassador: H. Smedley, CMG, MBE (resides in Colombo).

The islands were under British protection from 1887 to mid-1965. They now enjoy complete independence under the agreement signed in Colombo on 26 July 1965. The Republic of Maldives became a republic on 11 Nov. 1968. The President is elected every 4 years by universal adult suffrage and is assisted by a cabinet of his own choice. The cabinet is responsible to the Majlis (House of Representatives) which consists of 54 members elected every 5 years.

The 1965 agreement confirmed the agreement of 1956, which allowed the British Government staging and communications facilities on Gan island and part of Hittadu island in Addu atoll, the southernmost of the group. There is another airstrip at Hulele in the Malé atoll, some 300 miles from Gan.

In 1960 the British Government made a gift of £100,000 to the Maldivian Government and a further £750,000 to be spent over a period of 5 or more years for development projects in the Republic. These projects have included the establishment of a hospital, a small inter-atoll dispensary ship, expansion of the fishing industry and shipping. In 1969 a further sum of £500,000 was made available for expenditure on additional development projects including the widening of Malé harbour.

The Maldivian economy is based on the fishing industry. Dried bonito ('Maldivian fish') is the main export commodity. As a beginning to the tourist industry 2 small islands in the Malé atoll were converted to holiday centres in 1973. Exports were Rs 25.52m. and imports Rs 20.54m. in 1971. There is no direct taxation.

MEXICO

Estados Unidos Mexicanos

HISTORY. Mexico's history falls into four epochs: the era of the Indian empires (before 1521), the Spanish colonial phase (1521–1810), the period of national formation (1810–1910), which includes the war of independence (1810–21) and the long presidency of Porfirio Díaz (1876–80, 1884–1911), and the present period which began with the social revolution of 1910–21 and is regarded by Mexicans as the period of social and national consolidation.
